More Than 5,000 Try to Crowd Into East Side Hall—Cries Drown the Speakers.

CHILDREN ARE TRAMPLED

HUGE PARADE IS PLANNED

Women and Children Threaten to March to the Morgan Offices and in Fifth Avenue.

Five thousand women of the east side—some estimates ran as high as 10,000—fought like mad people to get into Forward Hall, down on East Broadway, last night, where a meeting had been called to protest against the high prices of food. The thousand that got into the hall fought for elbow room to shout denunciations of "capitalism," which they blamed for their having so little to eat in the greatest, the richest city in the world. There were a few men in the shrieking, yelling crowd.

It was not a reasoning crowd. The hall was packed soon after 7 o'clock, and it was after 9 o'clock before a speaker could make himself heard. With the hall already filled almost to suffocation, there was another rush of women, many of them mothers with children, as the iron gates, which had been closed, went down under the human weight against them. For two hours more it was bedlam let loose. Speaker after speaker tried to sooth the throng, but it was only after voices were gone or lungs were weary that there was semblance of order.

The meeting ended with the adoption of plans for a demonstration of 500,000 women and children, who were to be organized to march all day in Wall Street, to gather in front of the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co., and to march at night through Fifth Avenue. A delegaton was also appointed to demand of the Board of Estimate the immediate appropriation of $1,000,000 to purchase food for distribution at cost. Appeals were sent to President Wilson, to Governor Whitman, and to Mayor Mitchel.

The meeting was one of the wildest seen in New York in many years. Plans were made soon after the demonstration at the City Hall. Word of this spread over the east side quickly, and by dark the crowds began to gather in Rutgers Square. As the throngs grew, self-constituted leaders, most of whom were Socialists, began to try to maintain order in the hall, which filled quickly. The speeches, or attempted speeches, were in Yiddish.

Louis Schaffer of the National Aid League in a much-interrupted address urged the people to organize and begged them to do no violence. Mrs. Sarah Erdman gave the same advice. William Karlin urged immediate organization. From time to time some speaker would yell that the people should "throw kerosene," meaning to ruin the stocks of grocers whose prices were thought too high.

Women and Children in Jam.

It was just after Karlin had spoken that the gates gave way and part of the crowd from outside swept in. Seats were overturned or broken. Women were caught in the jam and several children were trampled. Clothes were torn and hats lost in the rush.

Mrs. Ida Harris, who had led the City Hall demonstration, tried to speak, but those who had taken charge of the meeting refused to let her be heard. She had the women of the meeting with her, and they refused to listen to any one else. Mrs. Harris tore herself loose from those who tried to hold her and ran to the front of the platform. Others, men and women, pulled her back, and she fought them. Her husband came up the fire escape and tried to quiet her, but the shouts for her kept up. She was still trying to speak when Jacob Panken, a lawyer and eloquent, got the ear of the crowd and quieted them somewhat.

Panken again urged the crowd to do no violence. Uproar broke loose again as Mrs. Harris attempted to speak. There was a cry for the reserves, but some of the Socialists thought the presence of policemen might cause a riot, and the police were not sent for.

Panken got the audience with him again and told them that to destroy food would mean that the supply would be that much less. He advised the people of the east side to organize, and it was he who suggested the demonstration of 500,000 women and children. He told them to fight, but to fight in an orderly manner. He pledged the support of the Hebrew trades unions for funds, and said he would head the lawyers necessary to direct the movement. Panken also said the capitalists were to blame for the high cost of food because they were gathering it to be sent to Europe.

He said many tons of food were being held by J. P. Morgan & Co. for shipment to Europe, while there were no ships to carry it, and men, women, and children of the east side were hungry. He suggested the demonstration in front of the Morgan offices. He had words of praise for the Amercan press; said that their interest in the food demonstration was shown by the fact that the City Hall demonstration had crowded the war off the front page in the afternoon papers.

Appeal to the President.

He presented the following appeal to President Wilson which was carried with a shout:

Berlin Hears 1,500 Died In Archangel Explosion

BERLIN, Feb. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The Overseas News Agency publishes this:

"A Copenhagen telegram says that travelers returning from Russia declare that the last great explosion at Archangel was much more considerable than was made known in dispatches from Russia. The explosion took place at the naval station while ammunition was being unloaded from a steamer. Not a trace of this steamer remained. The explosion killed or wounded every one within a radius of one kilometer, 1,500 persons being killed and 3,000 wounded. The damage amounts to 50,000,000 rubles."

It was reported Feb. 4 that an icebreaker at Archangel had blown up and thirty persons were killed.

STATE SEIZES GAME ON PHIPPS ESTATE

450 Live Ducks Alleged to Have Been Illegally Trapped at Wantagh, L. I.

Conservation Commission Charges the Fowl Were Sold to Dealers in New York.

Officials of the State Conservation Commission yesterday raided the country estate and game preserve at Wantagh, L. I., of Henry Carnegie Phipps, son of Henry Phipps, steel magnate, son-in-law of Ogden Mills, and prominent in the society of New York, London, Pittsburgh, and Palm Beach, and carried off 430 live wild ducks, alleged to have been trapped in violation of the law, besides twenty-five dead ducks, said to have been shot out of season. As a result Mr. Phipps faces a possible fine of $15,315 or a civil suit by the commission.

Witnesses were examined yesterday afternoon by Justice of the Peace Frank T. Neu of Freeport in a "court of inquisition" on what was entitled "the case of the People versus Henry C. Phipps." No warrants have been sworn out as yet and no proceedings taken beyond the inquiry, but officials of the commission, though unwilling to indicate their course, say they have positive information that Mr. Phipps was the principal in a systematic trapping of wild ducks which has been going on for some time, and that he has been selling ducks so trapped to a game dealer in New York.

Mr. Phipps holds a license to breed domesticated black and mallard duck, and to sell them if tagged in the presence of an officer of the commission. No one has a right under New York laws to trap wild duck, and the season in which they may be shot runs from Oct. 15 to Jan. 10. A breeder's license does not carry with it even the right to shoot tame ducks which he rears within season. Some weeks ago information reached the commission that Mr. Phipps was trapping ducks in violation of the law, and Delmer Speenburgh, a special agent of the commission, was sent to Wantagh to investigate.

Speenburgh gained the confidence of Valentine Van Cott, caretaker of the Phipps estate, who holds a commission as special game protector of the Conservation Commission. Officials of that body said last night that, in addition to being liable for the same fines or in the same civil action as Mr. Phipps, Van Cott could also be prosecuted for malfeasance in office, an offense punishable by imprisonment. He also is liable to forfeit his bond of $500, which was provided by Mr. Phipps when Van Cott obtained his commission as protector.

Speenburgh became friendly with Van Cott, who eventually showed him the way ducks were trapped at Wantagh. A small creek runs through the Phipps estate into Great South Bay, and up this stream ducks frequently come by thousands to a small pond which is also on Mr. Phipps's property. Others fly there, and it is said that frequently several thousand are in or around it.

The duck trap used by Van Cott and his helpers, according to the commission, was placed at the inlet of the upper reaches of the creek on the inland side of this pond. It was a large cage of chicken wire 40 or 50 feet long. Corn and oats were used as a bait to lure the ducks into the funnel-shaped mouth of the cage, and when a sufficient number was inside a workman concealed in the bushes on the bank pulled a rope which dropped a wire gate that shut off egress.

Chief Protector Llewellyn Legge, with eight other protectors, yesterday made the raid on the estate. They took with them a motor truck furnished by Commissioner George D. Pratt, filled with crates in which to remove the evidence. They found from 600 to 700 of the fowl in captivity, and a laborious examination resulted in the positive identification of about two-thirds of these as wild birds that had been trapped.

The total bag of the protectors identified as wild birds that had been trapped was 442 black ducks, five pintails, and one wood duck, besides twenty-five black ducks that were found dead.

Then Deputy Attorneys General William T. Moore and John O. Bates laid information before Justice Neu, as a result of which subpoenas were issued for Van Cott and for Bert Walker, Frank Hausslar, and Lewis Schwadd, employes on the estate.

Efforts to reach Mr. Phipps last night were unavailing.

NEW BRITISH AIRPLANE TAKES 21 UP A MILE

Huge Machine Designed to Carry Six Machine Guns and 1,500 Pounds of Bombs.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Aeroplane says a newly designed giant airplane in a test trip has risen to an altitude of 7,000 feet, carrying a pilot and twenty passengers.

This is the first news that the superairplanes planned three months ago have been successful. Ever since the "big push" last year the British and French constructors have been developing larger and larger machines. Details of the most recent show that they have as high as 1,000 horse power, divided between four and sometimes two Rolls-Royce water-cooled motors. The complete equipment of these giant planes calls for four and sometimes six machine guns, at least two of which are 3-inch. They will carry more than 1,500 pounds of bombs and have a speed of between 85 and 100 miles an hour.

This is the first time that a single airplane has been reported as carrying twenty-one passengers. The giant Sikorsky airplanes, built by the Russians, have carried ten and twelve, and the super-America type of hydroaeroplane, built by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company here, have flown successfully with the same number.

THEATRE ELEVATOR DROPS; 22 INJURED

CARRIED A DOUBLE LOAD

NOT A PASSENGER ESCAPES

Police Rope Off Broadway While Ambulance Surgeons Give First Aid in Theatre.

An old-fashioned cable elevator, into which twenty-two men and women had crowded last night after witnessing a performance on the roof of Loew's New York Theatre, at Broadway and Forty-fifth Street, fell six floors to the basement of the building. Every person in the car, including the operator, Eugene Jensen, was injured, but none mortally.

The accident was attended by scenes of great excitement, as the theatre and the streets outside were thronged with people. The cries of the injured could be heard all over the building and in the street. Four ambulances were summoned from Polyclinic Hospital, and when they arrived the crowd about the building was so dense that the police reserves had a difficult time maintaining order.

The disabled elevator became tightly wedged in the pit, and it was with great difficulty that some of the passengers were taken from it. The police said that the elevator probably was crowded much over its rated capacity. The operator, Jensen, whose injuries were not serious, was arrested. He lives at 156 West 101st Street.

Among those in the elevator at the time of the accident were several persons registered at large hotels. Because of the excitement and the great crowds about the building, the police and theatre attendants had not been able to get all of the injured to the hospitals at midnight. At that time the reserves were roping off the street, Broadway, about the theatre, and were driving the crowds back.

When the accident occurred the moving picture show on the theatre roof was playing to a capacity house, and there were long lines of men and women waiting the opportunity to obtain a seat. The performance continues until 1 o'clock in the morning.

When the elevator doors were opened a big crowd which was leaving pushed toward it. According to the police, the capacity of the elevator is about ten passengers, and twice that number got past the elevator runner. Then, after some trouble, he shoved the doors shut and started the power.

The elevator car had gone only a few feet when the cable broke. The car shot with increasing speed toward the basement, the passengers screaming hysterically.

The force of the blow when the elevator reached the basement was so great that the passengers, although wedged in so tightly that they scarcely could move, were tossed about in a tangled mass.

Hundreds in the lower lobby of the theatre and in Broadway who had heard the cries attempted to fight their way to the basement of the building, and until the police arrived the attendants were able to do little to keep them back. There was also a crowd in the basement pool and billiard rooms, into which the elevator had plunged.

Twenty policemen under Captain Underhill arrived on the scene while the attendants of the theatre, with the assistance of a score of men in the excited crowd, were attempting to get the injured out of the elevator car. The lobby and basement of the theatre then was packed with the curious, and the first task of the police was to drive them off.

List of the Injured.

The injured, all of whom suffered from broken ankles or other hurts to their feet or legs, were:

ARCHER, Miss MAY, 99 Eighth Avenue.
BRINDELL, MATTHEW, 403 West 115th Street.
BRONS, Miss MARY E., 601 West 149th Street.
BUSONI, Mrs. S., 254 West Forty-fourth Street.
CRENSENZO, ATTILIO D., 201 West Forty-first Street.
CUOMO, Mr. and Mrs. FRANCIS, 108 West Forty-ninth Street.
EYSLER, JOSEPH, 2,100 Fifth Avenue.
FEINMAN, MEYER, 323 West 143d Street.
FLATHOW, RUDOLPH, 75 West Ninety-fifth Street.
GOLDBERG, LOUIS, 186 Clymer Street, Brooklyn.
MARHINES, Mrs. S. E., 12 Fourth Street, Weehawken.
MUNYON, J. A., 1,270 Broadway.
SPITZER, Mr. and Mrs. MORRIS, 521 Market Street, Philadelphia, stopping at the Martinique Hotel.
WENNER, CLARENCE H., 27 William Street.
WILLIAMS, LEWIS, 801 Madison Avenue.

The injured were carried up from the basement on the shoulders of volunteer aids, policemen, and ambulance surgeons. Mrs. Busoni suffered most. Physicians thought both of her legs were fractured. It was thought that perhaps seven or eight others had broken bones.

An official investigation of the accident by the District Attorney's office was commenced at midnight. Assistant District Attorney Frederick J. Sullivan went to the theatre in a taxicab. He questioned A. Rothschild, manager of the house, and other employes, and then went to the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station to question the imprisoned operator.

Jensen said that when he felt the elevator begin to fall he grabbed the rope with which he ordinarily started it, and held on until the ceiling of the cage had dropped down on his hands and was crushing them. Then he let go, he said, and the big cage dropped with a terrific thud.

The New York Theatre was built in 1895, and it was said last night that the elevator had been in it since that time. When the cage struck the bottom of the shaft its sides were bent inward slightly, and after the passengers had been carried out there remained evidence of their struggle in the form of torn bits of feminine apparel, high-heeled shoes, and other articles. The theatre is owned by the Klaw & Erlanger syndicate and leased to Marcus Loew.

MAY NOT CALL SENATE IN SPECIAL SESSION

To Prevent Undue Discussion, President Considers Breaking Another Precedent.

EFFECT ON INAUGURATION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—President Wilson is considering breaking another precedent of more than a hundred years' standing by not calling the customary special session of the Senate immediately at the beginning of his new term. Inauguration arrangements, already much upset by the fact that March 4 falls on a Sunday, may be further disarranged by the abandonment of the special session, which in a measure would change entirely the method and ceremonies of inaugurating the Vice President.

The President's purpose, as understood at the Capitol, is to avoid a special session of the Senate unless an extraordinary session of the whole Congress is necessary at the same time. The Senate called in special session, as is the custom, to confirm appointments of Cabinet members and others, would be powerless to legislate to any purpose alone, but there would be nothing to prevent the body from remaining in session as long as it pleased and discussing any subject it chose. The understanding at the Capitol today was that such a situation was to be avoided if possible.

Abandonment of the special session would do away with the usual ceremony of inaugurating the Vice President in the Senate Chamber in the presence of members of both Houses of Congress, the Diplomatic Corps, the Supreme Court, and other dignitaries. It would eliminate half of the official ceremony of Inauguration Day. Vice President Marshall pointed out today that under the Constitution he could take the oath of office and file notice with the Secretary of the Senate any time before March 4, and then, if he chose, take another oath at the formal ceremonies March 5.

May Take the Oath Twice.

President Wilson has not decided, so far as is known, what he will do about taking an oath of office some time before the public ceremonies of Monday, March 5. Secretary Lansing has advised him that it would be proper to take the oath Sunday, March 4, and then take it again at the public ceremony. There were some indications that the President might decide not to take any oath at all until Monday, March 5. That would leave an interval, strictly speaking, during which the country would be without a President, but there is precedent for such action.

March 4 fell on Sunday in 1821, when President Monroe entered his second term. On the advice of Chief Justice Marshall, President Monroe took no oath until the following Monday. President Taylor followed the precedent set by Monroe, when, in 1849, he delayed taking the oath of office until March 5.

There is a precedent for taking the oath prior to March 5, if President Wilson wishes to follow it. President Hayes took the oath on March 3, a Saturday, immediately after the announcement of the conclusion of the memorable contest with Tilden.

There was no announcement of President Wilson's plans at the White House today, but among Administration leaders at the Capitol it seemed to be understood that unless Mr. Wilson changed his mind there would be no special session of the Senate. Just what the President would do about taking the oath was unknown to White House officials.

Quite contrary to what has become a general opinion, no special session of the Senate is required by the Constitution for confirmation of Cabinet appointments, and, in fact, no confirmation of the Cabient is necessary if all the members remain, as appears now to be the plan. If any new members should be chosen they could receive recess appointments and be presented for confirmation later.

Status of Cabinet Members.

The special session of the Senate is in accordance only with custom of many years' standing. While the President is required to take a new oath at the beginning of a new term, his Cabinet officers, if they remain, require no new oath and no new confirmation, for such a thing as a term is unknown to their offices. The Cabinet, as such, quite contrary to widespread opinion, is not recognized by the Constitution. Its members are appointed under the broad terms providing for public officers who serve during the pleasure of the President and the statutes creating the executive departments. Therefore they require no reappointment and no new confirmation.

The news that President Wilson might abandon the special Senate session caused officialdom to gasp, until it refreshed its memory and looked up the Constitution and laws. It was found that the President was doing no more than breaking a precedent, something for which he has set a pace since coming into office.

When the situation as it affects his in-

Berlin's Fresh Warning to Us to Keep Ships Away

BERLIN, Sunday, Feb. 18, (by Wireless to Sayville, Feb. 20.)—"German newspapers point out," says the semi-official Overseas News Agency, "that for several days the British authorities have kept secret the amount of the losses of Entente merchant ships in order to make the British people believe that there is no more submarine danger. But the British public will soon be undeceived.

"As to the destruction of German submarines since Feb. 1, German competent authorities know nothing.

"It must be repeated again and again that whoever dares to penetrate the barred zones perishes in it."

The shippers of 3,300 tons of freight, chiefly provisions, which has been lying in the hold of the American Line steamship St. Louis since Feb. 3, when she was scheduled to sail for Liverpool, have received notices from the freight manager of the line stating that the owners intended to discharge the cargoes.

The notices said that this action was to be taken about Feb. 20, which was yesterday, and asked for instructions regarding the disposal of the shipments.

Although none of the cargo has been removed yet, the greater part of the crew of the St. Louis has been paid off. The crews of the three other American liners, New York, St. Paul, and Kroonland, also have been paid off and there is every indication that the vessels are to be laid up at their piers at West Twenty-second and West Twenty-first Streets, North River, for an indefinite period.

Two Theories Discussed.

Two possible explanations concerning the American Line were discussed in the underwriters' offices and at the New York Maritime Exchange yesterday. The first one was that the Administration at Washington did not wish to equip the St. Louis with guns on the ground that it might cause a German submarine to attack the liner, and precipitate war between the United States and Germany.

The second theory, which was more generally accepted, was that the Navy Department wished to have the four American liners held on this side of the Atlantic so that they could be used as auxiliary cruisers for the protection of American shipping in case of war.

It was asserted in shipping circles that the guns and ammunition which arrived last week at the navy yard in Brooklyn were intended for the arming of the four nineteen-knot American liners in case of war.

The management of the American Line has not received any word from the State Department regarding guns to be loaned by the Navy Department for the protection of the vessels on the high seas, nor have the owners had any intimation that the Government was considering taking over the four ships for naval purposes.

Held at Owners' Expense.

If the Administration had notified the American Line to hold the steamships on this side to await developments the company would have to be reimbursed for the loss through laying up its ships in port, but under the present conditions the expenses will have to be borne by the International Mercantile Marine Company, which owns the American Line.

The shippers of the cargo on the St. Louis would find some difficulty in transferring their freight to another vessel, it was said, because the British ships were all taken up by the English Government chiefly for provisions and war munitions.

One merchant, who shipped 3,000 cases of cheese on the St. Louis, will have no difficulty in disposing of his freight at a handsome profit, because cheese has risen in value 5 cents a pound since it was stowed away on the liner on Feb. 1.

P. A. S. Franklin, President of the International Mercantile Marine Company, said last night in reference to the St. Louis:

"Our position in the matter has not

U-Boats in 14 Days Sank Less Than One Per Cent. of Ships Arriving and Leaving British Ports

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The British Embassy gave to the press tonight an official statement to refute the assertion made in Berlin that the British Government was concealing the losses of allied and other shipping since the new submarine blockade went into effect on Feb. 1. According to this statement, the "campaign of ruthless murder," as it is called, has resulted in a loss of less than 1 ship for every 100 which have arrived at or left British ports between Feb. 1 and 14. The text of the statement follows:

"The German wireless press messages since the German declaration of indiscriminate submarine warfare against merchant shipping within a zone around the United Kingdom and France have been confined to advertising achievements of German submarines.

"Claims to have paralyzed the mercantile marine activity of the Allies, and more particularly that of Britain, have appeared, together with hints at a vast increase in the number of German submarines so employed.

"During the period in question the following are the figures of ships which have arrived and sailed from ports in the United Kingdom:

Total Sea Traffic, Feb. 1 to Feb. 14.

ARRIVALS.		SAILINGS.
British	4,053	British	3,928
Allied	227	Allied	225
Neutral	497	Neutral	361
Total	4,777	Total	4,514

Daily Average, Feb. 1 to Feb. 14.

ARRIVALS.		SAILINGS.
Allied	16	Allied	16
Total	341	Total	322

"It should be remembered, however, that totals of arrivals and departures do not include fishing vessels, coastwise and local coastwise traffic, nor craft of under 100 tons burden. Omitting these and comparing totals of those sunk with the totals of the arrivals and departures, it is interesting to note that the widely advertised campaign of ruthless murder on the high seas on which Germany has embarked has resulted in a loss of less than 1 ship for every 100 which have arrived at or left British ports during the two weeks from Feb. 1 to Feb. 14."

AMERICANS ON SHIP SHELLED BY U-BOAT

Members of Norwegian Collier's Crew Are Later Set Adrift and Suffer Much from Exposure.

VESSEL HAD NO WARNING

Report of Dalbeattie's Sinking Causes Concern in Washington—3 Other Small Craft Sunk.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The Norwegian collier Dalbeattie, from Glasgow to Gibraltar, was sunk by shellfire on Saturday. Two Americans were on board her. The crew took to the boats. The collier was shelled while the crew was taking to the boats, it is asserted.

The Americans on the vessel were John Guerre of Los Angeles and Frank Wood of Keene, N. H. The latter is suffering from bronchitis, aggravated by his exposure of thirteen hours in the ship's boat.

The Dalbeattie was a vessel of 1,327 tons, built in 1879 at Middlesbrough.

The Newfoundland fishing schooners Mayola, of 146 tons, and the Dorothy, of fifty-seven tons, have been sunk, according to an announcement made by Lloyd's shipping agency today. The nationality of the Dorothy was not disclosed by the agency, and some of the London newspapers described her as the American schooner of that name.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Consul Wesley Frost, at Queenstown, late this afternoon sent to the State Department a report on the sinking of the Norwegian steamer Dalbeattie, off Fastnet Light, on Saturday morning, by the shell fire of a German submarine, which continued to shell the vessel after its engines had been stopped and while members of the crew, including two Americans, were abandoning the vessel in a boat. The facts as reported by Consul Frost created a painful impression in official circles in Washington.

On their face the particulars given by Consul Frost indicate that the Dalbeattie was sunk with disregard for the safety of those on board the vessel, and that there was not only no warning but no offer of aid extended by the submarine, which attacked the vessel in heavy weather and forced the crew to undergo great sufferings before reaching a place of safety. The text of Consul Frost's telegram to the State Department reads:

Queenstown, Feb. 20.

To Secretary of State, Washington.

Norwegian steamer Dalbeattie, 819 tons, carrying coal, Glasgow to Gibraltar, sunk 11 A. M., 17th, by shell fire, 30 miles off Fastnet. Carried neither gun nor wireless. Stopped engine upon first shot, but was shelled without cause while abandoning ship. No offer of aid. Weather heavy, swells, light wind, clear sky. Boat rescued 1:30 A. M., 18th. Two native Americans on board, Frank Wood, Keene, N. H., and John Guerra, Los Angeles. Wood is in hospital at Schull with acute bronchitis, contracted prior to disaster, but aggravated by exposure. FROST.

According to this dispatch, the Americans were in the open boat, subjected to exposure, for fourteen and a half hours before they were rescued. Consul Frost's dispatch asserts that the vessel was shelled without cause while the crew was abandoning the ship and after the vessel had stopped its engines. This is contrary to international law obligations, according to the manner in which they have been interpreted by this Government.

The United States has admitted throughout the submarine controversy that it is allowable for a submarine commander to shell a vessel which tries to escape and fails to observe the order to halt. But it has been the contention of the United States Government in the

NEW SHIP RULES TO AID NEUTRALS

Inspection at Halifax Made in Deference to Their Wishes, Cecil Explains.

WARNS BLOCKADE RUNNERS

No Obstacles in Way of Agreement to Route Belgian Relief Vessels.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A new Order in Council will be issued tomorrow, covering the attitude of the British Government toward neutral ships.

Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, replying today to a question of The Associated Press as to whether he could say anything with regard to the effects of the new submarine warfare, said:

"The Western Atlantic, the North Sea, and the Mediterranean are not outlaw waters. Murder may be committed on them, but the attempt to hold up all sea traffic there has not succeeded. It is the task of the Western Powers and their allies to vindicate once again the freedom of the seas.

"So far the new submarine warfare has had very little effect on the entry of supplies to this country, but it has interfered to some extent with trade between neutral nations. For instance, as you know, most of the vessels trading from Scandinavia and Holland to and from America put into the United Kingdom by agreement in order to avoid the trouble and danger of visit and search on the high seas. Some of these vessels are reluctant to continue this practice, foolishly, we think, since the danger of putting into a United Kingdom port is not serious, and the practice is very convenient for all parties.

"The German piracy decree is not, indeed, a bluff; it is far too murderous for that. But its terror lies not in anything like wholesale destruction, the actual number of ships sunk bearing a very small proportion to those getting through unscathed, but in its very uncertainty, its erratic strokes.

"However, we are very anxious to meet the wishes of neutrals in this, as in all other matters, even when we do not think they are well founded. We accordingly are arranging in certain cases, where we are satisfied the vessel concerned is not trading in the interests of our enemies, that they shall be examined at some other British port, such as Halifax.

"This course does not mean the abandonment of the right of visit and search, which, obviously, it would be impossible for us to abandon. All it means is that we substitute one form of exercising that right for another, and, in order to make our action quite clear, we are declaring at the same time that vessels trying to run the blockade with goods to or from Germany, directly or indirectly, will expose themselves to condemnation in a prize court. We are adding that if they fail voluntarily to enter a British port for examination they cannot complain if their conduct exposes them to suspicion, and, indeed, constitutes a prima facie case that they are engaged in enemy trade.

"This is the meaning of our new proclamation. It will not, I hope and believe, make any practical difference in the present system, which will proceed exactly in the same way it has proceeded hitherto, except that certain ships will be examined at Halifax instead of at Kirkwall.

"In regard to Belgian relief ships, we will not place the slightest obstacle in the way of any agreement whereby they may be able to reach Rotterdam, even should such an arrangement mean a different route from the one they now pursue through the danger zone."

VIENNA'S ATTITUDE ASKED

Washington Believes She Will Indorse Germany's Position.

ANCONA PLEDGE IN QUESTION

CABINET WEIGHS SITUATION

But All the Officials Maintain Silence as to the President's Plans.

Austria Will Not Recede, Berlin Says Confidently

BERLIN, (via London,) Feb. 20.—While the official text of the memorandum, handed by Ambassador Penfield to the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, is not yet known here, the purpose of the note is apparently well understood.

It is authoritatively stated that the Dual Monarchy is one with Germany in its determination to carry out the unrestricted submarine campaign, in which it is already actively operating in the Mediterranean blockade zone.

It is confidently asserted that Austria-Hungary will not recede in the slightest degree from the position jointly assumed with Germany.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The impression is strong here that a break in relations with Austria-Hungary will not be long delayed, although State Department officials decline to discuss the situation in any way. Frederic C. Penfield, the Ambassador at Vienna, is under instructions to obtain a full statement of the Austro-Hungarian Government's position with respect to the German submarine blockade and its accompaniment of ruthless U-boat warfare, and as there is general expectation that the Vienna authorities will support Germany's stand, severance of relations is looked for.

An official of the Government indicated today that a break was certain unless Austria-Hungary reaffirmed her promises to the United States in the case of the steamer Ancona. A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam today told how Ambassador Penfield had delivered to the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, an aide-memoire, calling for an explicit statement of the Vienna Government's policy concerning submarine warfare. In the text of the aide-memoire, as given in the dispatch, Ambassador Penfield was represented as calling Austria's attention to its promise made in the Ancona case not to sink merchant ships without warning or without affording passengers and crews a chance to escape to places of safety.

Probably Written by Penfield.

Officials here would not say whether such a reminder had been prepared by the department and cabled to Vienna. As a rule such documents are not prepared by Governments, but are regarded merely as memoranda of diplomatic agents for the information of the Government to which they are accredited. Usually they are intended to give a Minister of Foreign Affairs something in written form to verify something that has been said to him in conversation by a diplomatic representative.

While the language of the document, as given in the dispatch from Amsterdam, was different from the usual diplomatic style, it is not doubted here that it is a substantially correct account of what was said in the actual document. This view is drawn from the fact that the aid-memoire gives correctly the official number of communications exchanged between the United States and Austria-Hungary and seems to conform to the position taken by the United States with respect to submarine warfare by Austria-Hungary.

Additional basis for the belief that Austria will back up Germany's blockade edict is found in the fact that almost simultaneously with the receipt of the official announcement of Germany's intention Austria sent out a similar communication. This has never been denied. Whether Turkey sent a like communication has not been revealed.

Tarnowski Still Unrecognized.

Another ground for assuming that the United States Government feels that Austria ultimately will join in the German submarine campaign is that neither the State Department nor the President has permitted the new Austrian Ambassador, Count Tarnowski von Tarnow, to present his credentials. So far as known, he has not been invited to visit the State Department or the White House. In the meantime Baron Erich Zwiedinek, Counselor and Chargé d'Affaires of the embassy, has continued to discharge the functions of his office.

Like Germany, Austria pledged the United States that it would respect the international rule of visit and search and would remove noncombatants to places of safety and give ample warning before making submarine attacks upon peaceful merchantmen. Thus far Austria has kept this promise, but evidently the United States wishes to have it renew its assurances in this regard or force an admission that it will disregard former promises, as has Germany.

President Wilson and his Cabinet conferred today for nearly two hours on the aspects of the foreign crisis. Whether in the event of a break with Vienna the President would act as he did in the German case and notify Congress before he dismissed all Austrian officials in the United States could not be learned.

There is an impression that the President, in any event, will not return to Congress in connection with the submarine issue until it is definitely ascertained what course Austria is to follow. This also may apply to the other Germanic allies, although it is believed that neither Bulgaria nor Turkey has submarine flotillas, unless recently supplied from German shipyards, which are known to have been working night and day turning them out.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Another Cabinet meeting passed today without an announcement concerning the crisis with Germany. High officials said after the meeting that there had been no development of importance, and indicated that President Wilson had not made known his decision as to when his next step would be taken.

At the State Department it was said that the situation continued to be as serious as it could be, short of war.

Senators who talked with Administration officials during the day gained the impression that arrangements for the President's appearance before Congress would be made early next week. Apparently only the President knows just what he will ask of Congress, but it is generally assumed that, with the session at an end, he will seek authority to deal with any situation which may arise as a result of the unrestricted submarine campaign. All available information regarding Germany's recent acts at sea is being assembled for the President.

PENFIELD PRESSES FOR FINAL STATEMENT

Envoy Asks Austrian Government to State Its Attitude on U-Boat War.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Frederic C. Penfield, American Ambassador at Vienna, is said by Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent to have delivered to the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister a request for a clear and final definition of Austria-Hungary's attitude regarding submarine warfare.

The dispatch says that, according to a telegram from Vienna, Mr. Penfield handed an aide-mémoire today to the Foreign Minister, requesting clear and final information as to what standpoint the Austro-Hungarian Government had assumed regarding submarine warfare, and whether the assurances given on the occasion of the Ancona and Persia incidents, were to be regarded as changed or withdrawn.

The text of the inquiry as forwarded by the correspondent reads:

In Note 4,167 of Dec. 9, 1915, the American Government laid down the points of view whereby it was guided regarding the activity of submarines in naval warfare. These points of view were on an earlier occasion clearly expressed to the German Government, and the United States Government was of the opinion that the Austro-Hungarian Government was acquainted therewith. The Austro-Hungarian Government replied with Note 5,735 of Dec. 14, 1915, wherein it declared it had neither adequate knowledge of the exchange of ideas which had taken place between the United States and Germany nor was of the opinion that even complete knowledge would suffice for judgment in regard to the Ancona incident, as the questions arising from this incident bore a different character.

Nevertheless, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Ministry declared, in Note 5,949, of Dec. 21, 1915: "As regards the principle set up in the very esteemed note that enemy private ships, provided they do not flee or offer resistance, should not be destroyed before the passengers are placed in safety, the Austro-Hungarian Government is in a position to assent in the main to this view of the Washington Cabinet."

Further, the Austro-Hungarian Government on the occasion of the sinking of the steamer Persia in January, 1916, declared that, although not informed regarding this incident, it would be guided by the principles whereto it agreed in the Ancona affair, should events prove that responsiblity falls on Austria-Hungary in this matter.

Simultaneously with the communication from the German Government on the 10th of January, 1916, the Austro-Hungarian Government declared that every merchant ship which for whatever purpose was armed with a gun forfeits by this circumstance alone the character of a peaceful vessel, and that in consideration of these circumstances the Austro-Hungarian naval forces had received orders to treat such vessels as warships. In conformity with this declaration, ships whereon were American citizens were sunk in the Mediterranean, presumably by Austro-Hungarian submarines. Some of these ships, for example the English steamer Welsh Prince, were torpedoed without warning by a submarine under the Austro-Hungarian flag. The American Ambassador at Vienna requested information regarding these cases, but thus far has received no reply.

At the same time as the German declaration of Jan. 31, 1917, which described certain portions of the sea off the coasts of Entente countries as exposed to danger from submarines, the Austro-Hungarian Government made known that Austria-Hungary and her allies, as from Feb. 1, would prevent with all available means shipping within the defined barred area.

From the foregoing it can be concluded that the assurance, given on the occasion of the Ancona case and renewed on the occasion of the discussion of the Persia case, is in all material respects the same assurance contained in the note of the German Government of May 4, which reads: "In conformity with the general principles of international law concerning the holding up, search, and destruction of merchant ships, such ships will not be sunk either inside or outside that portion of the sea which has been declared a naval war zone without previous warning and without taking such means as are available for saving human lives, unless such ships flee or endeavor to offer resistance," and that this assurance is more or less altered by the declaration of the Austro-Hungarian Government of Feb. 16 and Jan. 31.

Since the United States Government is in doubt regarding the meaning to be attached to these declarations, especially the last, it desires to be finally and clearly informed of the standpoint which the Austro-Hungarian Government adopts in these circumstances and also whether the assurance given in the Ancona and Persia cases is to be regarded as changed or withdrawn.

The correspondent adds:

"We learn that the material contents of this aide-mémoire will be submitted in the Foreign Ministry to an exhaustive examination from the standpoint of international law and will then be answered."

A Central News dispatch from Zurich today says:

"The Austrian Emperor has given a long audience to Count Czernin, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who previously had a conference with Frederic C. Penfield, the American Ambassador."

Inquiry Vague, Says Vienna.

VIENNA, Feb. 20, (via London.)—The inquiry of the United States regarding Austria-Hungary's attitude in connection with Germany's submarine warfare is considered vague in official circles.

It is stated that the reason for this is that the notes mentioned in the American communication, were not intended to tie the hands of the Austro-Hungarian Government in the future, but dealt entirely with cases that had actually occurred.

After the sinking by an Austrian submarine of the Italian steamship Ancona in November, 1915, occasioning the loss of the lives of several Americans, the Austro-Hungarian Government sent a note to the United States in which it said:

"The Imperial and Royal Government can also substantially concur in the principle expressed in the very esteemed (American) note that private ships, in so far as they do not flee or offer resistance, may not be destroyed without the persons aboard being brought into safety."

"AUSTRIA'S POSITION CLEAR."

German Papers Can't Understand the Purpose of Wilson's Request.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 20, (via London.)—The German newspapers profess inability to understand the purpose of President Wilson's note to Austria, the third paragraph of the Austro-Hungarian note of Jan. 31 leaving no doubt regarding the Dual Monarchy's standpoint. In that paragraph it was stated clearly that Austria-Hungary would use every means to cut off England and France wholly from all navigation.

"This seems final and absolutely clear, says Mittagzeitung, and it is inconceivable what further final and clear information Wilson needs on the subject. There cannot be any doubt that whatever concessions Austria-Hungaria made previously to meet the wishes of neutrals, especially those of the Americas, are revived within what has been declared the war regions."

The Vossische Zeitung thinks Wilson knows exactly the only answer he can expect from Austria-Hungaria.

"Can he find a half way plausible reason?" it asks, "for breaking diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungaria, too? In view of this certain development Vienna's answer will leave nothing to devise in its determination."

ANDRASSY THINKS WE WILL NOT MAKE WAR

Can't Believe We Will Defend "Venturesomeness or Business Interests of Individual."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Feb. 20, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Count Julius Andrassy occupies the front page of last Sunday's issue of the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna with a long article on "President Wilson's standpoint vis-a-vis Germany." Andrassy contends that Wilson seems inclined to adopt the standpoint of Palmerston in the year 1890 rather than remain on that of Washington, the great idealist who would draw the sword only for freedom and for the rights of existence."

"It would be surprising and disheartening," the Count writes, "if Wilson and the American nation did not adhere to the lucid view of Gladstone and of Peel, but adopted that of Palmerston."

It is quite inconceivable, Andrassy avers, that the German or the Austrian Emperor would join such a war as the present solely because something had happened to individual citizens in a war between other countries, although the individual citizen in question did something which he knew perfectly well was of a dangerous nature. Not even the conscience of the most powerful autocrat, he adds, could permit an outbreak of war for any other reason than that the nation also was convinced that the protection of its vital interests rendered war necessary. One cannot believe, Andrassy declares, that Americans will go beyond this and will join in the world war for the question of prestige or in order to defend the venturesomeness or the business interests of an individual citizen. The Count continues:

"There are no conflicting interests whatever between Austria-Hungary and America. Many Austrians and many Hungarians live on America's hospitable ground, and all modern and educated men must cherish the unqualified esteem and admiration for the vast work accomplished and for the success achieved by America. We believe and hope that the wisdom of Wilson will find a way to open hostilities only in consequence of a really hostile act and not because of an unfortunate accident. We also believe and hope the American people will perceive that they have no interest in preventing a method of fighting which can curtail a war that may become detrimental even to them. It would not be difficult for America to accommodate herself to this new species of effective blockade which is not more inhumane than the ordinary methods of warfare, for in carrying it out every effort is made to save human life."

Count Andrassy wishes Americans to be under no illusion, however, and hastens to inform them that "we cannot unfortunately in any circumstances whatever abandon the method of fighting on which we have decided, well knowing what we are doing is in order to defend ourselves and to break through the cruel starvation blockade after three years of war."

At the close of the article the Hungarian ex-Minister says "We set high store on America's sympathy," but, he adds, "we can subordinate to no feelings and to no other interests whatever the demands of defense of our existence which is menaced by our callous enemies."

ASKS TURKS TO ASSURE RELIEF SHIPS' SAFETY

Constantinople Must Deal with Germany and Austria Regarding the Des Moines and the Caesar.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The State Department has cabled to Ambassador Elkus, at Constantinople, to have the Turkish Government provide assurances from Austria-Hungary and Germany of safety for the cruiser Des Moines and the collier Caesar, so they may proceed from Alexandria to Beirut and Jaffa with medical supplies and foodstuffs and take on board 1,000 American refugees now at Beirut. The Mediterranean is in the submarine zone, and President Wilson is determined not to permit the vessels to run any risk which might precipitate war with the Central Empires.

It was made plain that the United States would not request assurances of safety for the ships from Berlin and Vienna, taking the position that the submarine operations are illegal and that the American vessels have a right to visit the two Turkish ports with the consent of the Turkish Government.

The State Department received a telegram from Ambassador Elkus today, dated Feb. 14, stating that the Turkish Government continued friendly toward the United States. It is not known here whether Turkey has submarines participating in the operations proclaimed by Germany and Austria-Hungary, but the fact that this Government desires assurances from Constantinople as well as from Vienna and Berlin is indicative of the official belief that Turkey is participating in the new submarine warfare.

It is thought that at least fifteen days will be required to learn whether Berlin, Vienna, and Constantinople will promise not to interfere with the Des Moines and the Caesar.

WHITLOCK'S FLAG STILL FLIES.

German Press Agency Says He Was Never Asked to Lower It.

BERLIN, Feb. 18, (by Wireless to Sayville, Feb. 20.)—The question of hauling down the American flag on the American Legation at Brussels has never been discussed between Brand Whitlock, the American Minister, and any member of the German administration, the Overseas News Agency says in an announcement made today. The desire that he continue his interest in the Belgian relief work was made known to him by the German Governor General, it is declared, and the Minister and his staff are to continue their activities in this connection. The agency announcement reads:

"Brand Whitlock, the American Minister at Brussels, will with his staff continue work for the relief commission. After the breaking off of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States the Governor General made it known to the Minister that the continuation of his philanthropic work for the commission would be welcomed. The flag on the building occupied by the American Minister was never hauled down.

CAPTAIN SAYS U-53 SANK HOUSATONIC

Returning Here, Ensor Tells of Encountering Craft That Visited Newport.

CAPTOR EXPRESSED REGRET

American Skipper Comes on Orduna—Rest of Crew Due Today on Philadelphia.

Captain Thomas A. Ensor, the commander of the steamship Housatonic, the first American vessel to be destroyed after the publication of the German note on Jan. 31, arrived here yesterday from Liverpool on the Cunarder Orduna with the firm conviction that it was the U-53 which sank his ship in the Bay of Biscay.

In support of his assertion, the Captain brought back a life preserver marked "U-53" on the inside and also on the canvas straps. He got the life preserver from one of the crew of the submarine.

Captain Ensor said the commander of the U-boat was a tall, thin Lieutenant with a pointed beard and a fluent command of the English language, which fits the pictures and description of Lieutenant Hans Rose, who was in charge of the U-53 when the craft visited Newport on Oct. 7, 1916, and sunk five steamships the following day off Nantucket Lightship.

"On the afternoon of Feb. 3," Captain Ensor said, "the Housatonic was twenty miles southwest of the Bishop Rock, bound from Galveston for Liverpool with a cargo of grain and flour. Suddenly I saw a submarine emerge a little on the port bow and signal our ship to stock. I obeyed the order, and when the Housatonic got closer up a boat was lowered from the submarine, containing an officer and two seamen, who pulled over to our vessel and came on board.

"U-53" on Life Preservers.

"While the officer was examining the papers I noticed that the men had life preservers bearing 'U-53' stamped in black letters on the brown canvas. When the men were ordered to go below and examine the hold they laid their lifebelts on deck, and I dropped an oilskin coat over one of them and picked it up later when I went to get my things together before leaving the ship.

"After reading the ship's papers the officer ordered me to go on board the submarine and show them to the commander, while he remained on the Housatonic with his two men. By this time the crew had three of the lifeboats down in the water, which was ample accommodation for all, as there were only twenty-six on our ship all told.

"When I boarded the U-53, as I assumed the craft to be, I was met by the commander, who answered the description of Lieut. Hans Rose. In perfectly good English he asked me where I was bound and what cargo I had in the hold. After he had examined the papers, the German officer turned to me and said that I must return to my ship immediately and order the crew to take to the boats, because he was going to sink the Housatonic.

"'I regret to have to do this, Captain,' he explained, 'but it is necessary because you are carrying food supplies to the enemies of my country.'

"When I reached the Housatonic I told the crew to prepare to leave the ship at once and take a small bundle of their clothing with them that they could collect easily, as the time was short. We left in two of the lifeboats, with the chief officer in command of one and myself in charge of the other.

Sinking of the Housatonic.

"Meantime the officer and the two sailors who had come off in the boat from the submarine had been occupied in placing bombs in various parts of the Housatonic below decks, and they left her shortly after we got away. Within a few minutes there was a big explosion, followed by a second one further aft, and we saw the last of the Housatonic and her cargo of wheat and flour.

"At first the commander of the submarine was going to submerge and leave us to our fate on the open sea, but I prevailed upon him to tow us toward the shore, which he did at a speed of fifteen or more knots. After about two hours' towing a British patrol boat was sighted on the horizon, and the U-boat stopped and sheered to starboard. The commander shouted out to me, 'I am going to leave you now, as that fellow will pick you up soon.'

"I looked through my glasses, which were slung round my neck, and saw that the patrol boat was steaming along comfortably and apparently had not noticed the submarine or the lifeboats. I called the attention of the commander to this fact and asked him not to go away. He replied: 'That fellow is asleep, but I will wake him up for you.' Then he ordered the port bow gun to be fired. He submerged a few moments later as the patrol boat was seen coming toward us at full speed with the thick black smoke belching out of her tall funnel. It proved to be the trawler Salvator, which picked up the crew of the two lifeboats and landed us on the coast of Cornwall, England."

Captain Ensor added that the officers, engineers and men of the Housatonic would arrive here tomorrow on the American liner Philadelphia from Liverpool.

Another passenger on the Orduna was Mark Alexander, 30 years old, an American of Roanoke, Va., who has been serving with the British Army at the Dardanelles and Saloniki. He lost both his hands and his left eye when a grenade he was holding exploded by a rifle bullet from the enemy's lines. He spent several weeks in a hospital recovering from his wounds, and is now returning to Roanoke.

Transport Rammed Submarine.

A first cabin passenger on the Orduna, who wished to have his name withheld, told of a narrow escape of a transport in the Solent and the ramming of a submarine. He was crossing to Portsmouth in one of the Isle of Wight boats, and was standing on deck amidships watching a transport which had just passed them at a speed of eighteen to twenty knots.

"Her decks were crowded with troops," the passenger said, "and to my horror I saw a submarine emerging on her starboard beam. Before the under-sea fighter had a chance to fire a torpedo or the bow guns, the transport swung round and ran her down, passing clean over the submarine and lashing the sea with her two big propellers. When she had proceeded on her way toward France I looked through my glasses but could not see any traces of the submarine.

The Orduna brought thirty-seven passengers and about 3,000 sacks of mail.

CHILD MADE MASCOT OF U-BOAT'S CRUISE

Little Daughter of Norwegian Shipmaster Travels Eight Days on a Submarine.

CRAFT HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Damaged When Munition Ship Blows Up—Commander Was Man Who Sank the Lusitania.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20.—Solveig Jacobsen, the six-year-old daughter of a Norwegian shipmaster, who has arrived here with her parents on the way to Norway, has the distinction of being the first child to make a voyage on a German submarine, having been the captive during the eight-day trip of the submarine commander, who is said to have sunk the Lusitania.

Solveig's father, Isach Jacobsen, was the master of the Norwegian ship Thor II., which was sunk by the submarine. The U-boat towed the ship's boats with the crew of twenty-eight toward land for a time and finally left them to shift for themselves, but the commander retained the master, his wife and child on the submarine while he continued the cruise.

The operations, however, were of short duration, for the next ship encountered proved to be laden with ammunition for France. The submarine was so shaken by the terrific explosion when the steamer was torpedoed, and by an encounter with a British destroyer, which all but sank the U-boat by ramming, that one of its engines was put out of commission, that the commander determined to make his home harbor for repairs.

The submarine limped homeward along a route west of Ireland and north of the Shetlands, dodging many British patrol ships and destroyers, and finally came into port at Heligoland in fairly good shape, the crew having succeeded in repairing the engine on the voyage.

Captain Jacobsen, the master of the Thor II., in describing his experiences, dwelt on the human side of the man who he came to understand was the Lusitania's destroyer, as shown in the treatment of little Solveig. The child was adopted as a sort of mascot by the submarine and decorated with a bit of ribbon from the commander's iron cross, which he received for an earlier achievement, and made free of the ship. The submarine's phonograph played "Solveig's Song," by Grieg, as the waking melody for the child, and the sailors made a pet of her during off duty hours.

During the short stay at Heligoland, where the Jacobsens were the first neutral visitors during the war, the commander of the island called to pay his respects and presented to the child many souvenirs of her visit.

Captain Jacobsen's description of the torpedoing of the ammunition ships shows one of the perils to which submarines are exposed. The submarine had halted the ship, and, ignorant of its character, prepared to sink it by gunfire, to save torpedoes. The first shot attracted a British destroyer, which came at full speed. The submarine hastily submerged, sending a torpedo at the steamer before going under. An appalling explosion followed, which, had the submarine been on the surface, might have had even more serious consequences.

"We had no time to see what became of the steamer's crew, which were in the boats near the steamer," said the Norwegian. "The submarine was tossed about so convulsively by the force of the explosion that we were all thrown down. The submarine's deck was ripped up and we thought our last hour had come."

The destroyer headed at ever increasing speed for the submerging submarine, but the U-boat was far enough down to escape the full force of the blow. The men in the U-boat were thrown hither and thither, but a quick examination showed that the submarine had not sprung a leak. One engine, however, was disabled and the boat lost part of its manoeuvring ability, making abandonment of the cruise advisable.

The return trip was one long succession of "ups and downs," the submarine being obliged to submerge frequently, as often as once an hour, to avoid British patrol ships. The sensations of the civilian passengers during the frequent dives, and particularly during the anxious moments when the submarine was carefully feeling its way to the surface, ignorant of whether a British ship might not be waiting to ram her, were by no means agreeable, and the extreme variations of temperature between the submerged and surface positions were hard to bear.

The food aboard was good and abundant, the boat having been provisioned for a four weeks' cruise. When the submarine arrived in the North Sea, the commander announced that he would put Captain Jacobsen and his wife and child aboard the first eastbound Norwegian steamer, but none was encountered. The commander then proceeded for Horn's Reef, where he hoped to find a Danish fishing boat, but these had all disappeared.

The arrival at Heligoland, where the commander, owing to earlier achievements, is highly popular, was a triumphal entry. The entire crew of forty-two men came on deck. As the submarine slowly entered the harbor, its orchestra of fifteen men played the German anthem. The commander, holding Solveig by the hand, stood on the bridge, acknowledging the cheers from the other craft in the bay.

Although the entire civilian population of Heligoland was transferred to the mainland at the outbreak of hostilities, Captain Jacobsen saw many civilians among the thousands of soldiers and sailors now garrisoning the island.

The name of the commander of the German submarine which sank the Lusitania has never been officially announced. The latest unofficial announcement of the submarine Captain responsible for that ship's destruction named Captain Max Valentier, son of the Dean of the Sondersburg Cathedral.

20 AMERICAN CONSULS REACH SWITZERLAND

William H. Gale Among Those Crossing Border—One Party Held Up at Lindau.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The Swiss Minister advised the State Department today that twenty American Consular officers with their families, comprising from thirty to thirty-five persons, left Munich this morning via Lindau, for Switzerland, where they arrived this afternoon, some stopping at Rorschach and others at Ronanshors, on Lake Constance.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Reuter's Zurich correspondent says American Consuls from Germany began to arrive in Switzerland Tuesday. The Consul General at Munich and the Consul General from Warsaw arrived during the evening, and the main party is expected later.

ZURICH, Switzerland, Feb. 20.—The American Consulate General today received word that William H. Gale, Consul General at Munich, and two other Consuls would arrive late today. The advices said that other members of their party had been held by the Germans at Lindau for a more minute examination of their baggage.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 20.—As far as ascertainable no Americans, except a few officials whose names have already been cabled, have arrived in Holland from Germany since the break in relations with the United States. The American Legation, in a notice printed in the newspapers, requests all Americans arriving in Holland to communicate with the legation for registration and viséing of passports.

KEENE, N. H., Feb. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Nothing has been heard of the lad since he left home in June.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Feb. 20.—It is believed here that the schooner described as Dorothy in a London dispatch, announcing she had been sunk, was the Newfoundland vessel Rose Dorothea, which was returning to this port from Oporto, Portugal, with fishery salt. She was formerly owned at Provincetown, but a year ago was transferred to British registry.

The schooner ordinarily carried a crew of twenty-three, and it is supposed this number was aboard when she sailed recently.

The British fishing schooner Mayola, also reported sunk, was proceeding at last accounts from St. John's for Gibraltar with a cargo of dried codfish.

TOWNS TO "ADOPT" U-BOATS.

New Plan Adopted to Maintain Germany's Under-Water Force.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20, (via London.)—The Kiel Zeitung, a copy of which has been received here, announces that a new plan for the promotion of Germany's submarine war is starting throughout Germany. Under the plan it is proposed that the important towns each "adopt" one submarine and its crew, entirely defraying the cost of the upkeep of the vessel and men, supplying them with clothes, provisions, and luxuries, and paying pensions to disabled men or widows.

SWEDEN ASKS FACTS OF SINKING BY U-BOAT

Stockholm Paper Says Crew of Hugo Hamilton Knew Nothing of Blockade Order.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 20, (via London.)—The Swedish Government has asked Berlin for particulars of the sinking of the Swedish motor ship Hugo Hamilton, which became known here on Sunday through an official report from Berlin. The vessel, which was bought from her Norwegian owners and was making her first trip under the Swedish flag, was bringing 4,000 tons of saltpeter from Valparaiso and was consigned to the Swedish Farmers' Association. Her arrival was eagerly awaited because the stock of saltpeter in Sweden was virtually exhausted and there was a general scarcity of fertilizer.

The Hugo Hamilton carried a crew of more than thirty, and had on board the two young sons of the Captain. Whether the vessel was warned is not known, nor is there any information here as to whether any lives were lost. The vessel was insured by the Government War Risk Commission for 1,500,000 crowns.

The Dagbladet, in commenting on the loss of the vessel says:

"The fact that the vessel was coming home from Chile renders it probable that those aboard had no knowledge of the German proclamation of the new sea war zone. The vessel was on her way between two neutral harbors with a cargo necessary to Swedish farmers. That it nevertheless became the innocent victim of the new German submarine warfare must excite indignation and resentment here. The illegality of the sinking is evident.

"Swedish sense of justice cannot let itself be satisfied with the declaration that the vessel, coming from a remote port, was inside the war zone and hence must take its chances regardless of whether the Captain had knowledge of the new dangers. Nor can an eventual money indemnity make the damage good, since at the present time it was precisely saltpeter, and not money, that the Swedish farmers needed."

The Swedish Government has also protested against the sinking of the Swedish steamship Varing of 2,296 tons, which was reported destroyed on Feb. 8.

The only previous reference to the sinking of the Hugo Hamilton was contained in a Berlin announcement of Feb. 15 which was received here Monday.

50 MORE SUBMARINES FOR AMERICAN NAVY

Total Cost $71,000,000 Under Plan Added to Naval Bill by Senate Committee.

TO BE LAID DOWN AT ONCE

Brings Total Number Carried by Bill Up to 68—Big Increase in Midshipmen Personnel.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The Senate Naval Committee tonight completed revising the Naval Appropriation bill, passed by the House last week, and the measure will be reported out at the earliest opportunity. The committee has decided to incorporate in the bill a provision directing the Secretary of the Navy to proceed at once to the construction of fifty additional submarines at a total cost of not more than $71,000,000. The bill stipulates that not less than fifteen of them are to built on the Pacific Coast.

The addition of fifty submarines to the number already provided for makes a total of sixty-eight carried in the bill. Ten of the new vessels are to be fleet submarines at a cost of not more than $1,900,000 each; the other forty will be coast submarines to cost not over $1,300,000 each. Because of this increased expense the sum which a subcommittee recommended should be appropriated as a lump sum to expedite construction of the naval building program has been cut from $150,000,000 to $115,000,000.

In addition the committee has approved the greater part of the minor increases recommended by the sub-committee, amounting to approximately $13,000,000. Three coast guard cutters are provided for at a total cost of $1,350,000.

The committee decided also to increase the number of midshipmen at Annapolis by giving each member of Congress four appointments, instead of three, to recommend that for five years the course at the Naval Academy be reduced from four to three years, with graduating classes in both March and September. The number of midshipmen would be increased by 618 by the committee recommendation.

Some Vessels Allowed to Pass with Cargoes Like the Lyman M. Law's

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Feb. 20.—Ambassador Page has compared the evidence gathered by the embassy concerning the sinking of the American schooner Lyman M. Law by a submarine with that collected by the Italian authorities, and has found that the Germans and Austrians have allowed other neutral vessels carrying cargoes similar to that of the Law to pass unmolested.

Spanish and Greek vessels with cargoes of lumber for making fruit boxes have frequently been allowed to pass, it is said.

BALTIMORE STEAMER CLEARED

The Rockingham, American Ship, Leaves Today for War Zone.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 20.—The first American steamer to leave this port for the submarine zone since the German warning of Jan. 31, will be the Garland liner Rockingham, Captain C. E. Edwards, to sail tomorrow morning for Liverpool. She cleared today. She is loaded with general cargo.

In her crew of forty men, twenty-four are citizens of the United States. Ten are natives of the Sandwich Islands. Chief Officer E. W. Carver and First Assistant Engineer J. O. Benson are Baltimoreans.

The Furness liner Kenmore which carried away a Maryland pilot, is now sixteen days out for Leith and due tomorrow. The pilot was carried out because of storms at the Capes.

Munitions Ships Leave Boston.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—Three British steamers with munitions, food, and horses left here today for ports within the German submarine zone, and another was prepared to leave tonight. These four vessels have on board 300 horsemen, most of whom are Americans. The Warren liner Sagamore, for Liverpool; the freighter Moorish Prince, for St. Nazaire, and the Leyland liner Etonian, for Liverpool, were the steamers which sailed. The Knight of the Garter planned to leave before daybreak for St. Nazaire. Each vessel carried a gun astern.

U-BOAT STATEMENT BY CARSON EXPECTED

First Lord May Reveal Results of British Anti-Submarine War in Commons Today.

PARTISANS CALL FOR FISHER

Want Admiral Back in His Old Post to Handle Anti-Submarine Operations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Sir Edward Carson will make his first important speech as First Lord of the Admiralty tomorrow when he submits the naval estimates to the Commons. Sir Edward is understood to be in favor of telling the public as much as can be disclosed without giving dangerous information to the enemy, and in some quarters hopes are expressed that he will to some extent raise the screen which the Admiralty hitherto has kept over the statistics of submarine warfare. The chances are, however, that he will deal in comparative percentages rather than in plain figures.

In shipping and insurance circles, while no disposition exists to make light of the submarine depredations, the prevalent idea is that the menace is being kept well within safe proportions, and that the U-boats destroyed or otherwise accounted for make a satisfactory total. Unofficial reports of the total number of ships which made British ports in defiance of the submarine blockade also show highly favorable comparison with the total losses by submarine activity, either direct or by mine-laying. It is believed that Sir Edward Carson will, on this point at least, be able to give figures, particularly as the French and Italian authorities have done so.

Notwithstanding reassuring reports current there is a certain underlying anxiety due chiefly to Carson's recent statement that "the menace of the submarine to the merchant service is greater now than at any other period of the war," and any detailed information the First Lord may be in position to give to the public will be acclaimed.

The last few days have seen a recrudescence of the campaign to bring Lord Fisher back to the Admiralty. The controversy between the Fisherites and anti-Fisherites has attained wide dimensions. The House of Commons has been informed by one of Fisher's supporters that the Admiralty can have Fisher back now on its own terms, but that if the Admiralty defers recalling him much longer he will only come back on his own terms.

To understand the controversy it is necessary to know that Fisher has a plan for dealing with the submarine menace, which he contends cannot be carried into successful operation unless untrammeled executive authority be given to him to enforce it. The opponents of the Admiral claim he would be a disruptive force in the navy, and that the younger school is better equipped to handle the submarine campaign than an old man of 76 who, they say, failed to keep the U-boat menace well in hand when he was at the Admiralty before.

Lord Northcliffe has been sledgehammering at the Fisherites for a couple of days past by editorials in The Daily Mail, in one of which "the steadily rising murmur of Fisher, Fisher, throughout the country" was cited as an instance of "mob psychology." "The cure for Fisherism," says The Mail, "is publicity."

Sir Edward Carson, as already mentioned, is believed to be in favor of all possible publicity, and his speech tomorrow is awaited with the keenest interest.

changed at all since the sailing of the American liners has been indefinitely postponed. The shippers of the cargo on the St. Louis have been notified that the company wishes to discharge it, but I do not know when the work will be done."

American Freighters Sail.

The first American freighters to leave New York for a British port since the publication of the German note on submarine warfare started yesterday. They were the Mongolia, owned by the Atlantic Transport Company of West Virginia, which is part of the International Mercantile Marine, and the Algonquin, owned by the American Star Line of 25 Beaver Street. Both were bound for London.

As the vessels have to run the gauntlet of the German submarines right up the English Channel to the mouth of the Thames, a distance of about 350 miles, London is regarded as the most dangerous port in Great Britain, but it is also the best protected.

From Land's End to the Nore Lightship in the Thames estuary, the Channel and North Sea are patrolled by destroyers, mine sweepers and patrol boats of high speed, trawlers which drag steel nets between them, and stationary nets which are shifted from time to time.

The Mongolia is a vessel of 13,639 gross tonnage, with accommodation for 150 first cabin passengers, which has not been used since she has been carrying freight to London. She is commanded by Captain E. Rice and has a crew of 180 men, of whom 90 per cent. are American citizens.

Among them are Thomas Blau, chief officer; W. E. Wollaston, first officer; C. W. Krieg, second officer; J. G. Lutz, third officer; John Foster, fourth officer; C. D. Riley and S. E. Wilcox, cadet officers; J. W. Condon, chief engineer; Clarence Irwin, first assistant; W. Hotchkiss, second assistant; L. Tinto, third assistant; Anson B. Ingalls, surgeon; W. T. Heath, chief steward, and H. Chapman, wireless operator.

The Algonquin is a single-screw steamship of 3,200 gross tonnage, commanded by Captain A. Nordberg. Among the American citizens on board are William T. Holmes of Chicago, mate, and Charles Schultz of Brooklyn, chief engineer. The owners agreed to give the officers a war bonus of 50 per cent. in wages and 25 per cent. to the crew, and in case the vessel is captured or destroyed the crew are to be paid bonus with wages until they return to the United States.

Other Neutrals' Ships.

Other neutral vessels which left here yesterday for the war zone were the Dutch freighter Kessler, for Rotterdam; the Spanish freighter Mar Baltico, sister ship to the Mar Adriatico, torpedoed on Monday, for Bordeaux; the British freighter Northern, for Havre, and the Italian steamship Avala, for Genoa.

The arrivals from ports within the danger zone were headed by the Cunarders Orduna and Ausonia from Liverpool and London, respectively, and the Fabre liner Patria from Marseilles and Naples. The vessels together had more than 2,000 passengers. Other arrivals were the Italian steamship San Guglielmo from Genoa; the British freighters Atholl from London, Essex from Liverpool, and City of Manila from Glasgow; the Belgian steamship Trevier from Barry, the Dutch freighter Farsum from Amsterdam, and the Norwegian freighter Thorvald Halvorsen from St. Nazaire.

The agents of the French Line received a cable message yesterday from Bordeaux that the Touraine, with passengers and mails, had left that port at 1 A. M. for New York.

The Standard Oil Company was notified that the tanker Healdton, which was ordered into Halifax after the diplomatic break with Germany, had resumed her voyage to Rotterdam.

The sailing of the Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi for Naples and Genoa with passengers and mails, which was scheduled for noon yesterday, was postponed indefinitely by the agents, and no reason was given to the passengers, who were notified by telegram and telephone, except those who had already gone to the liner at her pier in Jersey City. In shipping circles it was said that the delay was caused by a report of U-boat activity in the North Atlantic.

No anxiety was felt yesterday regarding the safety of the two American freighters, Rochester and Orleans, which sailed from New York on Feb. 10 for Bordeaux. They are both slow vessels, and are not expected to reach the danger zone for another six or seven days.

ALLEGED SPIES HELD FOR TRIAL

Sander and Wunnenberg Give Bail—Seven Americans Accused in Plot.

CHEMICAL PAPER FOUND

Arrest of Davis, Now in Sing Sing, Gave Early Clue to Federal Secret Service Men.

Albert A. Sander, dramatic editor of the Deutsches Journal, Executive Secretary of the German-American Literary Defense Committee, President of the Central Powers War Films Exchange, Prussian Army reservist, Heidelberg graduate, and, according to United States Secret Service agents, one of the principal cogs in the German Secret Service system in this country, was arraigned before Judge C. W. Sessions in the Federal Court yesterday, charged with having, with others, hatched a military enterprise on American soil against Great Britan in behalf of Germany.

With him was arraigned Charles W. Wunnenberg, a marine engineer, and an American citizen, who, the Government alleges, was one of the co-conspirators in the enterprise directed against Great Britain. Judge Sessions fixed bail in $5,000 for each man, which was furnished, and set the hearing on the complaint for 2 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon.

At least seven, and perhaps as many more, men, most of them American-born citizens without a drop of German blood in their veins, are said to be concerned in the conspiracy, the purpose of which was to secure information in England which would be useful to Germany in waging "ruthless submarine warfare," as well as in other ways. So far as is known every spy who is alleged to have journeyed to England to gain information for the German Government was a native American.

At least two of these suspects are members of old and highly respected American families, and all of them have been conected with newspapers in different parts of the country. The name of only one of these accused Americans, most of whom are now in Europe, can now be published. That one is George Vaux Bacon, a former Cleveland newspaper man, and at times publicity agent for various enterprises in New York. He is held as a spy by the British Government and is said to have made a full confession of all he knows about the German plot of which he is alleged to have been one of the paid agents.

The running to earth of the alleged conspirators was the work of the Federal Secret Service agents. For more than two months the agents have been at work day and night, and they probably would be as much in the dark as ever but for the assistance of Government chemists who discovered the secrets of the ink and paper used by the German Secret Service in communicating with its agents in foreign lands.

The ink is absorbed by the paper and the writing cannot be detected even with the most powerful microscope. And only one kind of paper, so far as is known, is of any value for use with this ink. In some manner not disclosed the American agents got hold of some of the ink, which after much time the Government chemists were able to analyze.

The chemists also found the secret of the paper which before the ink would show had to be washed in chemically purified water, dried, and, after that, treated with other chemicals. After the agents in Europe had written their instructions in the invisible ink they would write with ordinary ink a letter presumably to a woman relative or some friend in the United States. The chemical which brought out the invisible ink obliterated at the same time the ordinary ink.

Once the paper and ink problem had been solved the rest was comparatively easy. The source of the money used in financing the espionage system in England was discovered, and in that connection it can be stated that the source was not the German Embassy in Washington. The money was generally transmitted by express from a neutral country in Europe and addressed to a person not actively connected with the spy system in this country. Eventually the money reached the persons in New York for whom it was intended.

It was the money part of the affair that first aroused the suspicions of the Government agents. It came about this way: A few months ago Wunnenberg caused the arrest of one Robert Davis on the charge of stealing $4,000 from him. Wunnenberg said the money was part of a legacy left him by a relative in Germany, and that he had given the money to Davis to put into a bank for him. The money, he said, was misappropriated, and Davis was arrested. He was convicted in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn last November, and Justice Cropsey, before whom the case was tried, sentenced him to serve from two to four years in Sing Sing, where he is now.

Both Sander and Wunnenberg blame Davis for the predicament in which they now find themselves. Wunnenberg and Davis had been shipmates on the American steamship Leelanaw and were on board that ship when it was torpedoed by a German submarine in July, 1915. With the other survivors of the wrecked ship, they were landed at Kirkwall. The Secret Service is now seeking to learn whether Wunnenberg was connected with the German spy system at that time.

The arrest of Davis and his prosecution was brought to the attention of the Secret Service, and, as a result of investigation, the agents found the trail that on Monday night ended with the arrest of Sander and Wunnenberg.

Bacon is the only alleged spy whose arrest is admitted by the authorities. Two of the others, it is said, are in Holland. Bacon is to return to New York as a witness for the Government against Sander and Wunnenberg and others who may be arrested in the future.

A report which could not be verified yesterday was that the German spy system now operating here is busy getting information about the land defenses and the navy of the United States.

OUR CREDIT BALANCE ABOVE $5,500,000,000

Now More Than Five Times the National Debt and Equals Total of Twelve Years.

EXPLAINS INFLUX OF GOLD

Securities, However, Have Furnished Greater Part of Payment for This Huge Balance.

The $613,000,000 of exports reported yesterday for January brought the total of our exports since the outbreak of the war up to above $10,500,000,000 and the $241,000,000 of goods brought in from abroad during that month raised the aggregate of our imports during this period to above $5,000,000,000.

The resultant credit balance in excess of $5,500,000,000 is a sum more than five times the national debt of the country, and is practically equal to the total of our credit balances in the twelve fiscal years from 1903 to 1914, inclusive. This credit is also more than $1,000,000,000 in excess of the total of our foreign trade, exports and imports combined, in any year prior to the outbreak of the war in Europe.

It is this balance in our favor which has put us in a position to draw from abroad a steady stream of gold, but it is in securities that we have taken pay for the great bulk of this huge credit balance. Part of these have been our own securities bought back from European holders and part the securities of foreign Governments which we have purchased. The supply of American securities abroad, while not exhausted, has been greatly diminished, and they are no longer freely coming into the market.

The British Government until recently relied on the voluntary surrender of American securities to the British Treasury for the purpose of disposing of them to pay for supplies bought in the United States, but lately it had to resort to a plan for the compulsory mobilization of the remainder of the foreign securities held in England. This plan is now being put into operation. The first list of American securities which the British Government will require their holders to surrender for the purpose of sending them to this side to offset the still growing balance in favor of this country was published in London the day before yesterday. This is the other side of the story told in the figures of the foreign trade of the United States. The huge exports from this country creating a credit which is flooding our banks with gold and which has added greatly to the prosperity which the country has enjoyed have forced our customers abroad to resort to all the means at their disposal to meet the huge payments which they have incurred in buying goods from us.

The balance in our favor has not been at all the result of our importing fewer goods than we were accustomed to do before the war. On the contrary, our imports are greater than they ever were before. Imports during 1916 were more than $600,000,000 in excess of the largest total reported in any earlier year.

Most of the increase in our imports has been in raw materials for use in manufacturing, much of which has been used in producing goods which we subsequently exported in the shape of finished products. This is one reason why American labor has been so fully and so profitably employed during the last two years—the demand has been not alone for American products, but for the manufacturing facilities of the country. They were needed to turn raw materials from other countries into the finished materials which the rest of the world needed, and which could not be manufactured elsewhere because so many of Europe's industrial plants were engaged in supplying the needs of the war.

The change which has taken place in the character of our exports is indicated in this comparison of the percentages of our total exports represented by the several classes of commodities in 1916 with the figures for 1914:

	P.C. of Total Exports. 1916.	P.C. of Total Exports. 1914.
Foodstuffs	19.72	28.20
Manufactures ready for consumption	48.43	30.37
Miscellaneous	1.74	1.09

	P.C. of Total Imports. 1916.	P.C. of Total Imports. 1914.
Manufactures ready for consumption	14.45	22.75
Miscellaneous	.83	.98

This comparison suggests one of the problems with which we will be confronted after the war. We have increased our manufacturing facilities to meet the extraordinary demands which have come from abroad, and the question will arise whether we will be able to keep this enlarged industrial plant profitably employed when the manufacturing facilities of Europe now devoted to the production o fwar supplies again are making goods for commercial purposes.

Foreign Trade of the United States Since the Outbreak of the War, $15,622,785,853

The foreign trade of the United States, imports and exports combined, since the outbreak of the war in Europe at the end of July, 1914, has amounted to the huge sum of $15,622,785,853. Exports during this period were a little more than double the imports, and the balance of trade in favor of this country resulting from these thirty months of trade was $5,501,568,835. This table shows how this vast trade has accumulated and the huge movement of gold which resulted from it:

*Excess of exports.

Our credit balance from merchandise trade was augmented by our net exports of silver. The balance in our favor was offset by gold imports, the purchase of foreign securities, the repurchase of our own securities and by other items. The two sides of the account in round numbers may be put thus in the shape of a balance sheet:

BALANCE SHEET OF OUR FOREIGN TRADE.

Sent Out.		Taken In.
Excess of merchandise exports	$5,501,000,000	Net gold imports	$907,000,000
Net exports of silver	73,000,000	Foreign securities bought	2,400,000,000

		Other items	67,000,000

The "other items" include payments to foreign ship owners for freight on part of our imports, the net amount of interest and dividends on our stocks and bonds still held abroad and other less important items.

HUSTING'S HARD HITS AT PACIFIST PLEAS

Full Text of Wisconsin Senator's Rebuke of Those Urging Submission to Germany.

SAYS UNITY MAY AVERT WAR

But "Continued Friendly Relations Cannot Be Predicated Upon Wrong and Injustice."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Following is the full text of the letter sent by Senator Husting of Wisconsin to F. E. Withrow of La Crosse, Wis., one of his constituents, who sent him a copy of a set of resolutions caling for an embargo on all shipments to belligerents and prohibition of the entrance of American citizens and ships into the war zone, parts of which letter were published in THE NEW YORK TIMES of yesterday:

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17, 1917.

F. E. Withrow, La Crosse, Wis.:

My Dear Sir—Yours of Feb. 14, inclosing resolutions favoring "an embargo on all shipments to belligerents," asking that "American citizens and American ships be forbidden to enter the war zone" and "protesting against war," was duly received. In reply will say that you are evidently laboring under a misapprehension, because the issue of whether we shall have war or not lies with the German Government and not with ours. We are not invading Germany's rights; on the contrary, Germany has been, is invading, and threatens to continue to invade our rights.

I am sure that all of our people, including the President and myself, are most fervently desirous of avoiding war and maintaining peace. For two and one-half years President Wilson has zealously, ably, energetically, tirelessly, and patriotically striven with all his might and influence to preserve peaceful relations with all nations, and I have done all that I could do to aid him in his admirable and statesmanlike efforts. It must, therefore, be evident to you and to everybody that the President does not want war if war can honorably be avoided or averted.

However, in his efforts to avoid war, the President has been and is now being most seriously handicapped by men, newspapers, societies, and leagues, whose attitude, activities, and utterances have aroused a suspicion which in time has grown into a settled conviction in foreign countries that the American people are not a unit in the support of their Government, but are divided in spirit, purpose, and allegiance. As a natural consequence, the Government has been most grievously and lamentably harassed in its diplomatic efforts and has been measurably weakened, if indeed it has not already been actually defeated, in its strenuous efforts and purpose to preserve an honorable peace. Thus the clamors and misdirected efforts of many of our people in the end may prove to have brought about that which they feared and were most anxious to avoid and prevent, namely, war.

While we have already severed diplomatic relations with Germany, and war clouds appear upon the horizon, yet war may even now be averted if Germany should become convinced that our people stand back of our country against Germany as unitedly and determinedly as the German people stand back of their country against the United States. The German people are a unit in their loyalty and obedience to their Kaiser and their country in every step which it sees fit to take, and so they are now back of their Government in its ruthless submarine warfare, notwithstanding that it may lead to war with the United States and bring them in conflict with their brothers in blood in America, and notwithstanding that the proposed action of their Government is contrary to international law and the laws of humanity.

Let the people of Germany insist upon it that their Government cease its wanton killing of our citizens and desist from practices which are not only contrary to the rules of civilized warfare, but which will forever leave a dark blot upon the pages of German history. Let not our citizens demand of their own country—which is admittedly in the right—to yield to a country which is concededly in the wrong, but rather let the people of the country which is in the wrong demand of their Government that it yield to the demands of the country which is in the right. Enduring peace and continued friendly relations between nations cannot be predicated upon wrong and injustice. These can only be enduringly built upon the rock of justice and right. Therefore, peace and good-will between the United States and Germany can be secured only by wrong yielding to right and not by right yielding to wrong.

I repeat, therefore, that the issue of war or peace in the present crisis lies with Germany and the German people, and not with the United States. As the President has said, we are asking or demanding nothing for ourselves or for our country that we have not a right to demand in the name of humanity and civilization. We are repeating now only a demand which Germany nearly a year ago admitted was a just demand, and one which she then respected and promised to comply with. We are now only asking Germany to keep the promise she made, that she would conduct her war in accord with the laws of humanity and the laws governing civilized warfare. So it is clear that we have not changed our position or increased our demands. It is Germany which has changed her position, and now is doing, or threatens to do, what nearly a year ago she admitted she had no right to do, and promised not to do. President Wilson is, therefore, making a last effort before resorting to the arbitrament of arms to hold Germany to this solemn promise. In this effort the President is not only entitled to have the unanimous support of both houses of Congress, but he is entitled to have the loyal and undivided support of every American citizen.

I would, therefore, urge upon all of the men and women of Wisconsin, whom I have the honor in part to represent, to cast out of their minds and hearts every consideration other than those of right, justice, and humanity and of the welfare, good, and integrity of our country, and to join hands firmly in supporting their President and their country in and through this crisis and in and through every other crisis which may hereafter confront us.

In conclusion, I beg to say that, as a Senator, I consider it my solemn duty, imposed upon me by my oath of office, and, moreover, I consider it my duty as a citizen of the United States, to support my Government in this and every other crisis in which it is or may hereafter become involved with any other foreign country. America expects every American to do his duty in this and every other crisis. Yours very truly, PAUL O. HUSTING.

REVENTLOW'S IDEA OF IT.

He Suggests Railway Men Might Force Wilson Into War.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Wednesday, Feb. 21.—Count von Reventlow, writing in the Tages Zeitung, discusses what he considers a possibility that President Wilson might be induced by the pressure of American workmen to declare war on Germany, believing that all transportation difficulties would be removed thereby. Count von Reventlow says:

"If President Wilson believes he has to declare war, this will without doubt be done with such a great and clever use of the tom-tom that at first a so-called wave of enthusiasm will go through the whole population. But the question is what will remain when the wave has ebbed and subsequent weeks and months show that things this time are quite different to the Spanish war. The more effective German submarine war will proceed in the meanwhile and the United States will have to recognize that neither a declaration of war nor energetic measures have removed the difficulties at home or abroad."

Count von Reventlow criticizes Ambassador von Bernstorff's farewell message to America.

"We cannot say," he writes, "that this effusive talk of a heart overflowing with friendship is opportune at the present moment. It looks as if the Ambassador lost his sense of proper perspective."

TAFT AGAINST PACIFISTS.

This Not the Time, He Says, When Force Can Be Abandoned.

Ex-President William Howard Taft does not believe in calling the pacifists "mollycoddles," cowards, or fools, although he does not believe in their views, he told several hundred persons last night at Broadway Tabernacle in an address on the work of the League to Enforce Peace.

"We have not yet reached the time in the history of the world when we can abandon force. If we have something to protect and there is a vicious force abroad, nothing can prevent injustice except the imposition of force. We are not likely to have another war in which we will not take a part. President Wilson said that in the next European war there would be no neutrals. It looks now as if he might have said that in this war there can be no neutrals.

"When we are right on the brink of hostilities, it is not just to apply the warning of Washington and Jefferson many years ago against 'entangling alliances.' That was made when conditions were totally different than they are now and it was intended for that period."

DOMINION LINER OUT OF SUBMARINE NET

The Madison, Caught at Hampton Roads, Released After Twenty Hours' Hard Work.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 20.—For about twenty hours the Old Dominion liner Madison, outward bound from Norfolk to New York, with about 150 passengers and a heavy cargo of perishable freight, was entangled in the great steel net placed across the navigable waters leading to Hampton Roads by order of the Navy Department. According to observers at Old Point tonight the Madison is still lying at the entrance to the Roads. A dense fog still enshrouds the Roads.

The accident, said to have been due to the dense fog hanging over the Roads and to the misinterpretation of signals, occurred last night. Efforts throughout the night and yesterday failed to clear the steamer of the entangling net. Expert divers from Norfolk and the navy yard were rushed to the scene.

The Madison left her Norfolk pier at 7:30 last night for New York, and, according to her Captain, an hour later came to a stop 500 feet from the buoys marking the channel. The required signal, four sharp blasts of the ship's siren, was sounded. The destroyer and naval tug guarding the net and whose duty it is to open up the channel for the passage of ships, returned the signal. The Captain of the Madison is positive he did not proceed until he received the required signal by the patrol boat, and then only at slow speed. He also says he was in the channel.

When the Madison proceeded, however, the net was encountered. In a moment the bottom and propellers were absolutely enmeshed. Only prompt stopping of the ship prevented the loss of her propellers. The wrecking tug Merritt, carrying divers, was rushed to the scene on wireless calls for assistance.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The first official admission that nets were being put down to protect certain ports against submarine attacks was contained in an announcement made at the War Department today, saying that such an obstruction had been planted in Hampton Roads. Until this was issued army and navy officials here had refused to comment on reports that nets were being spread across harbor entrances. The bulletin said:

"The efficiency shown in the rapid construction and planting of the submarine net which now closes Hampton Roads is a matter of satisfaction to the War Department. This net, which is considerably over a mile long and in places nearly sixty feet deep, was built and planted by the Coast Artillery Corps at Fort Monroe, Va. Swinging sections, or gates, are provided to permt of the passage of shipping, which is convoyed through the net by naval vessels."

"The King's Binding"
A Royal Book in fact as well as in name

ONE of the most beautiful books ever bound between covers is the new Encyclopaedia Britannica in "the King's Binding." This is truly a superb example of craftsmanship—called "the King's Binding" because the binding (designed by the great binder, Zaehanesdorf of London) was selected by George V, King of England, for the set of the new Britannica which is now in His Majesty's personal library in Buckingham Palace.

And it also was the choice of other monarchs who own the Britannica—the Czar of Russia, the German Emperor, the King of Spain and the Emperor of Japan. A set of the new Britannica in "the King's Binding" is also owned by President Poincare, of France; Lord Bryce, ex-President Taft and by eight other Americans who delight in fine bindings as well as good books. This magnificent binding is limited to 30 sets and only 14 sets remain unsold.

The binding, which reflects the personal choice of King George the Fifth, is a magnificent three-quarters crushed French Levant of a rich dark green, with lighter green silk cloth sides. Each of the 29 volumes is hand-bound and hand-tooled, inlaid with gold leaf. The upper right-hand corner of each volume is embellished with the King's heraldic design in gold. (In the case of other owners, of course, their own heraldic design or monogram ornaments this corner, following an English custom which began about 1461, in the reign of Edward IV.)

An interesting incident which led to the suggestion of "the King's Binding" is revealed in the Britannica article on "Knighthood," which is illustrated with five full-page, 23-color plates of insignia of some of the principal orders of knighthood. These plates were especially drawn for the Britannica from the insignia which belonged to King Edward VII, and their arrangement in the Britannica is "in accordance with His Majesty's wishes and command."

Naturally, the cost of "the King's Binding" is very much higher than the regular Cambridge Issue; but, considering the superb craftsmanship, the price is exceedingly reasonable. The few remaining sets of this very limited issue are offered at $445 cash (for the entire 29 volumes), or you can obtain a set for a first payment of $25 and eighteen monthly payments of the same amount. This price includes any coat of arms or monogram which may be desired as an upper-corner embellishment of each volume.

In every respect (except for the royal insignia) these few remaining sets of "the King's Binding" are like the original in Buckingham Palace. To own this magnificent set is to possess a most beautiful specimen of modern-period bookbinding, as well as to have available the Britannica's vast fund of knowledge.

If you are interested in having the new Britannica in this splendid binding, we shall be glad to show you a volume of "the King's Binding," sending it either to your home or office

To those who admire rich book covers but are not inclined to the luxury of the royal binding, and yet desire the Britannica for constant use, the Britannica bound in full morocco is unusually attractive. The leather is a rich dark red, from selected skins of South African goat; each volume artistically tooled in gold. This set sells for $267.50 cash, or it may be purchased for a first payment of $5 and 57 monthly payments of $5 each.

Another beautiful binding is the full limp suede, which sells for $255.25 cash for the entire twenty-nine volumes, or for a first payment of $5 and 54 monthly payments of the same amount. (A very original bookcase is included.)

Both of these sets are very limited in quantity and, when the remaining sets are sold, no more can be offered. Like "the King's Binding," they are printed on the famous India paper and from the same plates.

No more of the handsome dark green sheepskin sets are to be had. Of the unbound sets originally set aside to be bound in sheep, some 800 were left when we discovered that not a single skin of this popular leather was procurable. Recently, however, we obtained a small quantity of red morocco skins sufficient to bind 400 sets in three-quarter morocco, and so long as these sets last they will be sold at the same price asked for the sheep—$203.25 cash, or $5 first payment and 44 monthly payments of equal amount.

Any one who desires the large-size Cambridge Issue of the Britannica for what he can get out of it and who is not interested in or cannot afford the costlier bindings, can still obtain a set bound in substantial green cloth. This gives you the complete Britannica, word for word as kings and emperors and presidents own it, and serves every practical purpose for which this great library of facts and information is designed. This sells for $166.75 cash or $5 down and 36 monthly payments of the same amount.

But to be sure of obtaining any set of the Cambridge Issue, you must act promptly. Sets now on hand will not last long. No more India paper is available for printing additional sets of the Britannica, and the war has also made it virtually impossible to get the leather for binding.

Full information about the Britannica in the higher-priced Cambridge Issue or the popular "Handy Volume" Issue will be sent on request. The "Handy Volume" Issue is identical with the Cambridge Issue in contents, and differs only in size of page, type and price, selling for about 60% less.

When you write, say which issue you are interested in—but don't delay. Sets are selling fast, and these are the last that can be offered printed on India paper.

GERMANS CAPTURE TRENCH AT TRANSLOY

Seize British Point of Support on the Somme, Taking 30 Prisoners.

GUNS ACTIVE NEAR VERDUN

French Batteries Shell Teuton Lines Northwest of Hill 304, West of the Meuse.

BERLIN, Feb. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—A British attack on the German lines in the vicinity of Messines, Belgium, yesterday broke down under the German fire, the War Office announced today. The Germans took a few prisoners.

A German raiding party captured a point of support near Le Transloy, on the Somme front, taking thirty prisoners. The text of the statement follows:

Army of Field Marshal Duke Albrecht of Wuertemberg: Just before noon a British advance was launched west of Messines, after artillery preparation. It failed and one officer and six men remained in our hands.

Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: On the Artois front some British reconnoitring advances were repulsed. On the north bank of the Ancre a raiding party surprised a British outpost and brought back seven prisoners.

After brief fire had had its effect our thrusting detachments captured by storm and in hand-to-hand fighting a point of support south of Le Transloy and marched off the garrison of thirty men as prisoners.

Army group of the German Crown Prince: In the Champagne and in the Vosges minor enterprises were conducted by the French without result. On the northeast front of Verdun a German surprise attack on a hostile outpost was successful, the outpost being caught in broad daylight.

This evening's report says:

Aside from the successful repulse of a French local attack between the Meuse and the Moselle, there has been little activity during the rain and fog that has prevailed on the western front.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The British official communication dealing with the fighting in France, issued tonight, says:

Under cover of a heavy bombardment, which completely destroyed our trench, strong enemy detachments, assisted by flammenwerfers, yesterday evening rushed one of our small advanced posts south of Le Transloy.

We entered the enemy's positions during the night east of Armentières and east of Ypres and did considerable damage to his defenses.

The enemy blew a mine yesterday southwest of Wytschaete. No damage resulted. We bombarded enemy trenches during the day in the neighborhood of Sailly-Saillisel, La Bassée, Messines, and Wytschaete with good effect.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The official communication issued by the War Office tonight reads as follows:

Our batteries shattered the German trenches northwest of Hill 304. There were intermittent artillery actions at several points along the front.

A German airplane was brought down by our special guns south of Cernay.

Two German attempts against the Belgian posts south of Steenstraete were repulsed in the cousre of the night. The usual artillery fighting occurred today.

The afternoon report said:

Rather spirited artillery actions occurred between the Oise and the Aisne, in the Avocourt sector, north of Flirey, and west of Wattweiler. We made a surprise attack on trenches of the enemy and took prisoners. Elsewhere the night passed quietly.

SAYS BRITISH LOST HEAVILY.

Turkish Report Asserts a Brigade Was Nearly Annihilated.

BERLIN, Feb. 19, (via Wireless to Sayville.)—A report from Constantinople headquarters, dated Feb. 18, reads:

South of the Tigris the main body of the enemy withdrew about ten kilometers, (a little more than six miles,) leaving behind only observation posts in the positions evacuated by us Feb. 17.

The enemy, after vigorous artillery prepaaration, attacked our position near Felahie with about one brigade, succeeding temporarily. In another attack on our position, after hand grenade and hand-to-hand fighting, we recaptured the position completely. The hostile brigade was almost completely annihilated. We took prisoner one officer and sixty men and captured one machine gun. Our losses were insignificant.

Dardanelles—Lieutenant Meincke on Feb. 17 shot down a British airplane mounting two machine guns. The occupants were made prisoners. Neither was injured.

Felahie is near Sanna-i-Yat, the point on the Tigris below Kut-el-Amara at which the British official report yesterday recorded a repulse.

BOYCOTT A LONDON PAPER.

Distributing Agencies Won't Handle the Newly Started National News.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Fleet Street is just now looking for the early suspension of a new journalistic venture.

A Sunday morning paper called The National News made its first appearance Sunday. It came out with an imperial program, and its first issue contained messages of good will from from Colonial Premiers, Neville Chamberlain, Director of National Service, and the Prime Ministers of Russia, Italy, and Spain. A well-founded report has it that part of the funds back of the enterprise were subscribed by a British Minister just now very much in the public eye.

The organizers had overcome the difficulty of obtaining a supply of paper, had made contracts for printing, and had a good show of advertising. It was, however, practically impossible to buy copies of The National News Sunday for the reason that the regular distribution organizations refused to handle it. What influence prevailed upon those organizations to take such an unusual attitude is a secret on which Fleet Street's guessing powers are concentrated.

Unless the ban on the distribution of The National News is withdrawn, subject to pressure of still higher influences, its career seems bound to be a short one.

REQUISITIONS ALL LEATHER.

War Office Also to Take Over All Raw Jute in Britain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Consul General Skinner today advised the State Department by cable from London that the British War Office was taking over possession of leather stocks in England.

"War Office," reads Mr. Skinner's message, "takes possession of all leather, finished or unfinished, and intends to take possession of all such as can be produced prior to March 31. Order applies to vegetable-tanned bands, butts, backs, half backs, and sides."

The dispatch added that Great Britain also had requisitioned all unsold stocks of raw jute.

British Take Two Sinai Posts.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A British official communication issued this evening says: "The British by a surprise attack captured the entire garrison of three officers and twenty-one men of a post the Turks had re-established at Bir el Hassana, on the Sinai Peninsula, while the garrison of a similar post at Nekhl fled, leaving prisoners in the hands of the British."

FOR PREFERENTIAL TAX ON BRITISH IMPORTS

Committee Also Favors a Wider Range of Duties as a Basis for Commercial Treaties.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—The committee on the commercial and industrial policy of Great Britain today issued a report in which the recommendation was made for imperial preference on customs duties hereafter imposed on imports. The gist of the report, which is signed by Lord Balfour of Burleigh; Arthur J. Balfour, Foreign Secretary; Lord Faringdon, Chairman of the Great Central Railway; George J. Wardle, Labor Member of Parliament; Sir Charles Parsons, President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and others, follows:

"In the light of our war experience, showing the necessity to stimulate production of foodstuffs, raw materials, and manufactures within the Empire for the safety and welfare of the Empire as a whole, we recommend that the Government declare its adherence to the principle of imperial preference in respect to any customs duties hereafter imposed on imports. Further, with a view to achieving this object, it is advisable to take into consideration the desirability of establishing a wider range of customs duties which would be remitted or reduced on products and manufactures of the Empire and which would form the basis of commercial treaties with allied and neutral powers."

The report was issued in view of the approaching Imperial Conference to be held in London. The committee says that although the resolution may, in the abstract, be distasteful as acting in restraint of trade, yet for the sake of the unity of the Empire attempts should be made to meet the declared wishes of the colonies and dominions.

The issue of the committee's report is likely to revive the political conflict of free trade against protection. The free trade element in Parliament is very powerful, and it is expected it will press for a day to discuss the resolutions with a view of eliciting the Government's attitude toward them and the cognate question of the Paris Conference resolutions.

The Government will have difficulty, it is believed, in meeting the conflicting views of those contending that free trade England has borne the strain of the war better than protectionist countries, and that the imposing of duties will offend allied countries, and those of the party representing agricultural interests, who demand duties protecting the home food production, which the war has shown to be imperative for national security in the future.

Lobby gossip in Parliament tonight credited to Premier Lloyd George the intention of announcing in Parliament on Thursday, in addition to drastic restrictions on imports, a new State policy with regard to agriculture going far beyond the mere war-time expedient. It was said that the Premier's policy would have as an object the creation of confidence among farmers through the submission of proposals indicating domestic agriculture would hereafter be recognized as an essential industry.

Warning Against Alienating Us.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Feb. 21.—The resolutions of Lord Balfour of Burleigh's Committee, recommending Imperial tariff preference, are criticised or commended by the newspapers in accordance with the individual views they have held on the subject since the Colonial Conference of 1902.

The Times regards the resolutions as "a great step forward on the path of imperial unity and an essential preliminary to the future economic arrangements of the Allies."

On the other hand The Daily Chronicle says:

"The difficulty of a tariff is greater now than it was fifteen years ago, because we have allies. Besides considering their interests in a very special light we have also to avoid holding out anything like a post-war threat against neutrals. Our cause has already suffered a good deal in the estimation of Americans because such a threat seemed to be held out by the resolutions of the Paris conference.

"No doubt in our present mood many of us would feel little compunction about penalizing our present enemies; but even there we must not forget that to erect post-war barriers against Germany or Austria may drive the valuable custom of those countries away from us to others."

RUSSIANS CHECK RAIDERS.

Czar's Submarine in Black Sea Sinks a Steamer and 8 Schooners.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 20, (British Admiralty, per Wireless Press.)—A minor infantry operation on the Russian front, in which the Teutonic troops were beaten off by the Russian fire, is reported in today's War Office statement. Further successful operations by Russian submarines, in the Black Sea, also are announced. The statement reads:

Western Front.—The enemy, about a battalion strong, attacked in close formation our position in the region of Slaventine, northwest of Podgaste, being met by our concentrated fire and forced to return to his entrenchments.

Rumanian and Caucasus Fronts.—Scouting reconnoissances and reciprocal firing is proceeding.

In the Black Sea one of our submarines sank a steamer and eight schooners near the Bosphorus.

BERLIN, Feb. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville,)—Marked activity by raiding detachments and numerous outpost affairs have occurred along the Russian and Rumanian fronts, according to today's Army Headquarters report, but there have been no major infantry engagements. The statement reads:

Eastern Front.—Front of Prince Leopold—On some sectors of the front the Russian artillery was more active than on the previous day, especially south of Lyrsyatylace and on the east bank of the Narayuvka.

Front of Archduke Joseph.—In the Carpathians, during a snowstorm, a Russian blockhouse south of Smotrec was successfully raided. The blockhouse was blown up after the capture of its defenders.

North of the Slanio Valley, after driving away hostile forces and repulsing counterattacks by outposts, we advanced our fighting position on a ridge of heights.

Army Group of Field Marshal von Mackensen.—Near Radulesti, on the Sereth, raiding detachments entered a Russian position and after destroying it returned with eleven prisoners and several machine guns.

The following official communication from Austro-Hungarian Headquarters, dated Feb. 19, was received here today:

Front of Prince Leopold of Bavaria.—East of Lipnicadolna, on the Narayuvka River, (Galicia,) the Russians exploded a mine under our foremost trenches and occupied the crater. We reconquered the position in a counterattack.

South of Brzezany a Russian attack, made after strong mine-throwing preparations, was repulsed.

In Volhynia one of our detachments carried out a successful enterprise.

KAISER'S GIFT TO NATION.

The collection consists of 9,000 engravings of the sixteenth and eighteenth centuries. It includes the works of many Dutch, French and Italian masters.

POLES HANG BACK FROM GERMAN CAUSE

Only a Few Hundred, It Is Said, Have Enrolled in the "National". Army.

PREFER MUNITIONS WORK

Many Voluntarily Accept Employment in Germany — New Regime Unpopular.

GENEVA, Feb. 20.—The appeal to the Poles in the newly-proclaimed kingdom to enlist in the Polish army and fight under Austro-German banners for the new State has fallen on deaf ears, according to recent information brought from Warsaw by neutral and German visitors.

The units of the new army have been formed, and a considerable number of officers and men from the old Austrian Polish Legion and from the Polish troops of the German Army have been brought to the occupied districts of Poland to instruct the Polish volunteers, but only a few hundred troops, most of them students in Warsaw University, who volunteered in the first flush of enthusiasm following the proclamation of the kingdom, are said to have come forward. The two Polish army corps, of which the German advocates of the establishment of the new Poland spoke as the probable contribution from the kingdom to the armies of the Central Powers, are declared to show no signs of ever coming into existence.

The Polish workmen and peasants, it appears from the accounts of developments in Poland that have reached here, show a decided disinclination to take up arms, and the labor shortage in Germany has been made good in no small degree, it is asserted, by an exodus to Germany of Poles who feared being impressed into the new army and who decided to seek safe employment in the German munitions factories or on farms rather than face the risk of being drafted as soldiers.

Nor are large elements of the Polish population displaying any keen enthusiasm, returning travelers say, for the civil organization of the new kingdom. The fear of the consequences in case Russian rule should by any possibility be re-established exercises a lively deterrent influence upon many Poles, even those not suspected of any liking for Prussia, it appears, and there is asserted to be a widespread determination, even among the leaders who would probably welcome the permanent establishment of a new kingdom under Austro-German auspices, to wait and see the result of the war before they commit themselves to the new order.

The Polish Council of State came into existence only after long negotiations between the various parties, and the attempt to bring the representatives of all these parties into the Council had finally to be abandoned. Men like Prince Lubomirsky, who headed the provisional civil government of Warsaw after the Russians were expelled, are quoted as saying frankly that, according to the law of nations, they are still Russian subjects and cannot participate in a Government under the new order until they are formally absolved from their obligations under the peace settlements.

Sentiment in Germany as to the advisability of proclaiming the Polish kingdom was divided from the start, and the reported lack of enthusiasm among the Poles over co-operation by their arms and with their counsels in the establishment of a national entity under Austro-German oversight seems to have carried over to opposition many Germans who at first favored the new kingdom.

Some speculation is being indulged in, therefore, as to whether the indicated developments may not affect Germany's ultimate policy toward Poland in the peace negotiations. In some quarters, indeed, the question is being asked: "Why should Germany make sacrifices to establish the kingdom if the Poles are not willing to fight for it?"

SAYS RITTER ACTED ALONE.

Federal Council Quoted as Denying Any Part in Peace Move.

BERLIN, Monday, Feb. 19, (by Wireless to Sayville, Feb. 20.)—The Overseas News Agency quotes from the Frankfurter Zeitung this communication, which, according to that paper, was issued by the Swiss Federal Council.

"The action of Dr. Paul Ritter, the Swiss Minister at Washington, in reference to the re-opening of negotiations between the North American and German Governments was taken without instructions from the Swiss Federal Council or from the Foreign Department. Concerning the contents of communications between Berlin and Washington, which were merely transmitted by the Federal authorities, obviously nothing can be said at this time."

The foregoing is the first official denial by the Swiss Federal Council that it directed Dr. Ritter to reopen negotiations between the United States and Germany after their rupture. Dr. Ritter in his memorandum to Secretary Lansing stated that "the Swiss Government has been requested by the German Government to say that the latter is willing to negotiate with the United States, provided the commercial blockade against England will not be broken thereby." What purported to be the German version of the proposal stated that Dr. Ritter made an offer to Germany to mediate in negotiations with the United States and that Germany accepted the offer. It has since been stated in news dispatches from Geneva that Dr. Ritter acted on his own initiative and without instructions from the Swiss Government.

BONAR LAW REBUKES HOUSE PACIFISTS

Answers Charge of Rejecting German Overtures from Lust of Conquest.

ASSAILS FOE'S TERRORISM

And Tells Peace Advocates No Other Parliament Would Have Listened to Them.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—In the House of Commons today addresses were made by Arthur Ponsonby, Charles P. Trevelyan, Philip Snowden and other pacifists, the tenor of their speeches being that the Entente Allies were pursuing a war of conquest, and reproaching the Government for its failure to respond to the German peace overtures. Mr. Snowden asserted that the longer the war continued the less likely was it that terms satisfactory to either party would be found.

Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that in no other country would such speeches have been listened to patiently. It was impossible to conceive, he added, that there was any other method for securing peace and the liberties of the people than by fighting until the German military machine was beaten. He repudiated the contention that Germany's intensified submarine warfare had started after the Entente's peace terms had been formulated, and quoted the German Imperial Chancellor in support of his statement.

Throughout the conflict, Bonar Law continued, the Germans had acted on the principle that they would win the war by terrorizing civilian populations and neutral countries. Germany, he said, must be taught that such crimes as she was committing would not pay. He said he was astonished at the suggestion of peace at a time when the greatest of neutral nations had recognized the difference between right and wrong. Germany's excesses, he concluded had passed the limit which could be tolerated by neutral countries.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Feb. 21.—The newspapers this morning agree that Chancellor Bonar Law was right, when in replying to three pacifist members, he ventured to express the opinion that they would not have been listened to for such a length of time in any other Parliament in Europe. The Daily Telegraph says:

"Beyond doubt, the House of Commons is the most tolerant representative assembly in the world, and its patience and forbearance have perhaps never been more sorely tried than yesterday, when the pacifist group deliberately inflicted a full recital of their anti-national views and opinions upon the House. They affected no modesty; they set out to be as provocative as possible and arranged their speakers so as to secure a subtle crescendo of irritation to the end. Snowden was armed with interminable quotations and read them mercilessly. He made the House thoroughly unhappy, and delighted in its disquiet. If anyone interrupted he punished the whole assembly, which was waiting to hear Bonar Law, by reading another long extract.

"Snowden proved to his own complete satisfaction, but to the undisguised contempt of the House that there was not a penny to choose in the matter of morality between this country and Germany. He rejected with horror Decatur's well-known saying, 'my country, right or wrong,' but as Bonar Law acutely remarked, Snowden need not trouble himself on that head, for he was always 'convinced that his country is wrong and that his countrymen are scoundrels.'

"Ponsonby was most insistent that Britain should come out of the war with empty hands and pockets. Trevelyan was sorely troubled over the note in which the Allies set forth their terms of peace. But for that note, he said, Germany would never have embarked on her latest campaign of naval ferocity. Trevelyan called loudly for 'a negotiated peace' at once before any further bloodshed took place."

Bonar Law's reply, says The Times, called forth cheers with almost every sentence.

RAID BY SNOW TUNNELS.

Austrians Get Into Italian Trench, but Are Driven Out.

ROME, Feb. 20.—Today's War Office statement reads:

Last night the enemy entered through galleries dug under the snow one of our trenches near Casere Zebio Pastorile. After heavy hand-to-hand fighting the enemy was repulsed with considerable loss, leaving some prisoners in our hands.

Yesterday we again shelled the railway station of Tarvis.

On the remainder of the front there were artillery duels, which were more intense in the area east of Gorizia and on the Carso.

BERLIN, Feb. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The following bulletin from Austrian Army Headquarters dated yesterday, was received here today:

Italian Theatre.—During the last few days the Italian artillery has again been lively on several sectors of the mountain front. Tarvis was repeatedly shelled. This morning patrols of the Seventy-third Regiment brought in twenty-two prisoners from an enterprise against hostile positions east of Monte Cedbio and north of Assio.

HERTLING WANTS WAR FOUGHT TO FINISH NOW

Bavarian Premier Disagrees with von Hindenburg's Theory of Continuing Indefinitely.

BERLIN, Feb. 19, (by Wireless to Sayville, Feb. 20.)—Count George F. von Hertling, Bavarian Prime Minister and Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Federal Council, is quoted by the Overseas News Agency, in an interview, as follows:

"We hold that the war must now in all circumstances and by all means be brought to a decision. Field Marshal von Hindenburg recently stated that theoretically the war could be continued indefinitely, as our losses were considerably smaller than our increases in men, that our frontier walls on the east, west and south were unshakable and that our economic life was continuing as formerly, although on a smaller scale than in peace times, yet in a reliable, safe fashion.

"Our adversaries, however, can also in theory continue to fight indefinitely, provided they can maintain the importations of war materials across the seas. Therefore, if we wish to bring the war to an end we must cut off these importations.

"The means to accomplish this lies in our submarine navy. Our peace proposal was declined because our enemies did not dare to confess to their people and their allies that all those great promises by which they were induced to enter the war and by which they are holding them together in the war cannot be kept, and that the entire military enterprise already has failed and the deceived nations, instead of realizing their promised accretions of wealth and territory, are now in a financial and economic chaos.

"We desire to bring the war to an end because we are shocked by war's sorrows; our adversaries wish to continue the war because they are terrified by the horrors that peace would bring.

"The war draws nearer its termination. The final struggle will be of the greatest dreadfulness, but it must be fought to the bitter end."

GERARD TO VISIT MADRID.

Will See the Premier and Perhaps Also the King.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Feb. 20, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—Mr. Gerard with four other gentlemen will arrive here from Paris tomorrow.

In diplomatic circles it is believed that importance attaches to this journey, for the original plan of proceeding direct to Barcelona has been altered, and the Spanish Government has been officially informed of the journey.

I am assured that Mr. Gerard will have an interview with the Premier, Count Romanones, and the Foreign Minister, and perhaps also with a more exalted personage.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—James W. Gerard, the former American Ambassador to Germany, and Mrs. Gerard left Paris tonight for Madrid. They will proceed from there to Corunna.

Among those at the station to see them away were the Comte d'Ormesson, representing Premier Briand; Arthur H. Frazier, Second Secretary of the American Embassy, representing Ambassador Sharp, and Lieut. Commander William R. Saylem, Naval Attaché. Hearty farewells were exchanged as the train pulled out.

NEW ALLIANCE IMMINENT?

Report That Central Powers, Russia, and Japan May Combine.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 20.—The Boston Herald has received a dispatch from its Washington correspondent, in part, as follows:

"Forthcoming sensational moves on the part of Russia and Japan, it is authoritatively stated, are seriously complicating the international problems now before President Wilson. Germany's every effort at present, it is said, is bent toward effecting a separate peace with Russia. This explains the delay on the part of German naval commanders in forcing a rupture with the United States according to reliable information.

"Japan, it is known, has already negotiated an agreement with Russia. The next development, it is stated, will be a triple alliance of the Teutonic Powers, Russia and Japan, for the partition and control of the Far East.

"Germany, under the terms of this agreement, will exercise suzerainty over the Balkans and Near East. Russia will be permitted to dominate India. Japan will be given free sway in China. The phase of the coup said to be giving greatest concern to official Washington is the possibility of a warlike move on the part of Japan against the Philippines, if not against continental America.

"With the release of the Austro-German forces now holding the eastern frontier against Russia, it is pointed out, the Central Powers would be free to launch a gigantic offensive against France and England. The Japanese threat would prove a sufficient distraction for the United States to preclude any immediate action against Germany or any co-operation with England and France.

"It is understood that great pressure is being brought to bear on the President to take additional decisive steps against Germany at once, in order to prevent Russia's defection from the allied lines and the subsequent alarming international developments mentioned.

"It is known that the United States military forces in the Philippines are so disposed that they can be mobilized at Corregidor, in Manila Bay, on an hour's notice, and that the island fortress is completely provisioned for a year's siege. No attemjt, it is said, would be made in the event of war with Japan to hold any point in the islands except this fortification at Manila."

WORK TO REPATRIATE ITALIANS IN RUSSIA

Rome and Petrograd, Now in Accord, Sorting Them Out from Enemy Prisoners.

ABOUT 25,000 AFFECTED

Captured as Austrians, 4,000 Have Already Been Sent to the Land of Their Affections.

With the closing for the Winter of the port of Archangel, the work of transporting to Italy the thousands of prisoners of Italian nationality found among the vast host of Austro-Hungarian soldiers captured by the Russian armies entered into a new phase, that of thoroughly classifying the Italians held in Russian prison camps and preparing for their wholesale transportation to Italy in the Spring. Writing from Petrograd late in December, Virginio Gayda, an Italian newspaper man, points out some of the difficulties of this work. After estimating the number of prisoners already sent to Italy at 4,000 and declaring that the 20,000 natives of "Italia irredenta" still desirous of leaving Russia and going to Italy all have the same right to have their wish granted as the lucky 4,000, Signor Gayda says:

"At the beginning, as we have remarked, the solution of the problem was hampered by many errors. A start was made by consenting to the return to Italy of only those prisoners who could pay their own way and who were officers; then forty soldiers were allowed to be repatriated, and finally, after a delay of more than a year, there was organized the direct transportation to Italy at the expense of the Government of the groups of prisoners who have now arrived there. A mission, directed by Colonel Bassignano and composed of twenty-one officials, came to Petrograd with a vague program that had been changed en route. At first it had the task of embarking only one regiment of 3,000 prisoners, already selected and concentrated at Kirsanof, but later it was authorized to gather together as many men as it was able to, always provided that they were 'real Italians.'

"Thus there have been hesitations down to the last moment, and there has been no sign of any organic program or of a definite and complete grasp of the situation. The mission has succeeded in embarking 1,000 more men than the estimate made at the time of its organization, has been able to give a definite status to the mass of Italian prisoners that are still in Russia, to the enormous amount of national interests that they represent, and to the movement of the political currents that are interwoven around these unfortunate and ignorant people; and, striking the balance of its labors and its investigations, will now be able to give the Government an exact idea of this war problem.

"The entrance of Italian prisoners into Russia began very early, right at the beginning of the war, and has continued up to today, and to such a degree that merely for the period following Brusiloff's last offensive—in June, 1916—a well authenticated estimate placed the number of Italians that passed through Kief at a minimum of 8,000. The 'unredeemed' have entered Russia, especially during the first year, not as Italian prisoners, but as Austro-Hungarian prisoners in general. They have suffered the common fate. Mixed up with Germans, Magyars, Slovenians, Poles, without distinction, they have been divided and sent in groups here and there throughout all the Governmental divisions of Russia. All traces of thousands of them have been lost. The Russian authorities did not count them, nor separate them by nationalities, when they entered, so that today these authorities are not even able to tell with exactitude how many there are or where they are located.

"Therefore a census by nationality of the 'unredeemed' prisoners in Russia is impossible at present. It is possible to make estimates and to verify them through local investigations, through information furnished by Italian prisoners who have wandered over Russia, and through the Slav committees that make tours of inspection through the camps of the Slav prisoners. The figure of 25,000 Italians, which has already been mentioned, is not exaggerated. The prisoners are scattered throughout at least forty-five governments of Russia in Europe and Asia, in Central Siberia, in the Abur district, as far as Vladivostok and down in Turkestan. Mingled with the Germans and Magyars, these prisoners are able to send out news but slowly and in a confused way, but every day letters reach here revealing new lost oases of exiled Italians."

A PLEDGE OF PATRIOTISM.

Covenant Adopted by Presbyterian Laymen's Convention.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 20.—Two thousand persons, attending the convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Presbyterian Church, indorsed a covenant of patriotism, presented by William T. Ellis, which reads:

"I am an American. I love my country and have unshakable faith in her character and in her mission. Therefore I pledge myself with all my powers to a maintenance of her historic ideals and to a fulfillment of her mission as God's apostle of Christian democracy to mankind.

"I shall seek to discourage all disparagement of America, and to promote every form of intelligent national loyalty and patriotism. Whatever I can do to increase love and reverence for my country and for her flag I will freely and fearlessly and joyously do.

"Above all partisanship and self-interest I solemnly place my country, promising to pray for America, to support America, and to honor America by my character and by my work. This pledge I make in humble dependence upon the God of our fathers, whose favor alone has made our country great."

HARVARD WOULD SHIFT M'KAY'S MILLIONS

Court Considers the Proposition to Surrender $22,000,000 Legacy to M. I. T.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University, and President MacLaurin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, were present in the Supreme Court today, ready to testify before Judge Pierce in regard to the petition by the President and Fellows of Harvard for leave to transfer to the Institute of Technology the legacy left by Gordon McKay for the establishment of a strong and efficient department of engineering education and research as a part of Harvard University under the charge of a Harvard Faculty and under the exclusive jurisdiction of that institution.

The matter came before the court today on the question of preparing the case for presentation to the full bench, which is to determine whether Harvard has the right to transfer the fund to Technology, and if in so doing she will be carrying out the instructions of the testator.

When Mr. McKay died he left a large fund for the establishment of the school in question. Later it was agreed that Technology was better equipped than Harvard to carry out the work as planned by Mr. McKay, but two of the trustees under the McKay will, Frank T. Stanley of Swampscot and George E. Gilbert of Newton, opposed the transfer. These trustees have already turned over to Harvard $2,247,261.12, and when the last annuitant under the McKay will dies Harvard will receive a total approximating $22,000,000.

NEW DEGREE AT OXFORD.

University Provides Ph.D., Especially to Attract Americans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A statute providing for a new doctorate at Oxford which, it is hoped, will attract advanced students, especially from the British Dominions and the United States, and which was introduced on Jan. 30, was further considered in congregation at Oxford yesterday.

The chief point was whether the title of the degree should be doctor of letters and doctor of science or doctor of philosophy. An amendment was moved by S. Ball, a Fellow of St. John's College, to make the title that of doctor of philosophy. He said it was the degree of philosophy, which Americans wanted and quoted a letter from an American professor which showed how well it was understood there. The amendment was seconded by A. C. Clark, Corpus Professor of Latin, and was carried by 89 votes to 19.

RECEIVER FOR STEAMERS.

Move to Prevent Yale and Harvard Being Sent Back to the Atlantic.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20.—A receiver was appointed in the Superior Court today for the steamers Yale and Harvard, to protect the second mortgage bondholders and forestall a demand for the return of the steamers to the Atlantic Coast. The receivership will not interfere with the operation of the steamers under charter to the Pacific Steamship Company.

The Yale and Harvard are owned by the Metropolitan Steamship Company of Boston, which recently went into the hands of a receiver, who, according to the complaint filed here, has been collecting $30,000 a month and half the net profits from the charterer of the ships and applying the money to the first mortgage indebetedness.

auguration was referred to Vice President Marshall, he explained the constitutional provisions.

"Under the law of the land," he said, "I, having been elected Vice President of the United States, can take the oath of office any time I please on or before March 4. I could have the oath prepared in writing today, if I wanted to, and take it in the presence of a notary public and file it with the Secretary of the Senate.

"The Senate has nothing whatever to do with my election. It is customary for the President pro tempore of the Senate to swear in the Vice President. However, should the President decide not to call the Senate in extra session, I shall take the oath of office on Saturday or Sunday and file it with the Secretary of the Senate. Of course, a formal ceremony in the Senate on March 5 could be held just the same. I do not have to take an oath in the presence of the new Senate. By virtue of the law and my election, I am presiding officer of the Senate whenever it is in session, and not by the will of the Senate.

"If the President of the United States has nothing to submit to the new Senate and concludes that it is unnecessary to call it in extraordinary session, there is nothing the Senate could do about it. The present Senate dies March 4, and the Senate of the Sixty-fifth Congress is unorganized and could not convene until next December unless called by the President."

If the special session is not called, newly elected and re-elected Senators, thirty-two in all, will not be sworn in on March 5. Within the memory of present members such a thing never has occurred.

URGES LOCAL OPTION LAWS.

Whitman Explains His Views to Anti-Saloon Leader.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 20.—The attitude of Governor Whitman on local option is set forth in a letter to William H. Anderson, Superintendent of the New Anti-Saloon League, which was made public today. The Governor wrote in part:

"I am not opposed to an increase in the liquor tax as a revenue measure. But no tax increase or automatic limitation of the number of saloons will take the place of legislation embodying the American principle that the people have the right to say in every community, by their votes, whether or not they desire that the sale of liquors shall be permitted within the community boundary. This State has granted this privilege to towns. I am unqualifiedly in favor of granting the same right to the cities of the State.

"I am sure that you must be aware that in this matter I am not assuming a new attitude. I have repeatedly stated my position on this question and have urged the Legislature to give local option to the people of New York. I have not committed myself to any particular plan, bill, or measure, but I believe that the time is come when our people realize the absurdity and the iniquity of a law which declares that towns may decide for themselves whether they will have saloons, but that the cities of our State have got to have them whether they want them or not."

It was learned tonight that none of the local option bills thus far introduced has the approval of the legislative heads.

ALBANY, Feb. 20.—Senator Edward J. Serious accidents, he said, have resulted from the practice. A similar bill, it is understood, will be introduced in the New Jersey Legislature.

WRANGLE OVER MILLS BILL

Attacks on Mayor Mitchel and Partisan Politics Mark Heated Debate for Three Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 20.—The State of New York will seize and turn over to the United States Government all the land at Rockaway Point wanted by the War Department for fortification purposes.

A bill, paving the way for such action, was introduced in the Senate this afternoon by President pro tem Elen R. Brown after a three-hour debate, bristling with attacks on Mayor Mitchel and more deeply tinged with partisan politics than any previous discussion of a legislative measure at any recent session.

But for the absence of Governor Whitman, who is in Buffalo, the bill would have been passed at once. As it was, the measure was advanced to third reading and will come up for final action tomorrow. Governor Whitman, over the long distance telephone, assured Senate Leader Brown that he would send in an emergency message upon his return tomorrow to insure prompt action.

The Brown bill provides for an amendment to the law governing condemnation proceedings, by creating a Special Condemnation Commission composed of the Adjutant General, the State Engineer, and the State Superintendent of Public Works, to seize on behalf of the State any land needed by the Federal Government for defense purposes. The Governor is empowered through the bill to turn such land over to the Federal Government by proclamation, which automatically would give the Federal authorities title, terms either to be agreed upon afterward between the State and the original owners, or, this failing, be adjusted in the courts.

Speaker Sweet of the Assembly said tonight that the passage of the Brown bill in that branch of the Legislature was assured. Senator Robert F. Wagner, minority leader of the upper house, and Joseph M. Callahan, who occupies the same position in the Assembly, gave ironclad pledges of undivided Democratic support for the bill.

The three-hour wrangle which preceded the introduction of the Brown bill started when Senator Ogden L. Mills asked unanimous consent to introduce a bill permitting New York City authorities to transfer to the Rockaway Pacific Realty Company certain lands under water near the site of the proposed fortifications, the transfer of which he declared essential to the successful carrying through of negotiations pending between that company and the Federal Government for uplands needed in connection with the defense project.

Doubts Fitzgerald Telegram.

Incidentally, Senator Mills read a telegram from Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, informing him that Colonel Frederick V. Abbot had full power to speak and act for the War Department. In view of that message, Senator Mills said he could place no reliance in the telegram to Senator Wagner yesterday from Congressman John J. Fitzgerald, representing Secretary Baker as repudiating the second Mills bill, now dead.

In response to a question as to why condemnation proceedings would entail greater expense to the Federal Government, Senator Mills said that the seizure of the lands wanted by the War Department would cut off the property of the corporation from all access except by water, and that owing to this there would be heavy consequential damages. These, he said, could be avoided by the city transferring to the company upland which would supply means of access from land.

Little further on in the debate Senator James A. Foley, who represents Tammany Leader Murphy's district in the upper house, made the assertion that the Rockaway Pacific Corporation would profit hugely from the deal at the city's expense and more than insinuated that certain realty concerns with which Mayor Mitchel's good friend, ex-Senator William H. Reynolds was identified, had a ten-year option on the land and a 10 per cent. interest in any profits made in the transaction.

"As I understand it," said Senator Foley, "the corporation transfers to the Goernment at a price of $4,400 per acre a tract of 134 acres, the total purchase price being $600,000. It requires from New York City at $500 per acre, 160 acres, a total of $80,000. This would leave the corporation with a gain of $520,000 and 26 acres of land to boot. Assuming that it will cost $1,400 per acre to fill in the land under water, which I have been told is an exorbitant estimate, the profit to the corporation would be $370,000."

At this point Senator Mills accused Senator Foley of playing politics.

"Yes," shouted the Tammany Senator. "Politics is being played here, but not by us. It is the same brand of politics that was played by the city administration when it pleaded international complications as a justification for tapping private telephone wires."

Senator Mills resented the suggestion that friends of ex-Senator Reynolds were interested in the transaction under discussion.

"Why," said Senator Foley, "the Senator was present when the man representing the War Department stated that the first suggestion that the Federal Government acquire this land came from William M. Greve, Vice President of the Neponsit Realty Company, which sold the park to the city. I understand that Greve holds an option on the Rockaway-Pacific Company's land. My recollection is that this land had been leased to Greve or his associates for ten years and that the profit to the owners would mean a profit of about 10 per cent."

Senator Mills here sprang to his feet, his face flushed and his voice tremulous.

"I am going to make an absolute statement and challenge contradiction," he cried. "I declare here and now that politics and nothing else is behind this attack. I say here and now that the Fitzgerald telegram, if not absolutely false, was misleading. I say further that this attempt to drag Greve and Reynolds into this debate is not only unjustified but shocking. I deny emphatically that Greve would profit to the extent of 10 per cent., 1 per cent., or any per cent. from this transaction."

Attack on Mayor Mitchel.

Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara, head of the public service inquiry, asked Senator Mills whether he would be willing to have a provision prohibiting any profits to the men named incorporated in the bill. Senator Mills objected to the question, and said he would not answer it. Senator Mills sat down and Senator Thompson launched an angry tirade against Mayor Mitchel.

"If I lived in New York City," he said, "I would want a different man for Mayor next time. The Mayor of Middleport (a little community in Niagara County, where Senator Thompson lives) is ten times as big a man as Mayor Mitchel. He never talks about whipper snappers. He is a dignified man. And he has never yet had to cover up a crooked deal with a cloak of patriotism."

Senator Wagner referred to his proposal, which was turned down, that a small committee be appointed to make a private investigation for the information of the Senate.

"We might have found out," he said, "whether the private corporation was not attempting to extort from the Federal Government what it could not obtain except by wrapping the American flag around its so-called gold brick."

"In view of the opposition from the Senator I withdraw my bill," exclaimed Senator Mills.

"Well, well, that's cheap and undignified even for you," retorted Senator Wagner.

"I refuse to become sponsor for a bill characterized as a gold brick wrapped in the American flag," said Senator Mills angrily.

Senator Brown intervened and offered his bill after first listening to an assurance from Senator Wagner that the minority, after stating its objections, would have supported the Mills bill.

"That bill," said Senator Brown, "has been so plastered with charges of sordidness, impure motives, favoritism, and wrongdoing as to make me utterly unwilling to back it. I am not willing to favor a bill featured in newspaper headlines as a measure designed to enrich a private corporation, ready to fill its treasury as a result of legislative incompetence."

GOVERNMENT BLOCKED UNTIL IT GETS LAND

Col. Abbot Explains Why Legislature Was Asked to Ratify Bargain with Realty Company.

Colonel Frederick V. Abbot, Chief of the Engineering Corps, U. S. A., for the District of New York, yesterday said emphatically that the great issue—adequate defense for New York City at Rockaway Point at the earliest possible moment—had been pushed into the background by secondary issues. He added that until proper fortifications were erected at Rockaway Point, lower New York could be destroyed by shells from enemy battleships in time of war.

"Altogether we need at Rockaway Point about 300 acres," he said, "counting land above and under water. We have provided about 100 acres by the bill already passed by the Legislature to cede land under water to the United States Government. But this is virtually of no use to us for purposes of adequate defense until we get the other 200 acres, giving us a strip across the peninsula. We have an agreement with the owner of this land, the Rockaway Pacific Company; the purchase price and all other details have been fully passed upon, and the closing of the purchase depends only upon one condition. The 200 acres which the Government would buy would cut off the company from access to its land as it would not be advisable for the Government to give the company a right of way through the reservation. The Rockaway company agreed to sell the land at what was regarded by the Government's representative at a fair price, provided there could be obtained for the company the right to build an approach to its land by filling in land now under water on the Jamaica Bay side. As this would not interfere with our plans we thought it offered a solution of the problem.

"The city owns this land under water, though I believe the title to it is disputed by the Rockaway company, but the clearing up of the matter required legislation that would authorize the city to sell its rights to a private party, in order to complete the agreement with the Rockaway company. That is all the interest the Government had in the matter.

"There would have been only one other way for the Government to proceed; that was by condemnation proceedings. That, as I understood it, would take about two years, and we did not feel that we ought to face such a long delay."

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Led by a brass band, more than 100 residents of Far Rockaway and Arverne, L. I., invaded the Capitol this afternoon to appear at the joint hearing of the Senate and Assembly Cities Committees and urge the passage of Assemblyman McWhinney's and Senator George L. Thompson's bill separating the district from Greater New York and creating the new municipality Rockaway City. With the delegation came William S. Devery, formerly Chief of Police of New York City, and ex-Borough President Joseph Cassidy of Queens, recently restored to citizenship by Governor Whitman. Neither took more than a silent part.

Opposing the bill, Edward J. McGoldrick, Assistant Corporation Counsel, representing New York City, said that the city would file a brief for its case. The Citizens' Union and several real estate organizations in New York City argued against the measure, saying that to allow the Rockaways to secede would set a dangerous precedent. It would, they asserted, destroy New York City's credit to permit any section of the municipality to get up and leave whenever it felt so inclined.

Assemblyman O'Hare, who represents the district which includes the Rockaways, was one of the most vehement opponents of the bill. He declared that it was his belief that the majority of the inhabitants of that district, the Fifth Ward, did not want to get out of the city's jurisdiction. Mr. O'Hare was heckled by the entire crowd from the moment he began to speak until he sat down.

Defenders of the measure were numerous. They contended that people living in the Rockaways were just as badly off under the domination of New York City as are the Belgians in the grip of Germany. Several said that among them was arising a sentiment similar to that which actuated the Colonial patriots in 1776. It was pointed out that the distance from their district to the City Hall was greater than that from the City Hall to Peekskill or to Montclair, N. J., and that in such circumstances it was impossible to secure fair legislation.

Senator Mills told those favoring the measure that unless they could arrive at some financial agreement with New York City covering the separation it would be no use to push the bill, as it would be killed, as was a similar one in 1915, by the Mayor's veto.

A committee from the Rockaways will call on Mayor Mitchel and Controller Prendergast next week, in an effort to come to some sort of an agreement.

MAY AMEND FUMES BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 20.—Representatives of the Citizens' Union, the West Side Business Men's Association, and the State Department of Health appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee today to indorse the bill introduced by Senator Ottinger providing for the revocation of the charters of New York State corporations whose factories on the New Jersey side of the Hudson River are held responsible for noxious fumes and the smoke nuisance along Riverside Drive. Under the terms of the bill the State Health Department is authorized to order the charters revoked.

Senator J. Henry Walters, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said that the measure probably would be referred to the Attorney General for an opinion, as there were many legislators who insisted that it was too drastic. Many of the committee, he said, thought that the proper course was to empower the Attorney General to bring action in the courts rather than to confer drastic power on the Health Department. It is probable that before the bill is reported out it will be amended along these lines. No one appeared to oppose the measure.

MARYLAND TROOPS TO QUIT.

After Border Service Most of Regiment Will Not Re-enlist.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 20.—Almost to a man, the members of Maryland's Fifth Regiment, back from eight months' service on the Mexican border, are "done" with the National Guard. In every company there are feelings of dissatisfaction and discouragement. Of 100 men who were asked today whether they intended to re-enlist when their present terms expired only one responded in the affirmative.

The men say their stay on the Mexican border was futile and the country "God-forsaken." They complain of work that they never bargained to do, hardships imposed upon their families, and the financial losses through being away from work.

ANSWERS TO MEXICAN NOTE.

Honduras Suggests Waiting to See What Other Nations Will Do.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20.—The Bolivian Government's note in reply to the communication of General Carranza, proposing an embargo on all supplies to belligerent nations, as received here, did not contain a proposal for a meeting of American neutrals to discuss the situation.

The note suggested that all American countries, neutral in the European war, should sign a declaration of principles declaring that attacks of submarines on neutral vessels were against all rights, even within a blockade zone, and that submarines should be employed only under the rules providing for the capture of prizes. It added that if Mexico wished to sign such a declaration Bolivia would be glad to have her reply.

The reply of Honduras, while praising the Mexican note, suggests waiting to see whether there can be concerted action along the lines indicated by the United States, Chile, Argentina, and Brazil.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20.—Salvador today answered General Carranza's note. The reply lauds Carranza for his good offices in seeking to end the European war.

REPORTS ON MEXICAN MINES

Fletcher Explains Modification of Confiscation Decree.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher today notified the State Department that all mines in Mexico not now in operation, and whose owners have not filed reasons why work has not been resumed, or have not asked for extensions of time, are to be declared forfeited and taken over by the Mexican Government. The mining interests which have filed reasons will receive a further extension, to be fixed according to the circumstances of each particular case.

A protest against the enforcement of the Carranza decree of Sept. 14 was received by the State Department today from the Mine and Smelter Operators' Association, sent from El Paso, under yesterday's date.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 20.—Ambassador Fletcher visited Foreign Minister Aguilar this afternoon, conferring with him for a long time. Though the visit was unofficial, it was learned that important matters were discussed. The date for the envoy's official reception has not been fixed. Most of the members of the American colony and diplomatic corps are visiting the new Ambassador and informing him regarding the Mexican situation.

WOULD EDUCATE MEXICO.

Society with That Aim in View Is Organized Here.

A campaign to educate Mexico is to be undertaken by an organization of persons interested in public education here, including several college Presidents, according to Paul Kennaday, General Secretary of the Mexican Cooperation Society of 70 Fifth Avenue. He said last night that co-operation was to be the chief idea in the campaign, and that the committee would work with a number of the leaders in Mexico.

When it was suggested that any comprehensive campaign to educate Mexico would take unlimited funds, he said: "We hope to interest the people in the campaign to such an extent as to raise funds for the costs of the campaign and for experimental purposes. Of course the education of the Mexican people must be paid for by taxation, but we can pay for experimental schools which the committee expects to establish."

The teachers in such schools, Mr. Kennaday said, would be Mexicans. While there were a number of Mexicans interested in the work, he said, the organization was to be a distinctly American project. The headquarters of the society is in the building which houses many of the leading pacifist societies.

Among the persons named by Mr. Kennaday as behind the society were Professor Frank Boaz of Columbia, Dr. David Starr Jordan, Paul V. Kellogg, Henry Sloan Coffin, Henry K. Simkowitch, Professor Henry M. Muzzey, Miss Chrystal Eastman, and Presidents Shanklin of Wesleyan, Mitchell of Delaware, and Thwing of Western Reserve.

WEST SIDE CONTRACT TO BE RECONSIDERED

Board of Estimate Will Send New York Central's Track Plan Back to Committee.

FUTURE TO BE SAFEGUARDED

Compromise with Railroad May Be Sought to Avoid Transfer of Any City Property.

The Board of Estimate, at the conclusion of its public hearings, possibly on next Tuesday, will refer back to its Committee on Port and Terminal Facilities the contract with the city sought by the New York Central for the relocation of the company's tracks on the west side. The proposed contract, called a "form of agreement," was accepted tentatively by the committee a month ago.

Opponents of the plan hailed the decision to recommit as proving that serious defects, which the committee did not dare to sponsor, had been uncovered in the public discussion, but this was vigorously denied last night by Controller Prendergast.

"It was never intended to ignore the suggestions that might be made by honest critics at the public hearing," said Mr. Prendergast. "It was, therefore, decided by the board a month ago, by the adoption of a resolution introduced by me, to refer the form of agreement back at the conclusion of the hearings so that such modifications as the hearings disclosed were necessary might be incorporated. It is unfair to suggest that the decision to recommit was reached because important defects had been discovered to demand it."

The session yesterday did not, as had been expected, close the case for those opposed to the proposed contract, and other organizations and individuals will be heard when the hearings are resumed on Monday. But enough has been heard by the board to permit a forecast of some of the important objections to be considered by the Committee on Port and Terminal Facilities after the proposed contract is recommitted, with the view to effecting, if possible, a compromise with the railroad.

One of these affects the charge that the contract would alienate from the city large areas of water front in violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the charter providing that property of this character is to be reserved by the city for the general public. The Committee on Port and Terminal Facilities had taken the position that the sale to the railroad of water front lands was not an "alienation" within the meaning of the charter because more than an equal amount of similar land was being bought back from the railroad, but many opponents of the project, and especially Julius Henry Cohen, representing the Citizens' Union, opposed this view.

Another objection which will be considered by the committee is that the proposed contract does not provide adequate safeguards for developing future freight and terminal facilities for other railroads that may seek to enter the city. Renewed consideration will also be given to the Riverside Park problem, and a sub-committee, assisted by an eminent landscape architect, will go over the specifications to see if there is any danger of the park being injured. The question of the adequacy of real estate appraisals will likewise be gone over again, although the action of the committee in this regard will depend to a very large extent on an opinion by Charles E. Hughes, the city's special counsel, to be made public today. Mr. Hughes was recently requested by the Corporation Counsel to pass on the right of the Public Service Commission to inquire into these appraisals and franchise rights, as the commission had been requested to do by Governor Whitman.

The confusion as to the author of the bill which sought to repeal the Act of 1894 by opening park lands to the use of railroads under the consent of the Board of Estimate, which was responsible for the clash between Mayor Mitchel and Charles L. Craig, attorney for the West End Association, was cleared up yesterday.

Calvin Tomkins, former Dock Commissioner, accepted full responsibility in a letter to Mayor Mitchel. Mr. Craig had brought on the quarrel by asserting that he and members of the West End Association had been informed that the bill had been prepared in Mr. Mitchel's office while he was President of the Board of Aldermen.

"I find on inquiry," Mr. Tomkins wrote in his letter to the Mayor, "that the Dock Department proposed the Pollock bill in 1913, and I willingly assume the responsibility therefor.

"The railroad company must have absolute assurance of continuity of transit through the park, and if the additional tracks for this cannot be obtained, the company will not be justified in making the vast terminal investment downtown, the success of which is dependent on the service line through the park.

"The West End Association's advocacy of depressing the tracks in their present position is a great step toward a settlement."

Reginald Pelham Bolton submitted a substitute plan at the meeting of the board yesterday. It provides, among other things, for an extension of Riverside Park over the main line rails of the road and a terminal and car storage yard restricted to the southerly line of Twelfth Avenue, between 134th Street and 153d Street, leaving lands and lands under water along that area free to public uses. He submitted a blueprint draft, which will be considered by the committee.

James P. Davenport, former municipal justice, speaking for the North Manhattan Taxpayers' Association, indorsed the physical features of the plan tentatively accepted by the Committee on Port and Terminal Facilities, but objected to the provision which, he argued, exempted the road from paying special franchise taxes.

Stanley M. Isaacs, lawyer, representing taxpayers north of 135th Street, offered an estimate by George S. Rice, consulting engineer of the Public Service Commission, to disprove an assertion by Controller Prendergast that it would cost $6,000,000 to build a roof over the proposed freight yard at Manhattanville. Mr. Rice estimated that it would not cost more than $2,000,000. Mr. Isaacs insisted that a roof was necessary to protect the property interests of residents living near the proposed yard.

Alderman Harry Robitzek of the Thirty-eighth District in the Bronx, asserted that residents in the Bronx were opposed to the proposed contract, but that they insisted that any future contract accepted by the city should contain a provision for cheaper fares on New York Central trains from the Bronx to Grand Central Station, and also that more trains be provided.

A resolution demanding that Nelson P. Lewis, Chief Engineer of the Board of Estimate; Harry P. Nichols, Chief of the Bureau of Franchises, and Tilden Adamson, Director of the Bureau of Contract Supervision, be invited to submit their views on the New York Central's proposed west side changes, was introduced by Alderman McGarry of Brooklyn at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Aldermen at the suggestion of Bird S. Coler, who believes the three officials would agree with him that the proposed undertaking was inimical to the interests of the city. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules.

SUFFRAGE BILL PASSES.

Assembly, Voting 124 to 10, Indorses the Amendment Proposal.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 20.—The concurrent resolution, offered by Assemblyman Brereton, proposing a woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution, was adopted in the Lower House this morning by a vote of 124 to 10. Those voting against the resolution were: Republicans—Willard S. Augsbury of Jefferson, William C. Baxter, John G. Malone, and Clarence F. Walsh, all of Albany; Robert McC. Marsh of New York City, Henry L. Grant of Lewis, Warren T. Thayer of Franklin, and Wilfred E. Younker of Kings; Democrats—Martin McCue of New York and William H. O'Hare of Queens.

The Senate Judiciary Committee did not take up the resolution this afternoon, but, according to Chairman J. Henry Walters, it will be reported favorably, and will soon come up for a vote. The Judiciary Committee has determined that the Woman Suffrage amendment shall be the only question submitted to the voters this Fall.

SENATE PASSES BILL TO PUNISH SPIES

Adopts, 60 to 10, Drastic Measure to Insure Secrecy About Forces and Fortifications.

DEATH EXTREME PENALTY

Administration Urges Legislation Authorizing Use of Force in 3-Mile Limit to Protect Neutrality.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—While the Senate today was passing the fourteen neutrality bills reported last week by the Judiciary Committee, now combined in one comprehensive measure, Secretary of State Lansing and Assistant Attorney General Warren appeared at the Capitol to make a strong plea for the passage, with slight modifications, of four additional bills introduced at the same time, but not yet approved. In response to their appeal the committee has promised to take the supplementary measures under immediate consideration.

The Administration is particularly anxious to obtain the immediate passage of the bill giving the President authority to use the armed forces of the United States to detain ships of any nationality in American harbors or to carry out any other plans which are necessary to insure the neutrality of the United States or to "enforce obligations imposed upon the United States by the law of nations, by treaties or conventions to which the United States is a party, or by the statutes of the United States."

Senator Overman, Chairman of the committee, explained today that the immediate purpose of the bill was to prevent violation of the neutral obligations of the United States by the escape of interned German ships or by the organization of expeditions to provision belligerent ships at sea.

Submarine Question Not Involved.

Both Senator Overman and officials of the Department of Justice were careful to explain today that the bill was drawn to give the President power to use force only withn the three-mile limit to protect the neutrality of the United States, and that it had no relation to the use of force in dealing with the submarine question, nor to the question of providing protection for American ships through the danger zone abroad. Senator Overman characterized as absurd the report that the bill was drawn to give the President full authority to handle the German crisis. The phraseology of the bill will probably be slightly modified before its passage to make sure that there can be no misinterpretation of its meaning.

The other bills provide penalties for the coinage of counterfeit money for the use of revolutionary factions in foreign countries with which the United States is at peace, which this Government has not recognized; for attempting to interfere with the export trade of the United States by crippling in any way the manufacturing plants or shipping with which it is carried on; and prohibits any person from serving as the agent of a foreign Government in the United States without being formally recognized by the President of the United States.

The drastic Espionage bill, included in the comprehensive measure approved by the committee, passed the Senate this morning without further debate, by a vote of 60 to 10, ending the three days' fight made against it by Senators Cummins, Lee, Works, La Follette, and Vardaman. The ten who voted against it were Senators Borah, Cummins, Gronna, Kenyon, La Follette, Norris, and Works, Republicans; and Lane, Lee, and Vardaman, Democrats. The bill now goes to the House. It was passed without any of the amendments with which its opponents sought to modify its effect.

The opposition to it was based on the ground that it imperiled freedom of speech, and that through its power to prevent the obtaining of information it killed the opportunity for legitimate and necessary criticism of the means employed in national defense measures. The Senators who led the fight against it maintained that it was an entirely unnecessary act, which was being passed under fear of an emergency and was, therefore, not receiving the consideration it deserved.

Punishment of Espionage.

The section relating to espionage makes it a crime, punishable with a fine of $10,000 or two years' imprisonment, to approach or enter any places connected with the national defense to obtain information to which the persons concerned are not "lawfully entitled." The phraseology goes into minute detail with regard to the methods by which the information may be obtained and recorded. When the act is committed for the purpose of aiding a foreign Government in time of peace the penalty is made twenty years' imprisonment, while if it occurs in war time it is extended to imprisonment for life.

The punishment of a person who in war time collects information with respect to the movement, numbers, or disposition of the armed forces of the United States, or its military plans or supplies, in order to communicate it to the enemy is death or a fine and not over thirty years' imprisonment. The penalty is reduced to three years' imprisonment when there is no intent to give the information to the enemy, but when it might be useful to the enemy. The President is empowered to designate such places not named in the bill which he considers as belonging to the national defense.

Besides the Espionage bill, the measure includes sections providing penalties for making untrue statements to influence the conduct of a foreign Government in its relations with the United States; prohibiting the impersonation of foreign officials; regulating the issuance of passports; authorizing the President to seize, detain, or condemn munitions of war which are being sent to nations with which the United States is at peace; and giving the President power to take drastic steps to govern the movement of foreign ships in American harbors in case of a national emergency and guarding against the infliction of damage on them.

OPPOSES SPY BILL SECTION.

Union Against Militarism Sends Committee to Capital.

An emergency meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Union Against Militarism was held at the McAlpin Hotel yesterday to discuss Section 3 of the Spy bill. Charles T. Hallinan of Washington, a member of the committee, said that the union had no fault to find with the spirit of the bill but objected to the loose wording of Section 3. He said it would apply drastically to pacifist organizations, to any one who exposed graft in army contracts, to newspapers which criticised the army or navy, or were opposed to war. The section fixes as a penalty for violation imprisonment for thirty years to life or a fine of not more than $10,000. It is aimed at "whoever in time of war shall by any means spread or make reports or statements or convey information with intent to cause dissatisfaction in or interfere with the operations or success of the military or naval forces of the United States."

An appointment was made by telephone with members of the House Committee, and local members of the Executive Committee left last night for Washington. Members of the committee are Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, Miss Sopho Nisba Breckenridge of Chicago, Mrs. Crystal Eastman Benedict, Miss Lillian D. Wald, Miss Alice Lewisohn, Amos Pinchot, Miss Emily Green Balch, Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott, L. Hollingsworth Wood, and Paul U. Kellogg.

SENATE RUSHES ITS LEGISLATION

Porto Rico and Danish West Indies Measures Passed—Emergency Revenue Bill Up.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The anxiety which the Senate showed today to pass bills which it has had under consideration made it plain that it is about to begin the final rush to complete its necessary work and if possible avoid an extra session. Besides shoving through three measures in which the Administration is particularly interested because of the dangerous international situation, it took up the Emergency Revenue bill, passed by the House this afternoon, and will continue work on it in night and day sessions.

The three bills which the Senate passed are those fixing a form of Government for Porto Rico and the Danish West Indies and the Neutrality bill. Every effort is being made to place West Indian affairs in as settled a condition as possible, not only to discourage insurrections which might distract the attention of this Government at a critical time, but also in some measure to prevent breeding places for possible plots against the Panama Canal. The Neutrality bill, which embraces a strong section directed against espionage, is an active national defense measure.

The Porto Rican bill passed finally without a roll call, after a woman suffrage clause had been dropped out to check threats of a filibuster against this feature of it. The bill contains liberal suffrage provisions, extending the vote to practically all male inhabitants under existing Porto Rican law, and including citizens of continental United States subject to local residential and similar restrictions. The Porto Rican Legislature has full jurisdiction over electoral restrictions as in the case of State Legislatures.

The bill providing a Government for the Danish West Indies is also liberal in its allowance for self-government. It provides for the appointment by the President of a Governor who may be an officer of the army or navy, and gives the President the privilege of naming minor officials who are natives of the islands. Local judicial tribunals are left in their present form. The bill also provides for the appointment of a commission of three to investigate conditions on the islands.

TO HOUSE TROOPS ON CANAL

Baker Asks for an Emergency Appropriation of $13,371,625.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—An emergency appropriation of $13,371,625 for the construction of barracks, quarters, storehouses and other buildings necessary for the accommodation of troops on the Panama Canal Zone was requested in a communication sent to the House today by Newton D. Baker, the Secretary of War.

"It is deemed imperatively necessary," says the Secretary's letter, "that the building program for 1918 as determined upon by the military and naval authorities of the Panama Canal Zone be allowed by the present Congress, in order to provide quarters for troops now housed on the zone, and to care for additional increment in the authorized program for garrisoning the zone.

"Present accommodations are entirely inadequate. There are now four regiments of infantry quartered in temporary buildings. It is agreed by all authorities concerned that the buildings occupied by these regiments must be abandoned in another year. These old buildings were formerly occupied by Jamaica negroes, and were condemned as insanitary several years ago."

Secretary Baker says the estimates submitted are inclusive of amounts for "municipal work, roads, sewers, etc., necessary for the totally completed garrison." A special board appointed to investigate the needs of the military post on the zone has recommended the improvements, and the report has been approved by the department.

CUBAN CHIEFS FEAR GOMEZ HAS ESCAPED

Havana Hears Rumor That the Rebel Leader Has Fled to Honduras by Ship.

AMERICAN ARMS RECEIVED

Menocal Asks United States for More Munitions to Quell the Revolt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Feb. 20.—Interest in Cuba's revolt centred tonight in the probable fate of General José Miguel Gomez, leader of the rebels in Santa Clara Province and said to be the man behind the whole seditious movement. The Government expected all last night to hear of Gomez's capture, but as all today passed without news of his capture, or even an engagement with his forces, fears were expressed that he may have given the troops the slip, which is not improbable, as he is in territory where he was born and reared and of which he is reputed to know every rock and crevice.

An insistent rumor is current here that Gomez succeeded in escaping the vigilance of the ships blockading egress by the coast and embarked for Honduras. THE TIMES correspondent learned from good authority that Gomez before leaving Havana transferred his extensive real estate holdings to Pelayo Garcia, law partner of Dr. Ferrara. Garcia is expected to arrive in New York today.

The dearth of news caused renewed hopes among Liberal sympathizers in Havana, who declare that the fact that the Government is giving out little or no news means that it is concealing the real facts. Persons arriving from the interior, however, fail to report any new developments, neither do the foreign legations which have representatives throughout the island and are making an active effort to keep abreast of developments.

Part of the arms and ammunition bought by Cuba from the United States Government arrived today. They will be principally used for equipping the National Militia, which is being quickly organized with encouraging results for the Government. The Government has asked the United States for the privilege of purchasing more arms and ammunition. A number of airplanes for the use of the army also arrived today, which the Government intends using for scouting and bomb-dropping.

The special Judge in charge of the conspiracy cases returned an indictment today against General Ernesto Asbert, former Governor of Havana Province until he was convicted of killing General Aramando Avia, the Havana Chief of Police. Asbert has been in jail for several days. Thirty-eight other indictments were found.

General Cebreco returned today from an inspection of Oriente Province. He told President Menocal that, while the principal cities in that province were in the hands of the rebels, loyal forces are mobilized in many Oriente towns, ready to combat the rebels as soon as the Government gives the word. He said it would be a comparatively easy matter to recapture Santiago. Dr. Juan Guiteras said today that he feared the results of the revolt in Oriente Province from the standpoint of health, because it renders impossible the campaign which the Sanitary Department began there against malaria, which, it is supposed, was imported from Jamaica and Haiti. It has appeared in an extremely virulent form.

Lieutenant Diaz telegraphed from Manzanillo, Oriente, that he had reorganized the municipal police, jailing all the former police who had joined the rebels. Three deserting soldiers surrendered at Manzanillo today. A number of rebels surrendered at Santo Domingo, saying that their leader would soon do likewise. Fifteen rebels of a party led by General Pino Guerra also surrendered.

A Havana merchant was arrested today charged with making 400 khaki uniforms for General Gomez. The uniforms are exactly like the army's, and the Government officials say Gomez did this for the purpose of making the impression that most of his men were from the army. Warrants for Gomez, charging sedition and revolt, were issued today.

Mayito Menocal, the youngest son of the President, has enlisted in the National Militia.

Colonel Colassa has telegraphed to the Government details of the taking of Santi Spiritus, wherein seven soldiers were wounded and thirty prisoners were captured, including a deserting army Lieutenant. The rebels lost fifty killed and sixty-five wounded. Among the latter, it is reported, was Colonel Carlos Mendieta, Liberal candidate for Vice President. In another encounter at Balnquisal the rebels lost between twenty-five and thirty killed, including a deserting army Lieutenant. Colonel Lazo reports that the rebels are surrendering in squads. He says there is no doubt that General Gomez commanded the rebels. Colonel Lazo issued a proclamation offering deserting soldiers, forced against their will to join the rebels, five days to rejoin the army. Many are availing themselves of the offer.

HAVANA, Feb. 20.—Veterans of the War of Independence tonight issued a statement addressed "to the country." The address was signed by General Emilio Nunez, President of the society, and expresses the gratitude of the veterans to the Government and people of the United States for their attitude in the present conflict.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Feb. 20.—At a mass meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce today it was resolved to send this dispatch to President Wilson:

"The military authorities ruling in Santiago have maintained order and guaranteed life and property, and also endeavored to re-establish normal economic life. In order to accomplish this rapidly and without complete ruin, it is necessary, in the judgment of the commercial and producing classes, to have the diplomatic mediation of your Government. With that object in view these people assembled unanimously solicit you, the good friend of Cuba, to interpose your good offices to obtain rapidly the desired end of present conditions. Immense losses, which seem sure to occur, can be avoided through your mediations."

The American steamer Tivives sailed today for the United States.

SANTIAGO TO ADMIT SHIPS.

Cuban Rebels Will Allow Freight to Enter Port They Control.

Representatives of the Cuban Liberal Party in New York received a cablegram from Commander Fernandez at Santiago yesterday saying it was not yet possible to hold the elections in the disturbed precincts. Exporters, however, were informed that steamers and freight destined for Santiago would be admitted to the port.

CUT DOMINICAN PAYROLLS.

American Officials Lop Off Salaries of Many Government Officials.

SANTO DOMINGO CITY, Feb. 8, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Great savings in the Dominican salary list have been effected by the military government established by the United States on Nov. 29 last. The possibility of this developed in the process of sorting claims brought up as a consequence of the suspension of payment of salaries for several months back, beginning in August, before the establishment of the temporary military government, after the collection of all revenues had been taken under American supervision. Salary payments under the Dominican Government were not resumed until shortly before Christmas.

Many disputed or doubtul salary claims remain unsettled, these being chiefly those of politicians who, in the eyes of the military authorities, have not been able to prove that they actually performed government service. Many Dominicans who have sought to have salary claims allowed have explained that their appointments were made with no idea that they should perform any services. They were appointed, they explained, to offices to which no duties were attached. As confirmatory of this it is said authoritatively that approximately 80 per cent. of the last Dominican budget of $2,500,000 was for salaries.

In addition to dispensing with the services of a great many persons who were not in the habit of performing any work, many offices have been abolished or temporarily suspended. By administrative order the Dominican Assembly has been suspended until further notice and all salaries and perquisites stopped. In view of the fact that there is no President and no Dominican Cabinet the salaries attached to these places are remaining in the treasury.

The Dominican Army has been largely reduced, because there is no longer any necessity for a Donimican Army, in the opinion of the American officials in charge of the Government. Military courts are no more, there is no longer pay for members of the staffs of the Governors of the provinces, and the salary of the Lottery Inspector has ceased. Scores of offices have been abolished or suspended. There has been a total salary saving of $250,000 a year.

STEAMERS COLLIDE IN FOG.

Mallory Liner Not Badly Damaged When Hit by Clyde Boat.

During the thick fog which hung over the harbor and impeded traffic yesterday morning the Mallory steamship Alamo, bound for Tampa, and the Clyde Line freighter Cherokee, incoming from Wilmington, were in collision off the end of Pier 36, North River.

The Alamo had a few of her bow plates dented in and went to dry dock for examination, but the damage was not considered serious. Both vessels carried a few passengers and had big cargoes.

Samuel Gompers Warns Against Use of Funds from Private Hands.

PUBLIC AGENTS IN CONTROL

Prof. Dewey Says More Intelligent Employers Now Demand Vocational Training.

Speaking on "Learning for Earning" at the annual meeting of the Public Education Association at the Hotel Biltmore last night, the principal speakers, Dr. John Dewey, Professor of Philosophy and Education, Columbia University; Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and Owen R. Lovejoy, Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, declared that vocational training in public schools must be free from industrial exploitation. Dr. Dewey said in part:

"Reading, writing, figuring, with a little geography and a smattering of other things, are what the great mass of those who attend our schools leave with. A few get something more. He is poorly acquainted with the history of the efforts to improve elementary education in our large cities who does now know that the chief protest against progress is likely to come from successful business men. Nothing in the history of education is more touching that to hear some of these successful leaders denounce as undemocratic the attempts to give all the children at public expense the fuller education which their own children will enjoy as a matter of course.

"Of late years the more intelligent employers have awakened to the fact that the mere Three R's are not good industrial training. Hence there has arisen a demand for vocational and industrial education as if this were an entirely new thing, while in fact it is a demand that the present industrial education be so modified as to be efficient under the conditions of present machine industry, rapid transportation, and a competitive market."

"The public schools," Mr. Gompers said, "nourish the fountain head of democracy. It is therefore fundamental that money for public education should come from public funds. Money from any other source or under private control has bred and must inevitably breed suspicion and poisons the well and source of information. Schools must be democratically managed, organized, and financed.

"If there be philanthropic friends of education who desire to bestow a portion of their enormous holdings to the cause of education, let them arrange for a graduated income tax or some other effective means. But public agents must be given control of the money. The taint of capitalistic exploitation can only be purified by restoring to the public ill-gotten gains to be used by the people for the people."

Mr. Lovejoy urged a complete change of the school curriculum. He said it was impossible for one teacher to properly instruct thirty to forty children. He also urged clean vocational training.

FERRYBOAT IN CRASH 13 PASSENGERS HURT

Freighter Rams the Scandinavia of the Lackawanna Midway Across the Hudson.

WOMEN FAINT IN PANIC

Injured Transferred to Tug and Brought to Christopher Street —Tide Blamed for Collision.

As the big ferryboat Scandinavia of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad was plowing her way against a heavy tide across the North River from the Barclay Street slip to Hoboken at 8 o'clock last night with 350 passengers aboard, she was rammed in midstream by the steel freighter Joaquin Mumbru of the Spanish Line, which was outward bound.

The boats came together with such force that the bow of the freighter remained fast in the side of the Scandinavia, and a hasty examination showed that the ferry had been damaged badly below the water line. The Captain of the freighter gave the order which kept the engines in operation, and in this way the ferryboat was taken to within a short distance of its slip on the Hoboken side of the river. The pumps were put at work, and when it became apparent that the ferryboat could make the remainder of the trip in safety the freighter backed away.

At Hoboken several of the passengers, among them Charles Eskowitz of 435 Engelic Street, West Hoboken, were treated at the emergency hospital and sent to their homes. Eskowitz had sustained severe contusions of the head. The others suffered from shock and slight cuts and bruises. The ferryboat was then taken to drydock for repairs with all of her pumps working at top speed to keep her afloat. The freighter returned to her berth at Pier 62 North River.

There was a good deal of mystery about the cause of the collision and there was no explanation given last night by the officials of the lines involved, though the general opinion along the water front was that the tide was to blame. An investigation will be made.

The injured taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, this city, were:

BACHMANN, AMELIA, 36 years old, 330 Livingston Avenue, Lyndhurst, N. J.; shock.

GEAR, MARGARET, 28, telephone operator, 125 Grand Street, Hoboken; contusions of back.

LAURIA, GEORGE, 40, foreman, 268 Ridge Road, Kingsland, N. J.; contusion of arm and laceration of scalp.

MURRAY, ALEXANDER, 28, stenographer, 906 Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn; contusions of head and body.

WILLIAMS, JOSEPHINE, 30, dressmaker, 199 Twenty-ninth Street, Brooklyn; lacerated scalp.

The injured who were removed to their homes were:

BLOCK, JOSEPH, 26 years, driver, 160 Fifth Street, Jersey City; lacerated hand.

BOZZA, WILLIAM, 20, clerk, 714 Shipping Street, Hoboken; lacerated hand.

HERMANN, AUGUST, 30, 429 North Maple Avenue, East Orange, N. J.; contusions of body.

KOONMANN, JOHN, 21, clerk, 50 Columbia Avenue, Jersey City; lacerated wrist and knee.

PROPTE, GIUSEPPI, 38, pressman, 515 Grand Street, Hoboken; lacerated knee, shoulder, and hand.

RAGI, AUGUST, 24, clerk, 308 Madison Street, Hoboken; lacerated knee, arm, and hand.

The ferryboat was in charge of Captain John Duffingson. M. E. Valdis is given in the registry as Captain of the freighter, which is 330 feet long and has a gross tonnage of 2,703.

call your attention, Mr. President, to the fact that, in the midst of plenty, we and our families are facing starvation.

The rise in the cost of living has been so great and uncalled for that even now we are compelled to deny ourselves and our children the necessaries of life.

We pay for our needs out of the wages of our husbands, and the American standard of living cannot bet maintained when potatoes are 7 cents a pound, bread 6 cents, cabbage 20 cents, onions 18 cents, and so forth.

We call to you, Mr. President, in this crisis that we are facing to recommend to Congress or other authority measures for relief.

When another speaker announced that he was going to name a committee to take charge of the demonstration, Mrs. Harris nominated herself, but she was not named. This was the committee: Mrs. Bessie Adler, Mrs. Sarah Erdman, Mrs. Pastor, mother of Rose Pastor Stokes; Mrs. Rosenthal, Mrs. Siberkovitz, Miss Eva Schwartz, and Miss Mary Rodin.

Mrs. Harris announced that there would be a mass meeting in Rutgers Square at 10 o'clock this morning, from which she would lead a demonstration to the City Hall.

The committee will open an office on the ninth floor of the Forward Building, 175 East Broadway, this morning, from which the campaign will be conducted. It was not decided last night when the "demonstration of half a million women and children" would take place. Within three days, it was said by some of the leaders.

"If the Municipal Government would appropriate $1,000,000 to pay for the expense of the distribution of food at cost, it would go far to solve the crisis on the east side," said Panken. "It is up to the city to do something, and experience elsewhere has shown that the municipal distribution of food is the best thing for the city to do."

Practically all the speakers said the Government—city, State, and national—should take over the distribution of food. This was loudly cheered by the audience, most of whom were Socialists.

WOMEN IN BREAD RIOT AT DOORS OF CITY HALL

With Babies in Arms They Cry for Cheaper Food—Dispersed by Mounted Police.

Four hundred east side mothers, many carrying babies and all shouting "We want food for our children!" poured from Rutgers Square through East Broadway and the Bowery to City Hall about 11 o'clock yesterday morning and clamored at the Mayor's office for relief from prices which, they said, were driving them to starvation. The Mayor was not in, being engaged elsewhere on business that kept him until time for him to go to a luncheon of the Merchants' Association at the Hotel Astor. For more than an hour police reserves from six precincts and a squad of about ten mounted policemen had all they could do in dispersing the women without resort to clubs.

The demonstration was only the first and largest of several that occurred elsewhere in the city during the day. Pushcarts were overturned and foodstuffs were scattered by 100 or more women in Rivington Street; a larger number of women made a similar disturbance in the Clarmont Park section of the Bronx; another crowd attacked peddlers in Park Avenue, near 102d Street, and throughout the city—in Brownsville, Williamsburg, the east side of Manhattan, the Bronx—wherever the poorer people of New York live—there were sporadic boycotts, indignation meetings, street altercations, and other outbursts inspired by the high cost of foodstuffs.

The Mayor said last night that, if Mrs. Ida Harris, President of the Mothers' Vigilance Committee of 55½ Madison Street, and one of the leaders of the demonstration at the City Hall, would call upon him at 12:30 o'clock today with a committee of not more than ten, he would meet them.

Persons who professed to be familiar with conditions on the east side said yesterday the uprising was the result of real suffering. Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, a Socialist daily published in Yiddish, said he had investigated many cases, and had found actual want among families of which every possible member was at steady work.

Police Fail to Break Rush.

The agitation began when about fifty women congregated at the Forward Building, 175 East Broadway, and appealed to Mr. Cahan to do something in their behalf. He offered the use of the Forward Building auditorium for a meeting, and said they might accomplish something if they organized and adopted a definite program, but he cautioned them against violence.

Later some of them began to make speeches in Rutgers Square, and the crowd grew to 1,000 women. Some one suggested marching to City Hall, and the women surged into East Broadway, led by Mrs. Harris and Marie Ganz, the anarchist, who got into trouble with the police about two years ago by making speeches against John D. Rockefeller and others.

Policemen turned hundreds back, but between 300 and 400 reached City Hall Square. Warning of their coming had preceded them, and as the vanguard ran up the steps of City Hall, the big iron gates on the front of the building were closed against them. Those in the rear pressed forward and those in front pushed at the gates. Practically every woman was shouting in Yiddish or English, "We want food!" "Give us bread!" "Feed our children!" and similar cries. Tears were streaming down the faces of many. The babies in arms increased the uproar with their wails, and for a time no one who attempted to address the throng could be heard.

Mrs. Harris Makes Speech.

A few policemen appeared, and their presence produced a degree of quiet. Then Lieutenant William Kennel, the Mayor's bodyguard, stepped onto the porch above the women and spoke to them in German, telling them that the Mayor was not in his office and that, if they would go home quietly, they might send a committee to him today. Apparently few of the women understood him, for the clamor arose again, until Mrs. Harris replied:

"We do not want to make trouble. We are good Americans and we simply want the Mayor to make the prices go down. If there is a law fixing prices, we want him to enforce it, and if there isn't, we appeal to him to get one. We are starving—our children are starving. But we don't want any riot. We want to soften the hearts of the millionaires who are getting richer because of the high prices. We are not an organization. We haven't got any politics. We are just mothers, and we want food for our children. Won't you give us food?"

At Lieutenant Kennel's invitation Mrs. Harris, Miss Ganz, and three others entered the building where the Lieutenant took their names and said he would ask the Mayor to see them today. He requested them to tell the women outside to return peaceably to their homes, and this was done.

Some of the women started to depart, but other speakers, among whom was Marie Ganz, according to the police, harrangued the crowd in bitter language, and soon everything was confusion. By this time Inspectors Dwyer and O'Brien were on hand with thirty policemen, and the order was given to scatter the crowd. Its execution was attempted gently, but some of the women resisted. In the midst of the uproar a squad of mounted policemen arrived and these, with shouts and threats, rode across the plaza and sidewalks through the crowd, but took care that no one was trampled. The police held themselves in control and several were heard attempting to explain to the women that their families were also suffering from the high prices.

Marie Ganz Arrested.

Marie Ganz was the only person arrested. Inspector Dwyer heard her addressing a group of women in Yiddish, and her words seemed to be exciting them, so he directed that she be made a prisoner. As two policemen led her to a patrol wagon in Park Row, sympathizers tried to free her. When she had been taken away in the wagon, the remnants of the crowd were dispersed.

Hearing that the prisoner was to be taken to Police Headquarters, 100 or more women went there and shouted for Commissioner Woods. He was absent, but Third Deputy Commissioner Dunham received a committee of three, consisting of Mrs. Harris, Tillie Reisburg of 174 Rivington Street, and Morris Perlmutter of 8 Willett Street, one of the few men who had joined the women. Mrs. Harris asked for Marie Ganz's liberty, saying that she would see that the prisoner kept the peace, but Mr. Dunham said the matter was in the hands of the court.

Miss Ganz, who has been popularly known as "Sweet Marie," was arraigned before Magistrate Wylie in the Tombs Court in the afternoon, and Thomas J. Sullivan, a lawyer of 299 Broadway, volunteered to defend her. She was released, with a suspended sentence.

Women pickets were out in many places yesterday attempting to enforce boycotts on onions and potatoes, and it was said that they would be on duty again today.

A committee headed by Mrs. Harris obtained the use of the auditorium of Public School 62, across from Seward Park, for a mass meeting on Tuesday night.

Leaders of the women who went to the City Hall said that, as a last resort, they would withdraw their children from the schools so that they might work. They complained that they could not give the children enough food to sustain them at school, but that they might be able to earn enough partially to feed themselves. There was no evidence of a school strike yesterday, but several said it would begin today.

PRESIDENT DETERMINED UPON FOOD INQUIRY

$400,000 Appropriation, Stricken From Sundry Civil Bill, May Be Replaced on His Insistence.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—It was learned today that President Wilson intends to make a determined effort to have Congress at this session grant an appropriation to enable the Federal Trade Commission to conduct a sweeping and thorough investigation of the tremendous rise in food prices, with which he has been impressed through reports reaching him during the last few weeks. An appropriation of $400,000 was provided for in the original draft of the Sundry Civil bill introduced in the House yesterday, but it was stricken out by the committee before it reached the floor. It is believed that the President will insist on its replacement.

Mr. Wilson has been deeply concerned by the food stringency in New York City in particular, and he is very anxious to have the Federal Government take measures to relieve this condition as much as possible. The clause originally attached to the pending Appropriation bill directed the Trade Commission to make a searching study of food prices and conferred full authority to prosecute illegal manipulations of them as well as funds to carry out the investigation. It was dropped by the committee for reasons of economy.

The question of food prices came up in the Senate when Senator Borah, during the debate on the espionage bill, made a speech in which he declared that "the price of those things which enter into daily living, of everything which we wear and which we eat, has reached a point where it presents a national crisis."

He asserted that monopolistic combines had forced food prices 50 per cent. higher than they needed to be even under war conditions, and that they were making millions out of speculation in the necessaries of life.

SHORTAGE OF SUGAR DENIED

President of American Company Warns Housewives Against Reports.

A report that the price of sugar was mounting because of a scarcity and labor troubles at refineries yesterday caused Earl D. Babst, President of the American Sugar Refining Company, to issue a statement in which he said:

"We greatly deprecate the publicity given to sensational stories as to the refined sguar supply, which are calculated to advance the price of sugar unnecessarily to consumers. There are ample supplies of raw and refined sugar on hand and in transit throughout the country to take care of normal consumption. We are operating all of our refineries and expect so to continue. It would seem as if the reports were being circulated by Western labor agitators to aid their labor agitation at our refineries.

"Housewives should pay no attention to stories of the shortage of sugar. This company has been selling large quantities of sugar at a quarter to a half a cent a pound below existing market prices, and is taking care of its normal trade at all points."

The effect of the reported sugar shortage has been felt in several towns near this city. While the supply is limited, storekeepers say, it is difficult to buy sugars freely.

D., L. & W. LIFTS EMBARGO.

Railroad Will Receive Freight for Points West of Buffalo.

Announcement was made yesterday that the Lackawanna Railroad had, beginning at midnight, lifted the embargo which it declared on all westbound (less car loads) freight shipments from New York and all other points on its lines destined to points west of Buffalo.

The road has also lifted the embargo placed against westbound (less car loads) freight from connecting roads east of Buffalo to points west thereof.

MAINE RAILROAD MAY QUIT.

Unable to Get Coal—Shipment of Large Supplies of Potatoes Affected.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 20.—President Todd of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad announced tonight that because of the inability to get sufficient coal supply for its locomotives, the B. & A., which has a mileage of 574, must at once curtail its train service, and possibly suspend operations altogether.

The B. & A. has long-term coal contracts, but congestion on the coal rail lines and stormy weather at sea have prevented or delayed shipments to such an extent that the company now has only a few days' supply.

Suspension or serious curtailment of freight traffic on the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad will affect the movement of the largest remaining stock of potatoes in the country—that of Aroostook County. Prices have lately reached $8 to $9 a barrel at Aroostook shipping points and shipments have lately been brisk.

Potatoes at $4 Go Quickly.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Feb. 20.—Potatoes brought to the station here late yesterday were snapped up by jobbers at $3.50 a bushel and that price obtained today. This is 25 cents in advance of yesterday's opening price.

At Bridgehampton this morning there was spirited bidding for potatoes offered at the station and the price mounted to $4 a bushel. All offered at that price were taken. The local farmers expect to ask that price tomorrow.

WESTMINSTER KENNEL CLUB SHOW ATTRACTS RECORD THRONG ON OPENING DAY

CLASSIC DOG SHOW OPENS AT GARDEN

Record First-Day Throng at Westminster Kennel Club Exhibit.

POPULAR INTEREST IS HIGH

Spectators Crowd Around Judging Rings—Lawson's Entry of French Bulldogs a Surprise.

With nearly 2,000 dogs barking, growling, and yelping on the benches and in the judging rings the forty-first annual show of the Westminster Kennel Club opened in Madison Square Garden yesterday, to continue until Friday night, when the new champions will return to their home kennels decorated with the blue ribbons signifying supremacy in the different breeds. In the many years the Westminster Kennel Club has held shows in the Garden there never has been tendered such an enthusiastic welcome to the thoroughbred members of the dog tribe.

Public interest in "man's best friend" appears to have increased in recent years, for the crowd surged through the aisles and massed around the judging spaces in unprecedented numbers. Usually it takes a day or two before the show reaches the top wave of popularity, but for the latest opening the public was prepared and answered the call of the canine with a general desire to inspect the newcomers seeking fame and compare them with champions of olden days.

Massive St. Bernards and Great Danes shared places on the main floor with aggressive bulldogs and bull terriers, snappy Irish, Welsh, and Scotch terriers, and the long, lean Irish and Russian wolfhounds. The useful German shepherd dogs also had a place near the Madison Avenue entrance, and these intelligent animals were flanked by the sporting dogs—setters, pointers, and spaniels, that would have been much more at home in the open fields. The Boston terriers, which provided the largest entry of any breed, were so numerous that they took up the whole of the Twenty-sixth Street gallery, while French bulldogs, West Highland Whites, and Sealyham terriers were massed on the opposite gallery.

Toys Housed in Luxury.

Dogs of strength and character, many of which one would not like to meet in a narrow lane, were kept under good control on the main floor, but the visitor had to wander into the Concert Hall for the real pets of dogdom, catalogued as toy varieties. There instead of rough benches and straw bedding the carefully nurtured playthings of society found cozy quarters. Sheltered in glass cases of ornate design, with silken cushions to rest on and gay ribbons bedecking the cases, the toys were kept in quiet seclusion until they were taken out and carefully combed and groomed before entering the judging ring. All day long they were surrounded by a crowd, with the fair sex predominating. Some of the women were so faithful to the miniature beauties that they never left the Concert Hall to take a fleeting look at the other dogs, which attracted mere man on the Garden floor.

A show in these bellicose days would not be complete without the dogs of war, and there was one of this description in the German shepherd dog benches that attracted universal attention and gained the popular award for bravery, though the question whether he possesses show qualifications will not be determined until today. This was Filax of Lewanno, who, though a German shepherd dog, has served for more than a year in the trenches with the Entente Allies. During that time Filax made a record by bringing in fifty-four wounded soldiers. Having done his bit in the war, a Wilmington doctor received permission from the Minister of State for the dog to come to this country, and he is placed on exhibition by Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Wanner of the Lewanno Kennels. Filax has been so toughened by his military service that he is now believed to be the strongest specimen of his breed in this country.

Pacifists also had a representative in Max Donath's Lucie Doberman, a mild-mannered female that joined the peace pilgrims a year ago in Sweden, and traveled to this country on the Henry Ford peace ship to seek distinction in the class for Doberman Pinschers.

Lawson Entry a Surprise.

One of the sensations of the opening was the strong return made by Arnold Lawson of Boston in the French bulldog class. The Bostonian, who has not been well represented in recent years, surprised the experts by exhibiting a home-bred puppy named Robespierre, which made a sweep of all the classes, until, after he had captured the blue in the class for open dogs under 22 pounds, he was forced to give way in the winners' dogs to two old champions in Robert L. Scott's ch. La France Model and the Anjou Kennels' ch. Gamin's Rival, Jr.

Some noted dogs were placed lower than this sturdy young dog of Mr. Lawson's, which shows all the earmarks of a coming champion. One was Mrs. Harry Taylor's C'est Moi, an animal of the bully type, which, however, did not compare with Robespierre in ear carriage. Though Robespierre was equal to defeating C'est Moi, he failed when pitted against dogs of the same type in the winners' class, lacking the finish which should come with a longer show career.

In addition to the unexpected victories of Robespierre, there were more unusual happenings in the French bulldog competitions, as both the winning dog and the winning bitch repeated their successes of a year ago. After Mr. Scott had taken winners' dogs with ch. La France Model, his ch. Haworth Mircille, which won in winners' bitches a year ago, carried off that honor. Good as these specimens were, they had to give way in the special for the best of the breed in the show. The old ch. Gamin's Rival, entered for specials only, was trotted out to displace the newer champions.

Honors for Colonel Ruppert.

Nearly all the honors in St. Bernards fell to Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees. With the rough-coated Salambo the baseball magnate won in both American bred and open classes and wound up with the winners' dog award. In the division for bitches the Colonel's Bulgaria, though a winner in her class, had to give way to William Lintz's Hercuveen McCushla when the winners' class was judged. In the smooth variety Colonel Ruppert had almost a walk-over. His recent importation, Portia, behaving in a very unfilial manner, defeated her sire, Boy Blue, in the winners' class for both dogs and bitches.

There was a verification of the judging at the Boston Show when the award in winners' dogs was given to the Sylvania Kennels' Peter the Great over Mrs. F. L. Hutton's ch. Win Sum Min T'sing. The winner was rather shallow in color, when compared to the old champion, but excelled in true Chow type. He had a broad and accentuated skull, a square muzzle, and was much better in bones, legs, and feet than Mrs. Hutton's dog.

Mrs. Roy A. Rainey was supreme in wire fox terriers, with the dogs recently purchased from George W. Quintard, Jr., added to the string previously in her kennels. Her Conejo Wycollar Boy scored over Mrs. C. F. Neilson's ch. Oxford Rideway Corker in the open class for dogs, and repeated in the class for winners. In the winners' class for bitches Mrs. Rainey showed the winner, Biddy of Holyport, placing M. S. Baldwin's King Newton's Wiregirl as reserve.

The Delaware Valley Farms carried off the honors in the Russian wolfhound classes, winning the winners' dog with ch. Nadmen, bred in Ohio, which now has a record of nine successive winners' classes without a defeat.

It was the consensus of opinion that the Boston terriers shown made the most even lot ever exhibited in the Garden. Coming down to the winners' classes in dogs the competition was very keen. Because of a perfect head, the chief award went to Andrew J. Cunningham's Cunningham's Ringmaster, and W. E. Gregg's Limit, Jr., was placed in reserve.

Mrs. W. R. Grace, a Long Island sportswoman, showed some fine Dandie Dinmont terriers, and carried off the winners' dogs award with Alpin Sirius. Mrs. Grace's Alpin Marie won in the class for bitches, and reserve went to the Killearn Kennels with Killearn Mary Ann.

The chief interest in the toy varieties attached to the Pekingese mainly because Mrs. M. E. Harby, who had declined to show her dogs at the recent specialty show, was well represented, while Mrs. A. L. Holland, who had taken the chief honors at that show, did not exhibit. Mrs. Harby was rewarded by again winning in winners' dogs with Nowata Swinley Lilien, last year's winner.

One notable feature of the awards in the Peke classes was that Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, the judge, reversed the ruling of Lefroy Dean in regard to the recently imported dogs of Mrs. Elbridge Gerry Snow. At the specialty show Mr. Dean rated Laurel of Lang as the best of the Yankibourne Kennels, but in placing Tim Kee Kung of Yankibourne reserve to Swinley Lilien and excluding Laurel of Lang Mrs. Mathis showed that she believed with the owners of the Yankibourne Kennels that Tim is the better dog. Mrs. Snow's entries captured many ribbons, including the winners' bitches, with Cairnwhin Fonta.

Among those present during the day were Mrs. Payne Whitney, Harvey S. Ladew, H. K. Bloodgood, Mr. and Mrs. H. Macy Willets, Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Peters, Mrs. Roy A. Rainey, George B. Post, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Belmont, August Belmont, Richard H. Williams, the Misses Beatrice and Gertrude de Coppet, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ross Proctor, Miss Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Stern, Mr. and Mrs. J. Robinson Beard, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Carle, Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Gerry Snow, Miss Janet Snow, Mrs. J. O. Lacaillade, Miss Marian V. R. Kennedy, Mrs. George W. Quintard, 3d, Miss Anne Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Offerman, Mrs. Charles H. Lester, Miss M. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Patton, Frank Patton Thompson, Mrs. Catherine Houston, Holland Buckley, Tyler Morse, Mrs. L. L. Pulsifer, Arnold Lawson, Grant Notman, and R. K. Armstrong.

BULL BEATS GOULD IN SQUASH BATTLE

Columbia Club Man Undergoes First Defeat by an Amateur Since Taking Up Game.

The triumphal march of Jay Gould in squash tennis was abruptly checked yesterday in the semi-final round of the invitation tournament at the Squash Club, when this heretofore invincible player went down to defeat before Charles M. Bull, Jr., in a brilliantly contested three-game match, the score of which was 8—15, 15—7, 15—11. Gould became a devotee of squash tennis late last year, but his pronounced ability as a racquet wielder in other sports was of tremendous benefit to him in picking up the intricacies of this new game, and until yesterday he had never been defeated by an amateur. His downfall was the outstanding surprise of the present tournament.

It was not that Gould played inferior squash tennis but rather the fact that the Squash Club man mounted to considerable heights of prowess, that decided the issue. The opponents in the final round match now will be Bull and the Princeton Club champion, J. A. Taylor, who triumphed yesterday over W. H. Vanderpoel of the Squash Club by the score of 15—7, 15—6.

There was a large gallery on hand to witness the meeting of Gould and Bull. The latter did not hold his opponent lightly; in fact, he had prepared carefully for the contest. Both Walter A. Kinsella and Stephen J. Feron had analyzed the play of Gould, and the former in particular had instructed Bull as to the tactics he should employ to defeat the Columbia Club contestant. The worth of the suggestions is indicated by the score.

Gould is probably the hardest hitting amateur now playing the game, in addition to being an adept in handling the racquet. These factors, combined with agility and a keen eye, make him a formidable contestant against any opponent. Yet remarkable tactical expert as Gould is he met with more than his match in yesterday's competition. Bull kept the ball low and sent it careening around the four walls instead of playing shots straight off the front wall. This kept Gould guessing, and time and again in the last two games he was drawn out of position and then made the victim of a placement. Bull was determined not to test strength with Gould on straight driving to the front wall. Toward the last of the contest Bull developed a service, too, that was very confusing. He sent the ball so that it clung close to the side wall, many times making a return impossible.

Gould started with a fine display of speed that carried him well to the fore in the opening game. Bull, however, is always a slow starter, so that his lack of success at the outset could not be taken too seriously. But when Gould continued his merry piling up of aces in the second game things began to look a bit dubious for Bull. The Columbia Club player ran off a lead of 7—2 before Bull fairly caught his stride. Right there, however, the tide turned, for Bull now ran off thirteen aces for the game. The third was keenly played by Gould but he was unable to wrest the upper hand from his rival.

Outpoints Callahan by Spirited Rally in Last Four Rounds.

A spirited rally in the closing rounds of his ten-round session last night at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn gave Johnny Dundee, the popular local Italian lightweight boxer, a slight shade the better of the honors over Frankie Callahan, a rugged Brooklyn lightweight. It was the first appearance in this city of Dundee since his knockout at the hands of Willie Jackson, and the only thing that saved him from losing the popular decision was his almost superhuman effort in the closing four sessions. Up to that stage Callahan had an edge in the matter of points, but with his sensational burst in the seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth rounds, Dundee cut down this advantage and turned the tide in his own favor.

Though Dundee won, his margin of victory was by no means convincing or decisive. It was not the same rushing, aggressive, spectacular Dundee that performed at the Brooklyn club last night. In his place there was a wary boxer who seemed content to let his adversary do the bulk of the aggressive work and leading, and contented himself with holding desperately in the clinches, instead of hitting with both hands in vigorous style in the manner of that has characterized his previous performances. Up to the seventh session there was only one period when Dundee adopted his sensational crouching style of milling, and this was in the second session, when the little Italian attacked Callahan in surprising fashion.

In the other rounds, up to the sixth, Callahan piled up a lead with his heavier and more effective work. In the sixth session, however, Dundee made effective use of a snappy left-hand jab and had Callahan missing frequently. In the four closing rounds, however, Dundee furnished his aggressive rallies and, sweeping Callahan before him, earned the honors by a shade.

DILLON DARCY'S OPPONENT.

Will Fight in Place of McCoy, Barred by Commission.

The proposed ten-round bout between Al McCoy, the Brooklyn middleweight, generally recognized as champion, and Les Darcy, the Australian middleweight, which was scheduled to be staged at Madison Square Garden on March 5, has been abandoned, it was definitely announced last night. In its place a ten-round bout will be staged between Jack Dillon, the Indianapolis light-heavyweight, and Darcy. Information that the McCoy-Darcy bout had been declared off was obtained from Fred A. Wenck, Chairman of the State Athletic Commission, last night, when he announced receipt of a telegram from Frank Dwyer of Albany, one of the up-State Boxing Commissioners, in which the latter instructed that he be "recorded as voting that McCoy be compelled to go through with his Brooklyn engagement."

This means that McCoy will first have to box Jack Dillon at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn before he can engage in another boxing exhibition in this State, and sustains the objection registered by the management of the Broadway S. C. against the proposed McCoy-Darcy contest. The management of the Brooklyn organization complained that it had a prior agreement with McCoy to box Dillon, which bout has been twice postponed on a plea of illness by McCoy, and if the Brooklyn middleweight were allowed to box Darcy as scheduled he would be violating this agreement.

Immediately upon learning of the decision reached by the Boxing Commission, Grant Hugh Browne, Athletic Director of Madison Square Garden, completed negotiations with Dillon to take McCoy's place against Darcy in the latter's initial ring appearance in this country. Mr. Browne announced that Darcy would receive $25,000, or one-third of the gross receipts, and that Dillon's stipend would aggregate $15,000, including his moving picture rights.

SCHUPP AND HOLKE SEND IN CONTRACTS

TEAMS READY FOR TRIPS

Clans McGraw and Donovan Will Go South on Friday and Saturday Respectively.

All doubt about the retaining of two important cogs of the Giant machine was dispelled yesterday, when it was announced that Ferdie Schupp, the sensational southpaw, and First Baseman Walter Holke, who led in the league in batting last season, had signed their contracts and would go South with the first batch of Giants on Friday afternoon. The only hold-out on the team now is Davey Robertson, the right fielder, who is taking a course on the medical staff at a Norfolk (Va.) hospital. Manager McGraw expects that Robertson will go to Marlin and will sign his contract there.

Manager McGraw's baseball kindergarten, together with some of the regular pupils, will leave for Marlin on Friday. There are many players in the batch who have not been signed but who will receive a try-out. One of these players is a New York pitcher named Fred Harchar of East Eighty-eighth Street. He pitched for one of the teams in the Gas House district, and his claim to recognition is founded on the fact that he led the Gas House League.

Waite Hoyt, the Erasmus Hall pitcher, will have the distinction of being the youngest player who has ever been taken South by the Giants. He is only 17 years old, and has several no-hit games to his credit already. Hoyt is said to have all the qualifications of a future star. Pie Way, the Yale pitcher, and George Smith, the Columbia boxman, will also be in the party. Others who will go with the first shipment of players under Manager McGraw on Friday are George Sandberg, catcher; Sterling Stryker, pitcher; Al Schacht, the Newark pitcher; Lew McCarty, the Giants' catcher, who has been spending the Winter at Catawassi, Penn.; Brad Kocher, catcher; E. W. Vinal, a New York boy, who pitched for a semi-pro team near Boston last season; Benny Kauff, Red Murray and Jimmy Corcoran, a semi-pro catcher from Olean, N. Y., where McGraw first played ball.

The Giants this year will take their own dentist to Marlin. Dr. George Birs, who went with the Giants four years ago and kept the players' masticating apparatus in order, has again been engaged for the same duties. Dr. Birs is taken so that the players cannot use a toothache as an excuse for missing daily practice.

The following players will join the tourists at St. Louis: Joe Schepner, third baseman; Bill Ritter, pitcher; Joe Josefson, outfielder; Jim Middleton, pitcher; Bill Morrisette, pitcher; Bill Barrs, infielder, and, last but not least, Big Jeff Tesreau, who has begged permission to go to Marlin as soon as possible so that he can train down to weight. During the Winter Tesreau has taken on so many pounds that the scales shudder when he draws near.

Other players will go to Marlin direct from their homes. These include George Kelly from San Francisco, C. A. Causey from Fort Meade, Fla.; Ernest Kreuger, the catcher, who is just now a cow puncher on a ranch near Mesa, Ariz.; Jim Thorpe from Oklahoma City, Ross Young from San Antonio, Pete Kilduff from Chicopee, Kan.; José Rodrigues from Havana, L. A. Jaynes from a college in North Carolina, and A. W. Baird, Jr., a shortstop from the University of Louisiana. Zeke Lohman, a pitcher from Lowell, will also take the trip.

The Yankee squad is about ready to embark on Saturday afternoon for Macon, Ga. Ray Caldwell will be one of the first to report, and it is stated that if the erratic pitcher gets into shape, his past violations of the club's training rules will be forgiven. Others in the first party with Manager Bill Donovan will be Captain T. L. Huston, Secretary Harry Sparrow, Coach Duke Farrell, Trainer Jimmy Duggan, Ferguson, a pitcher; George Mogridge and Leslie Nunamaker.

Fritz Maisel, Allan Russell and Scout Joe Kelley will join the party at Baltimore, and at Washington the sensational pitcher, Bob McGraw, will get aboard. Other players who will report at Macon with the early arrivals are Alexander from Dallas, Nick Cullop, Chilhowie, Va.; Jack Enright, Fort Worth; Gilhooley, Toledo; Hendryx, New Orleans; Slim Love, Los Angeles; Munroe, Louisville; Piercy, El Monte, Cal.; Sam Ross, Jackson, Tenn.; Shaw, LaCentre, Ky.; Shocker, Detroit, and Walters, San Francisco.

The second bunch of Yankees will report at Macon on March 4. The party includes Aragon, Magee, Fisher, Baumann, Gedeon, High, Miller, Peckinpaugh, Pipp, Knaupp, Bankston, and Frank Baker. All the Yankees are signed but Baumann, Dan Tipple, and Bankston.

CRESCENT SEVEN IN LEAD.

Standing of the New York Teams.

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Crescent A. C.	4	1	.800
Irish-American A. C.	3	1	.750
Hockey Club	2	4	.333
St. Nicholas S. C.	1	4	.200

The Crescent A. C. jumped into the lead of the Amateur Hockey League race by defeating the Hockey Club seven at the Brooklyn Ice Palace last night by a score of 7 to 4. It was an unusual game for the Amateur League, because it was hard and rough without smashing all the rules on the calendar. The Crescents know the rink better than the other league clubs and they play the side boards to the best advantage.

Twice during the game Tom Howard, Jr., who wears No. 13 on his back, went down, when he was weakened after hard collisions, but he pluckily kept on playing. Early in the second period the Hockey Club rallied, and for a time it looked as if they were going to catch the leaders, but the superior team play of the New Mooners kept them on top. Heffernan played his first league game of the season for the Crescents at rover, while Conway and McCarthy and Des Jardins did a lot of pretty passing.

The checking was the severest of the season and nearly all the players were badly shaken up at one time or another. Roach and Jimmy Britton were slammed around often, but unlike many of the games, none of the players lost their heads. McCarthy was the first to score for the Crescents and he shot the first two goals by racing through the Hockey Club team alone. The first half ended with the Crescents in the lead by a score of 3 to 1.

In the second half Conway shot a goal after only 52 seconds of play on a long lift from the middle of the rink. Young then woke up the Hockey Club rooters with a long drive into the cage and and soon after Des Jardins had scored again for the Crescents, Jimmy Britton went down the ice alone and defied all opposition until he slammed the disc into the net.

The lineup and summary:

Mitchell	G.	Lewis
McCarthy	P.	T. Howard, Jr.
Brown	C. P.	Britton
Heffernan	R.	Young

DELAY CENSURE OF DR. HALL

Sons of Revolution Withdraw Repudiation of His Views.

A resolution repudiating the pacifist views expressed by the Rev. Dr. Frank Oliver Hall last Sunday evening at a meeting attended by the Empire State Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, of which he is Chaplain, was withdrawn at a meeting of the society at the Hotel Martinique last night, when a lively discussion threatened to develop. On the motion of H. A. Squiers, a member, the matter will be taken up again at the annual meeting, to be held on April 17.

Louis Annin Ames, President of the society, requested reporters to leave the meeting, a course which he said had been decided upon by a committee. His actions were overruled twenty minutes later, when several members opened the doors and told the newspapermen to listen "to some things the public should know."

A resolution which declared that the society stood ready to defend the rights of the United States at all costs was introduced by John H. Burroughs, a former President, and adopted. Clarence Brown Tubbs, who said it was his misfortune to have listened to Dr. Hall's remarks, took the floor and asked the society to repudiate the minister's address, which, he asserted, was a "defense of the German Government and its process of barbarism."

TRENTON'S ANTI-LIQUOR DAY

Both Houses of Legislature Busy with Prohibition Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 20.—Anti-liquor bills ruled in the Legislature today. The Local Option bill passed in the Senate last night was sent over to the Assembly, where it was referred to committee, immediately reported despite pleas for a public hearing, and made a special order of business for next Monday night. Senator Pierce of Union County introduced a bill to strengthen the license act known as the Bishops law by putting wholesale dealers on the same basis with retailers. The measure limits wholesale licenses and imposes restraints as to distances they may exist from churches.

Another provision is for a review by the courts of decisions of excise boards and city councils relating to liquor regulations. The bill also strikes from the Bishops law the exception relating to bowling alleys, Senator Pierce believing that this exception has been harmful to boys and young men who are attracted to the alleys. In the Assembly Mr. Iobst, the Methodist preacher member from Hunterdon County, offered a Statewide prohibition bill for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which would forbid the manufacture, sale, and importation of all liquor in New Jersey after July 1, 1918.

FIRE IN SING SING STORE.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Feb. 20.—The Mutual Welfare League's co-operative store, started when Thomas Mott Osborne was warden of Sing Sing, had a fire today which destroyed its entire stock of tobacco, sweets, souvenirs, novelties, and other supplies which prisoners have been buying there. The loss is placed at $3,000, but it was said that it was covered by insurance.

The fire started at 10:30 this morning, while the prisoners were in the shops. A prisoner in charge of the store found flames among the stock. He alarmed the keepers, and they hurried buckets to the place and poured water on the flames. The store is on the second floor of one of the main prison buildings. The first floor is the prison library and the third the headquarters of the league. The keepers succeeded in keeping the fire confined to the store, but the stock was badly damaged by water and smoke before the fire was put out. The Ossining Fire Department was called, but the blaze was under control when it arrived.

TRUCK RUNS WILD ON BRIDGE

Hits Four Other Vehicles, Injuring the Driver of Each.

A four-ton motor truck, driven by Frederick Blanchard, 42, of Vauxhall, N. J., ran wild on the Manhattan Bridge early last evening, crashed into four other vehicles, and injured several persons. As the truck reached the down grade near the New York tower the driving chain broke and, although Blanchard tried to apply the brakes, the lumbering vehicle rolled on.

A Park & Tilford wagon, driven by Charles Burns, was first struck. Burns was knocked off and received lacerations of the fingers. Morris Lovitch of 529 Tinton Avenue, driving a two-horse wagon, was cut about the hands when he was knocked from his seat, and Leonard Delfinger of 5,307 Seventh Avenue, Brooklyn, driving a light motor, was shaken up. A truck driven by Jonas Greshorn blocked the runaway. Greshorn was thrown to the pavement and received contusions of the shoulders as the heavy vehicles collided. Policeman Dickey summoned Dr. Grogan from Gouverneur Hospital and arrested Blanchard, charging him with not having a license to operate his truck.

HEIRESS SUES FOR DIVORCE.

Daughter of Robert Dunlap Accuses John O. Lawson Johnston.

Mrs. Fannie Roberts Lawson Johnston, daughter of Robert Dunlap, hat manufacturer, and who inherited his estate, filed in the Supreme Court yesterday suit for a divorce from John Ormiston Lawson Johnston, who inherited a fortune made by his father in the manufacture of an English beef tea extract.

The Johnstons were married in St. Thomas's Church, New York City, in 1900, and took their wedding trip around the world on a yacht owned by Johnston's father. They made their home after their honeymoon at Inverary Castle, leased by the defendant's father from the Duke of Argyll. In the last ten years the couple have visited here almost yearly, making their home at the Dunlap house at 111 West Seventy-second Street.

Mrs. Johnston accuses her husband of misconduct in London, naming Claire Lynch, a former New York actress now appearing there.

CAR LEAPS TRACK, KILLS GIRL

Child on Errand for Father Crushed in Hoboken—Store Wrecked.

A trolley car on the Passaic line jumped the tracks at Adams and First Street, Hoboken, at 7 o'clock last night and, after shaking up the passengers, ended its unusual career by plunging through the front windows of the notion store of Mrs. Fannie Wicher.

The car was wedged tightly in the framework of the building, and for forty-five minutes a wrecking crew struggled to get it back into the street. As it was hauled back, Police Captain Garrick, rummaging about in the wreckage, found a small, muddy shoe and near it the crushed body of a little girl. She had not been on the car and apparently had been tossed from the sidewalk.

The body was taken to the morgue, where, later, John Chrisler of 108 Adams Street identified the child as his adopted daughter, Anna Gunther, 9 years old. He said he had sent her to the butcher shop, a market near the scene of the accident.

Suit Charges Cruelty to Animals.

Suit was begun by the Government yesterday against George C. Taylor, President of the American Express Company, to collect penalties for an alleged violation of the act to prevent cruelty to animals. The defendant is accused of having kept 29 horses in a car of the Michigan Railroad Company en route from Chicago to this city for 37 hours and 42 minutes without food and water. The law limits the time in which animals may be deprived of food and drink to 28 hours.

A FEROCIOUS RABBIT NEW TERROR AT ZOO

HE FIGHTS AND MAIMS DOGS

Engages in Victorious Combat with a Powerful Orang-Outang—Hind Legs His Weapons.

Bunch was exiled yesterday from the comfort and warmth of the hay house in the Central Park zoo to solitary confinement in the small house back of the zebu corral. Bill Snyder, animal lover and head keeper, gave a sort of farewell party to Bunch in the afternoon, when his friends gathered for their weekly talkfest in the hay house. As he held up Bunch by his long ears he explained that he was, so far as he knew, the only fighting rabbit in existence and that his banishment had been finally and reluctantly decided upon only after Bunch had nearly killed a champion and valuable gamecock.

When the rabbit started first upon his prize ring career Bill was very proud of his pet, but Bunch became such a ferocious bully of small animals and fowls that the keeper concluded that a beast so dangerous should be confined where he could do no more harm.

As Bill held the rabbit up for the inspection of his friends—Bill's, not Bunch's—the small fighter much resented his attentions. One of Bunch's ears is torn, and there is a scar across the entire top of his head, souvenirs of an encounter with Spot, Bill's fox terrier. One of the rabbit's hind legs is out of alignment also, from injuries received in a three-round bout with Judy, a fighting orang-outang now some time gone to rest. Bunch tried desperately to wriggle from the keeper's grasp, and it was plain to be seen that but for the man's superior strength the dauntless rabbit would have attacked Bill with great fury.

"Bunch once had a reputation for gentleness," Bill said. "That was when he was very young, however. I cannot tell what first awoke the fighting instinct in the little animal. I might remark that Bunch's mother was a very mild-mannered bunny, and heredity did not, I am sure, play any part in furnishing the little animal with his prize ring propensities. Unless something happened to Bunch, of which I know nothing, to develop his present disposition, he is just one of those freaks like the black sheep that now and then appear even in the families of clergymen."

"Perhaps Bunch's parents were too strict with him," suggested Robert Copeland, the park policeman.

"I have suggested to Bill that Bunch may have grown up in an environment analogous to that which makes gangsters of humans," said Bob Hurton, Bill's assistant.

Snyder said he did not think either theory would hold, but he admitted that he could not himself account for Bunch's character. The little creature, he declared, was one of the strangest animals in existence—a rabbit with a lion's spirit. Bill had to add to this, to stop the ensuing argument, that he did not believe in the transmigration of souls.

After Bunch had been carried off and put in solitary confinement, Bill related to his friends some of the exploits of the rabbit. Bunch, he explained, fights just like a kangaroo, using both hind legs. Not having, however, a tail like the kangaroo's on which to balance himself, Bunch has to use one leg at a time, and in this art he has developed a lightning like rapidity. So quick are his movements, Bill says, he can feint with one leg and then bring the other into action for an upper or lower cut with a speed that is simply amazing. Equally rapid is he in circling about to meet attacks from the rear.

Secretly Bill is very proud of Bunch, and his present exile is only for the protection of other animals, Bill confessed to Hurton. Something had to be done, because the rabbit could not be permitted to "lick all creation." Bill is also proud of the fact that Bunch comes from New York State, the rabbit having been born on a farm in Westchester County. Rumor has it that Bunch was once the pet of a very small boy, and the opinion has been advanced that his disposition changed the day his youthful owner put a red ribbon about his neck.

One of the exploits of Bunch consisted in putting a flock of sheep to flight. At that time Bunch was one of several rabbits which were wont to gambol in the sheepfold in the park. One day one of the shepherds came to the office in agitation and said that a wild rabbit was busy chasing the sheep all about the green. He said he had tried to rescue his charges, but that both the rabbit and the terrified sheep, pursued by the fierce creature, had outrun him. Snyder went to the sheep pasture. He found Bunch legging it after the panting and fear-frenzied flock, biting sheep on the ankles or kicking them with terrific force whenever he got within reach. Bunch, Bill said, was evidently gloating over his own frightfulness and reveling in the pain he inflicted on his helpless victims.

Two keepers with a net captured Bunch and prevented a mutton massacre. After that the sheepfold knew the ferocious rabbit no more. The monkey house became his home, and, being separated from his kind, did not make his disposition any better. It did, however, improve the spirit of the other rabbits, for Bunch had long been the bully of the rabbit run.

No one knows just how Judy got out of her cage, but her encounter with Bunch now forms a chapter in Bill's "Recollections of Zoological Animals." When Pat Keenan, the keeper, arrived, attracted by the sounds of battle, he found Bunch putting in short rib blows on Judy, while Judy was trying vainly to get a strangle hold on the rabbit. Keenan agrees that it was a mighty combat while it lasted. He adds that, though Judy got out once again, she remained discreetly on top of her cage and made no attempt to renew hostilities. Bunch gnashed his teeth and glared at her from the ground.

Bunch's duel with the fox terrier was another event to make a pacifist shudder. In this the rabbit was also victorious. It was followed by the beating and maiming of a strange yellow cur who, until taught better by Bunch, thought all rabbits were legitimate prey.

$100,000 GIFT TO ENGINEERS

American Mining Institute Library to be Enlarged by James Douglas.

A gift of $100,000 to the library of the American Institute of Mining Engineers in this city from James Douglas of Arizona was announced last night at the annual dinner of the organization. At the Hotel Astor Herbert C. Hoover, Chairman of the Commission for Relief of Belgium, one of the speakers, was elected to honorary membership. After telling of the work accomplished in Belgium by the commission, Mr. Hoover said:

"While an army of two and a half million soldiers could not plant its flag in the hearts of ten million Belgians, we feel certain that the American flag has been planted there with the work of our thirty engineers."

$2,500 FOR LAFAYETTE FUND

A Throng Attends Entertainment at Home of Mrs. Burke Roche.

A benefit entertainment in aid of the Lafayette Fund was held last night at the residence of Mrs. Burke Roche, 23 West Fifty-third Street. Francis Roche is Secretary and Treasurer of the fund, and $2,300 was realized on the sale of tickets.

A large and fashionable assembly enjoyed the program. Mrs. Albert Clayburgh, Miss Criticos, and Leon Rennay appeared in a group of songs, and Miss Beatrice de Holthoir recited. John Heath, pianist, and Rex Townsend, who gave demonstrations in mental telepathy, also appeared.

"SANS-GENE" NEXT WEEK.

"Lucia," Also for First Time This Year, in the Repertoire.

The last two months of the Metropolitan opera season will open with a repetition of "Thaïs" next Monday followed by "Lucia" on Wednesday and "Madame Sans Gene" on Friday, both "first times" this year, as well as by "Meistersinger" on Thursday, with Gadski, Schumann-Heink, Urlus, and Whitehill, all new, and by "Aïda" at next week's Saturday matinée, with Caruso, Muzio, Matzenauer, De Luca, and Didur.

"Lucia" will be sung, as last year, by Barrientos, Martinelli, De Luca, Rothier, Egener, and Bada, led by Papi, while "Madam Sans Gene" again has Farrar, Martinelli, and Amato, the latter as Napoleon, together with Curtis, Sparkes, Fornia, Braslau, Segurola, Leonhardt, Tegani, Begue, and others, under the direction of Polacco. This will make thirty-six different operas, besides a later "Lakme" and "Canterbury Pilgrims," now rehearsing.

Caruso goes on Tuesday to Brooklyn in "Marta," with Barrientos, Perini, and Didur. The Society of Ancient Instruments takes part in Sunday's opera concert, with the French soprano, Gabrielle Gills.

MR. YSAYE'S REAPPEARANCE

The Belgian Violinist and Mme. Barrientos at a Benefit Concert.

The first public appearance this season in New York of Eugène Ysaye, the great Belgian violinist, who has been in this country for some time, was made last evening in Carnegie Hall at a benefit concert arranged by the Smith College Club. With him appeared Mme. Maria Barrientos, soprano of the company of the Metropolitan Opera House, and Maurice Dambois, a young Belgian pianist. Mr. Ysaye's reappearance was greeted with enthusiasm, and the addition of one of the greatest in his art to the number of visiting musicians was indeed an incident of more than ordinary importance in a season crowded with great artists.

There are reasons enough why inroads should have been made in Mr. Ysaye's art; but there were few evidences of them last evening. He showed many of the well-remembered traits of his playing. His most significant number was Gabriel Fauré's sonata in A: not a work of genius, perhaps, but one showing many interesting and musical qualities. Mr. Dambois's playing of the pianoforte was exceedingly skillful. Mme. Barienntos sang "Ah, fors è lui" from "La Traviata" and some Spanish and French songs.

Margulies Trio's Final Concert.

The Adele Margulies Trio, at a third and final concert in Aeolian Hall last evening, brought forward Brahms's trio, Op. 101, in C minor, like a benediction at their season's early close, a Brahms in gracious mood, fresh, robust, stimulating. Equally a rarity of late was Rubinstein's melodious Op. 52, which followed, with Alwin Schroeder in both numbers, while Miss Margulies and Mr. Lichtenberg added Paderewski's sonata in A minor, heard on the same stage the previous day. The players themselves enjoyed their hearty recalls and floral au revoirs.

Isadora Duncan to Aid War Relief.

Isadora Duncan, who recently returned from a tour of South America, will give a dance recital Tuesday night, March 6, at the Metropolitan Opera House, for the benefit of wounded soldiers of the allied nations. Miss Duncan's program will be that given by her at the Trocadero in Paris, and will include a dance to the music of "La Marseillaise." Oscar Spirescu will conduct.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

In response to many requests an evening performance of Molière's "The Imaginary Invalid" will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Coburn and their company next Monday night at the Harris. The play was originally announced for four matinee performances only.

The addition of Lucile Watson and Edward Gillespie completes the cast that will appear in A. H. Woods's production of "The Small Town Girl," which Eugene Walter and Cronin Wilson wrote in collaboration. The play will be produced in Atlantic City on March 8.

The gross receipts from the matinee performance today at the Strand will be donated to the American Jewish Relief Committee's fund.

The corporation which has taken over Madison Square Garden contemplates reopening the theatre that occupies the northwest corner of the big building. Negotiations are pending with several attractions that have been unable to find vacant stages uptown.

Oscar Strauss's operetta, "The Beautiful Unknown," will be placed in rehearsal today by the Shuberts. Sari Petrass, who created the prima donna rôle in Budapest, has retired from the cast, which now includes Lois Ewell, Wilda Bennett, Charles Judels, Sam Edwards, Ned Munroe, and Horace Sinclair.

DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN TRADE.

Some time our foreign trade must react from its maximum, but it is still increasing, and has now reached dimensions comparable only with combinations of nations. It seems sure that the land and sea embargoes must soon make a greater impression than in January, but the Feb. 10 returns do not show it. On the other hand, the breaking of the blockades would soon enlarge even the January figures. On the basis of a year of January's trade volume, our exports would exceed seven billions and our imports would almost reach three billions. It must be admitted that is abnormal in several respects. Its huge dimensions are within our powers of production, but not within the power of sustained payment by our foreign customers. The trade is as unbalanced as it is great, and the disturbance of the exchanges by a sustained balance of trade beyond all precedent would derange the globe's affairs.

In a normal year before the war the British Empire had a total trade of about ten billions. That is to say, the exports and imports of the United Kingdom and all British colonies nearly balanced at about five billions each. Goods paid for goods, and there was no disturbance of the flow of gold. That is the world unit most nearly comparable to our total. It serves to show the peculiar nature of our present foreign trade, and, therefore, necessarily of our domestic trade under present conditions. Ordinarily our domestic trade is our dominating economic factor, but not now. When the support of foreign purchases lessens, so will the inflow of foreign gold which finances our domestic trade. That is something for bankers and traders alike to bear in mind. British trade as above given is about 30 per cent. of normal world trade. The trade of the other Entente Allies adds 20 per cent., or a total of exports and imports of about seven billions. It follows that our trade now surpasses that of all the Entente except England. It also surpasses the exports and imports of the Teutonic alliance, which total about six billions, or some 17 per cent. of the world's trade.

There is interest, but little instruction, in these comparisons of hugeness. What it is better worth while to know, or to deduce, is the effect of the alteration of these conditions wherein we are receiving gold by the billion and credits by multiples of billions. What shall we do when foreigners cease buying and begin to pay their balances? The less they pay us and the more they owe us, the less disturbing will such a transformation prove. If they pay us gold, they really weaken us, for it inflates our affairs and increases their need of drawing back the gold they lose to us. On the other hand, the more good paper we take from them, the more we prevent inflation of our affairs now and the greater will be our ability to repay them as they now pay their bills, that is in something as good as gold, their own promises. Their practice with us is worthy of our imitation. The billion of gold they have sent us during their war purchases is but one-fifth of the paper we have received from them against our ten billions of exports. The exchanges have been balanced by our taking back two billions of our own securities and accepting more than two billions of their securities.

During each of the next several years our foreign customers have hundreds of millions to pay us, regardless of the balance of trade. On their short-term borrowings $100,000,000 falls due this year, $316,000,000 next year, half a billion in 1919, and the current account is still open. Any demand upon us for gold must follow our tender of their own obligations instead. The longer outlook is also reassuring. The accounting runs into the billions, and the total is fairly to be considered. In the first place, the interest must be paid if they are to remain solvent. And the prices of their own credit in their own markets must be maintained on a parity with our market. There will be a flow in either direction to the better market, and it will be their interest and their duty to maintain the prices of their paper. We know how that is. There are many who will remember how the day's first question used to be "How's London?" Hereafter the question for the world will be, "How's New York?" The state of New York will settle whether paper or gold shall cross the ocean in settlement of merchandise movement. It will be their paper that will move this time, not ours. Hereafter we can defend our gold as they used to defend theirs.

In short, the United States has followed England in passing from the agricultural to the industrial stage, from that to the mercantile stage, from that to the financial stage. It is difficult to foretell England's next stage or our own. The result to both will depend upon how far we make good our claim to be world bankers. England accumulated the immense wealth which is amazing even herself by freedom of trade. Reversion to protection, as some English authorities propose, would be a backward step. There are those who propose the same policy for ourselves. That is only a little less desperate. Protection of the exclusive sort is a confession of incompetence for the future which is within our attainment. We must regulate imports, not by duties, but by domestic production both for consumption and export, and we must invite imports that are to our advantage. Thus trade will be illimitable, and the profits will help us to assist with the world's financial problems when they may be referred to us. The alternative is to retreat behind our defenses, shrivel trade by prohibitory statutes in the name of protection. Thus we should resign into other hands the duties and the profits which trade conditions have thrust upon our astonished men of business, many of whom have yet to be born again into sympathy with world affairs.

THE COLOMBIAN TREATY.

The delay in the settlement of our long dispute with Colombia must be disturbing to the conscience of every upright American. Even if we were legally justified in taking possession of the canal strip in a summary way, and the attitude of influential Colombians had previously been provocative of such a proceeding, some reparation is due to the South American republic. The terms have been modified, the amount of the pecuniary reimbursement to Colombia has been materially decreased, and there are various other good reasons why the President's desire that the Senate shall ratify the treaty without further delay should be gratified. Nothing of benefit to the nation is to be gained by further parleying. We should not miss so good an opportunity to convince our Latin-American neighbors that the United States entertains only the friendliest feelings for them, that their interests are ours.

As the matter now stands, it seems that the opposition to the ratification of the treaty in the Senate is almost wholly partisan. We know that the President does not regard the ratification of the treaty as merely expedient. He believes it is right to grant this indemnity to Colombia. We are confident that a large proportion of his fellow-citizens agree with him. But if it were only a matter of expediency, in this hour when we need to cement our friendships among our neighbors, it would be shameful to have the treaty laid aside again for purely political considerations.

TWO SENATORS.

The Hon. ALBERT B. FALL, a Senator in Congress, has been one of the severest and most persistent of the Republican critics of Mr. WILSON. He has attacked the President's Mexican policy repeatedly and bitterly. He was a chief inspirer of the assaults upon that policy in the campaign of 1916. But he is much more than a partisan. He is a patriotic American, who in grave days of national difficulty, when the country faces perils without and more insidious perils at home, seeks to strengthen the hands of the President. In a speech in the Senate Monday on the Espionage bill, he said that "the "people of the United States are now "on trial; that it is a question now as "to whether this democracy is capable "of continuing and perpetuating it-"self."

He reviewed the increased powers conferred by the French and British democracies, more immediately popular than ours, upon their radical Premiers, increased powers made necessary by long proof of the shiftlessness, incompetence, and futility of institutions and limited functions unequal to the strain of a fight for national life. He told the Senate plain if unwelcome truth, and it is as true of the House:

> I say to you now that you yourselves, this legislative body, are incompetent and inefficient. You are proving to the people of the United States every day your inefficiency and incompetency to take care of the affairs of this Government. You are doing it either by acts of omission or acts of commission every day. It is a question as to whether we can preserve our form of government and protect ourselves in a crisis. While I have no reason personally to entertain any feeling of friendship for the present occupant of the White House, while I have been as severe in my criticisms of him, of his acts, or rather his failures to act, as any man in the United States, I believe that it is absolutely essential to the salvation of this Government now that some man who will act shall have the power to act in times of emergency.

Mr. FALL is resolved that the Republic shall take no detriment. He will not split hairs about arbitrary powers. He is willing to yield something of his previous convictions as to "one-man power." To the President whom as President he supports he is "willing to yield authority," "willing to vest "him with the power necessary to "carry it out."

In view of Mr. FALL's past ardent opposition to Mr. WILSON, in view of the traditional Senatorial jealousy of the Executive, and full-orbed conception of the powers, privileges, and dignities of the Senate, his speech is remarkable. It is gratifying testimony to the merger of politics in patriotism; and the passage by the Senate yesterday, by a six to one majority, of the Espionage bill, which confers upon the President arbitrary powers, proves that there is a substantial solidarity of that body for national defense.

Senator HUSTING of Wisconsin, in whose State are great numbers of persons of Teutonic birth or descent, heartened Americans of whatever origin last year by his exposure and denunciation of a parcel of Chicago pacifists or aliens who were swamping the Senate with telegrams against Mr. WILSON's submarine policy. He has been brave and steady for the assertion and protection of American rights, which his colleague, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, is always eager to abandon. In a letter to a constituent who had sent him resolutions for an embargo on shipments to the belligerents and to exclude American ships from the war zone, Mr. HUSTING set forth clearly the situation and the national duty: "We are not invading Germany's "rights. On the contrary, Germany "has been invading, and threatens to "continue to invade, our rights."

The President has striven and is striving for peace. His efforts have been and are seriously hampered by the persons who, by their clamors against war and their willingness to yield to Germany in order to prevent war, are unconsciously doing their utmost to bring on war. They are stiffening the back of Germany. They are convincing her that the American people are not united "in support of the "Government, that they are divided "in spirit, purpose, and allegiance." The case of the United States against Germany, the case of peace or war, has not been stated more lucidly or fairly than by Mr. HUSTING:

> While we have already severed diplomatic relations with Germany, war may even now be averted if Germany should become convinced that our people stand back of our country against Germany as unitedly and determinedly as the German people stand back of their country against the United States. The German people are a unit in their loyalty and obedience to their Kaiser and their country. And so they are back of their Government in its ruthless submarine warfare, notwithstanding it may lead to war with the United States and bring them in conflict with their brothers in blood in America and notwithstanding the proposed action of their Government is contrary to international law and the laws of humanity.
> Let the people of Germany insist upon it that their Government cease its wanton killing of our citizens and desist from practices which are contrary of the rules of civilized warfare. Let not our citizens demand of their own country, which is admittedly in the right, to yield to a country which is concededly in the wrong. Peace and good-will between the United States and Germany can be secured only by wrong yielding to right, and not right yielding to wrong.
>
> The issue of war or peace in the present crisis lies with Germany and the German people, not with the United States.

The union of Americans for American rights against German wrongs, that is the way, if there be a way, of peace.

GENERAL FUNSTON.

The sudden death of General FREDERICK FUNSTON will be felt as a severe loss throughout the country. The people knew him better than any other active officer of our army excepting General LEONARD WOOD, and his fame rested on achievements which stirred mightily the public mind and heart. He captured AGUINALDO, with a handful of followers, when maturer military men had said that the Filipino leader could not be caught, and, apart from his intrepidity and the glory of that achievement, the people loved him then for the enemies he made. FUNSTON was the despair of the pacifists. He had drifted into soldiering after following other pursuits, but he was nevertheless a born soldier. In the crisis precipitated by the diplomatic break with Germany he has been regarded as a vital and potent force. There was no warning of his sudden taking off in the prime of his life. His adventurous spirit, his daring and impulsiveness were the qualities which first made him a popular hero, but since his elevation to a Generalship he had developed good capacity as a military commander. He was one of the very few we now have who had been well tried in important service. If he had lived, and war had been forced upon us, he would have been compelled to assume larger responsibilities than had yet fallen to him.

This country has reason enough to fear the havoc that can be caused in a sudden alarm of war by hastily appointed political Generals. It is not likely that we shall ever again have to endure such scandals as the nation was afflicted with in 1861; probably commissions will not be distributed again so freely among distinguished townsmen and favorite sons; but we had some political officers in 1898, though most of them, happily, did not get out of camp. We are not referring to THEODORE ROOSEVELT, for he was and is sui generis.

The loss of FUNSTON, however, when the question of national defense is uppermost is deplorable. His place will be filled in time, of course, but he leaves a vacancy which a reassignment of officers cannot fill. PERSHING is wholly competent to command the Southern Department. That is only a detail. Brave men of sound judgment, schooled by experience to do the right thing in a sudden emergency, are rare. Nothing that FUNSTON did in war times was more serviceable to the country than his ordering of the troops in his command at the Presidio to help the police and firemen after the San Francisco earthquake. There was no law to justify this except the law of humanity. It was one of the little Brigadier's noblest acts.

FOUR STATES FROM TWO.

The annual tragi-comedy in the Idaho Legislature for the division of the State, the annual bickering between the representatives of the fruit raisers, stockmen, and farmers of the south and the lumberers and miners of the north, would ordinarily have drawn the meed of one melodious tear or laugh from students of the hearty Western genius. If a member from South Idaho introduced a bill to remove the State University from septentrional Moscow to some meridional site like Boisé or Nampa, he merely furnished a pretext for the inevitable annual effort of hardy Northern Idaho to tear and deracinate itself from the soft south. Why can't brethren dwell together in unity?

And when division rears its horrid head in West Virginia, when a bill in the Legislature proposes to allow Brooke, Hancock, Marshall, and Ohio Counties to form themselves into a separate State if they will take upon themselves West Virginia's $12,000,000 debt to Virginia, surely some more sympathetic explanation should have been given than The Pittsburg Gazette's, that the people of Wheeling and other citizens of the Northern Panhandle are so incurably thirsty under "bone-dry" prohibition that they would cheerfully pay $12,000,000 for a new and wet State. These velleities or passions of division are curious and unusually permanent.

HELP FOR A NEIGHBOR.

Military occupation of Santo Domingo by United States forces, which have restored order there, is now accompanied by the negotiation of a treaty that will establish a virtual protectorate, almost a counterpart of the one for Haiti. All customs duties will be under the control of a receiver nominated by our President, a Financial Adviser appointed in the same way will be attached to the Cabinet, there will be an urban and rural constabulary commanded by Americans, and the republic's foreign relations will be subject to supervision at Washington. Our Government is to assist in the development of natural resources and in making public improvements under the direction of American engineers. It will also promote education, greatly needed where more than three-fourths of the people are illiterate.

Already there has been a beginning of the good work. A commission to plan an educational system has been appointed, new energy is seen in agriculture because planters and farmers are no longer at the mercy of organized groups of bandits, foreign capital is coming in, and a railroad across the island from north to south has been projected, which will open much good land for cultivation. It is said that in Haiti less than one-tenth of the area that invites cultivation has been used. In Santo Domingo large tracts have been neglected. What our Government is doing in these two countries is mainly for the benefit of their inhabitants. We are helping them by maintaining order, protecting those who desire to work, striving to educate the ignorant, and developing natural resources. The whole world must see that we do not seek to acquire territory, and that the heavy cost of the necessary military and naval operations is paid by our people.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Sympathy Quite Withheld.

When the Breton gunner on the Guyane fired the shot that saved his ship by sinking a German submarine, the excellence of his marksmanship had also another effect—one which, at another time than this, would have been the cause of much comment in most parts of the world that had knowledge of it. Now, significantly enough, nobody outside of one land from which comes not much of what may be called personal news, seems to have any particular thought of the fact that, within a few minutes after the Breton's shot hit its target, twenty-five men, or a few more or less, died a death about as miserable as could be imagined.

When, as has not infrequently happened in the past, submarine crews have perished through one or another mishap to their fragile craft, they have been the objects of general and sincere pity. In this case, words of commiseration are wanting. Few people, indeed, if any, go so far as plainly to express satisfaction over the drowning of the crew in question, for it is realized, of course, that the real responsibility for what they were doing, as for what other crews of like kind have done, rests elsewhere than on themselves. And possibly it was because some regret mingled with his exultation over a good deed well done that the Breton sailor who sank the submarine refused to be known to the American reporters more definitely than as "gros Jean." That, however, is probably to ascribe to him more of sentimentality than he has—or than he should have.

The men on the under-sea boats may not differ much, perhaps, from other human beings of their class and profession, in doing the work assigned to them, regardless of its moral quality, but, rightly or wrongly, in this and some other countries there is an instinctive assumption that our own bluejackets would show intense repulsion for such "duty" as the German submarine crews have been performing, and some of us like to think that our own men would refuse outright to do at least the worst of it.

Be that as it may, one hears over here, just as one reads in the London and Paris papers, only that a U-boat has been sunk, not that a group of helpless men were drowned. That is one of the penalties of conducting war as Germany has been carrying it on ever since the invasion of Belgium began.

Germany Asks for Gold.

German financiers have taken, or made, frequent opportunity to tell the world that so far as money is concerned the Empire is getting along considerably better than fairly well—that its loans are promptly and enthusiastically oversubscribed as they come out one after another, and that the gold reserves of the Imperial Bank, instead of diminishing under the drain of war, are steadily increasing. But that in this direction, too, as in so many others, Germany is feeling the strain of the great struggle can be deduced from the fact that her national bank has just issued an appeal to all the men and women in the country to sell it such articles of gold as they possess and do not value far beyond the intrinsic worth as metal.

This request more than implies, it clearly demonstrates, the inability of the Imperial Bank to get by ordinary means the gold it must have. Already, it should be remembered, there has been a voluntary turning in of jewelry, including, according to the dispatches sent out at the time, that of their wedding rings by many women who were glad to wear iron on their fingers instead of gold as a manifestation of patriotism. These offerings, evidently, were not enough, and a further call, differing little from a command in a country as thoroughly disciplined as Germany, has been made.

That exceptions are admitted, and that "articles of historic, artistic, and ethical interest" are not as yet to be turned over to the State, is open to two interpretations—it may mean that a gathering in of all available gold is still unnecessary, or the meaning may be that there is a disinclination to reveal the real seriousness of the situation. Owners who were so inclined might say that all the gold they have which is not in the shape of coin came under one of the three exemptions named, but the majority, if they choose, could easily convince themselves that none of their gold was in such form as now to justify withholding it from public service. That the Government asks instead of demanding and taking may be taken, however, as proving that the financial situation of Germany might be worse than it is.

There are legends of women in a beleaguered city who gave their hair in order that from it new bowstrings might be made for the defending garrison. That was probably more nearly an ultimate sacrifice than even the selling of a wedding ring or ancestral jewels.

They're Not So Fond of "Ottawa."

Dispatches from Newfoundland indicate the existence among the people there of no eagerness to grant the desire of the British Government that they give up their status of independent colony and join their fortunes with those of the Dominion of Canada. Indeed, they seem distinctly unwilling to make this change, and the chances are that a lot of argument will be required to make them do it.

In Newfoundland, even more than in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, there is a tendency to speak unlovingly of what they usually call "Ottawa," and the common feeling is that the interests of the maritime region are not as carefully considered and guarded as they should be by the rulers of the Dominion.

The people in the coast cities do most of their business with the United States, or rather with New England, and among them, more than now and then, can be heard whispers of annexation—not to Canada, but to the Republic on the south. Of course these are not very serious or very sincere. The feelings of which they are the expression, however, will delay the new arrangements now proposed by London, and may prevent them altogether, unless their necessity can be plainly proved.

An Emergency Army Plan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A plan for quickly training a mobile army in an emergency:

1. The territory of the United States to be divided according to population into as many districts as there are regiments of regular infantry, cavalry, and field artillery, exclusive of those serving abroad.

2. Each regular regiment of infantry, cavalry, and field artillery to be transported to a selected training centre in a district and there under direction of its Colonel train four other regiments of its arm, at the same time being itself filled to war strength.

3. For this training the Colonel would use all of his trained officers, noncommissioned officers, and other enlisted men to the best advantage.

4. At each training place would be gathered the recruits from the district and wooden cantonments would be erected for their shelter.

This plan possesses simplicity, celerity, economy, efficiency:

1. Simplicity—By this plan no orders or details are required except the sending of each regiment to its new station and the order to its Colonel to take charge of the recruits, organize, and train the regiments.

2. Celerity—The regular regiments can be quickly assigned and transported to their stations. Construction of cantonments could begin at once; training could be started as soon as the recruits came in.

3. Economy — Transportation of peace strength regular regiments to stations; of recruits short distances to central places in each district; construction of cantonments—each involves the minimum of expense. The quick training resulting will reduce the term of service and hence the pay and other expenses to a minimum.

4. Efficiency—By this plan is utilized at once the entire available trained personnel of the mobile army. We put into the effort all we have, put it in without delay or confusion and in a way to produce a maximum result at a minimum expenditure of time and money.

Nothing has been said about how the recruits are to be obtained; the plan is one for their training after they have been secured.

It multiplies the total peace strength of the regiments used by about eight and should give us after a year 600,000 trained men.

The Kaiser's Temptation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A newspaper headline last week quoted the Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin as saying that the sailing of our American merchantmen in defiance of the German submarine blockade is an act "most wickedly tempting God." This reported statement alongside of "Me und Gott" tells us that the old partnership still exists, with the Kaiser as spokesman. Let us hope that his "temptation" will not prove insurmountable, but that his connection with the upper world will soon be so real that his diabolical hand on the under world will no longer put the freedom of the seas on the contraband list.

TAU MU RHO.

FOR A PROTEST MEETING

To Counteract the Effects of the Pacifist Propaganda.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Do you not think it is time that something was done? I am satisfied that the great mass of the residents of New York have been waiting with strained patience since the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany for satisfactory evidence that the United States intends properly to protect its honor, to say nothing of its rights.

Has not the course of the authorities in Washington been influenced somewhat by the complete failure of those who believe in an emphatic maintenance of our rights to enter any protest against their present policy of inaction? Have we not allowed ourselves to be fed up by hopes, born more of what we felt ought to be done than of anything that has been or seems likely to be done?

In the meantime, the only voice heard in the land is that of the peace-at-any-price advocates, assisted by the so-called pacifists, or peace-with-dishonor clique, under guise of which classifications will be found practically every pro-German in the country.

Is it to be wondered at that the Administration should be somewhat influenced by the large number of so-called peace meetings which are being held under varying auspices as the result of a pacifist propaganda more or less surreptitiously supported by those more anxious to see the Central Powers victorious than for the honor and good name of the United States?

Is it not time to protest in the name of the people of New York against a cabal conducted in our national legislative halls of such a dishonorable nature that, if it is not curbed, will lead to national disgrace? Is it not time to protest against the halls of Congress being the forum from which sentiments of such an unpatriotic nature are proclaimed that not alone are they likely to destroy the respect of the world at large but to furnish the nations that have already insulted us beyond measure with a feeling of confidence that they can add to their insults with impunity?

Is it not possible for a meeting of protest to be called? Could it not be held under the auspices of some representative body, such as the Chamber of Commerce, or a grouping of clubs and associations which would rob it of any partisan aspect, such as the Union League and Manhattan Clubs or the Republican and Democratic Clubs? Even if such auspices do not seem practicable, would it not be possible to hold a meeting under a committee of public-spirited citizens who could be counted upon to lend proper force and dignity to the occasion? GEORGE H. RICHARDS.

The Great Referendum.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every citizen joining Bryan in brazen clamor for a referendum to the people, before this country shall undertake any forcible preservation of its rights, either overlooks or ignores that in the adoption of the Constitution a referendum once and for all has been had. The Constitution was ratified and adopted by the people of the several States. In that fundamental law it was specifically provided, by the people, that the power to declare war shall rest in their representatives in Congress assembled. What can be more ridiculous than insistence that when a solemn emergency arises for which provision was made by one referendum there must be a second referendum to confirm the first? GEORGE H. BARTHOLOMEW.

Admiral Chadwick's Criticisms.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Admiral Chadwick says we are over-emotional. We play baseball. We live in and for the present, not in and for the virile days of the Revolution or in and for the momentous year 2137. Shocking! Aren't you ashamed to have forgotten your duty to the year 2137? Also, we allow women teachers to exist in the land. He speaks of them as though they were a plague, like the locusts. Do the women teachers make the boys play baseball, or is it the baseball that drives women to be teachers?

I ride every day in the street cars, sometimes in the subway; in neither of them have I noticed that the crowd is effeminate. They cuss as elaborately and with as much virile abandon, they bowl over opposition in as truly manly a manner as do the most manly crew of the most manly battleship that the manly Admiral ever commanded.

Personally, I happen to believe that in answer to a patriotic call boys who have learned geography from women school teachers will respond with quite as good heart as if they had been taught in the most thorough donner-und-blitzen manner half a dozen General Staffs could devise. As to golf, I'm not an expert and never will be; if that doesn't entirely negative my opinion I would remark that probably it's as healthy as drawing plans for military ditches that some one else is going to dig. I don't disapprove of military ditches, you know; it's just that I don't see why we must choose between them and golf. H. F. A.

PIERROT WOUNDED.

Adapted from the French of P. Alberty by Walter Adolphe Roberts.

Pierrot has wakened, stricken in the night—
Wounded and stricken in the pale moonlight!
See, with the mud,
The crimson flood,
That, drop by drop, is fed by his young blood!
A thicket shields his bed upon the ground.
He will not listen to the cruel sound
Of shells on high,
That shrieking fly
And rend the sombre velvet of the sky.

Frail, in his soldier's cloak, as in the gay,
Poetic masquerade of yesterday,
A final boon
Of his loved moon
Poor Pierrot asks in plaintive roundelay:

"If, peradventure, in your silvern sheen
Slumbers Pierrette tonight, and you, unseen,
Touch tender-wise
Her tired eyes,
So that a dream of Pierrot may arise:
Ah, let her see me as the debonair,
Bohemian troubadour of days that were,
Drunk with the strong,
New wine of song,
Joyous withal, although love's fasts were long.

"For she will know her poet has been true
To the fair flag of red and white and blue.
A son of France,
Through all mischance,
He has been proud to be a soldier too."

Pierrot falls silent, as in sudden wrath
A bitter wind brings snowflakes from the North,
Which, lightly pressed,
Cradle to rest
The stricken one. . . . But, see! upon his breast
The crimson blood, still welling to the light,
Has wrought a symbol, mystical and bright!
La croix de guerre
The brave may wear
Shines forth against his shroud of purest white!

CUBA'S FUTURE.

Can She Afford to Invite American Intervention Again?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to correct the erroneous interpretation made of my recent statement to THE TIMES by T. Estrada Palma in this morning's TIMES, in which he says "neither can real Cubans, with the heroic sacrifices of two wars for independence still fresh in their minds, accept Mr. Desvernine's calm assertion as to an end of the Republic of Cuba."

A definition of the legal and political status of Cuba in the family of nations will correctly construe the meaning pregnant in my statement.

It cannot be denied that the United States is the sole judge of whether or not the Government of Cuba is "adequate to maintain life, property, and individual liberty," so that as a practical matter intervention is arbitrary with the United States. The United States, however, conclusively proved, by the intervention of 1906, that she is not arbitrary in her judgment and in the exercise of her conceded right, but will only intervene as a last resort and means to save Cuba from suicide. She has never denied to Cuba the right to solve her own domestic questions. She has only saved Cuba from herself.

Appreciating Cuba's international status, I intended by my statement to THE TIMES, which is now so severely criticised, to suggest that if the existing political crisis is permitted to become more critical, American intervention will not only be necessary for the salvation of Cuba but it will be the duty of the United States.

Can Cuba afford to thus embarrass the United States at this critical moment in American history? Can Cuba afford to give the United States the impression that she is incapable of self-government? The United States has twice intervened in Cuba, and has twice returned Cuba to the Cuban people. Cannot the patience of a nation, as well as an individual, become exhausted? In this respect, I employed the expression "an end of the Republic of Cuba." For the love of Cuba, I pointed to the handwriting on the wall.

Permit me also to state that Mr. Palma's reference to Dr. Ferrara's "personal history" is entirely unjustified by the facts. Dr. Ferrara has been a most potent power and beneficial influence in Cuba. Undoubtedly, he is now following the dictates of his conscience, and has at heart the well-being of Cuba. This must be even conceded by his political opponents, who, although they can criticise his selected means to attain power, nevertheless must admire him personally.

HEALTH WORK HAMPERED.

The Post Office's Adverse Ruling on the City's Bulletins.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The recently published letter of Dr. Charles F. Bolduan of the New York City Department of Health regarding the threatened discontinuance of second-class mailing privileges for the monthly and weekly bulletins of that department calls attention to the danger of a definite setback to the cause of health education in this city.

It so happens that during the administration of Commissioner Ernst J. Lederle the undersigned had occasion to handle the details of the application to the Post Office Department which resulted in the entry of the monthly and weekly bulletins as second-class matter. On looking up the regulations to see if this important advantage could be secured for the health educational publications of the department, we were surprised to find that a specific provision of the rules allowed State Health Departments to enter their publications, but that the only possibility of a city department obtaining similar privileges was to qualify under a general classification coverng scientific and educational organizations. We made the application under that clause, having noticed that health departments of smaller cities, such as Toledo, had already succeeded in entering their bulletins as second-class matter. The application was duly referred to Washington and eventually granted for both the monthly and weekly bulletin of the New York Department of Health.

According to Dr. Bolduan, the Post Office Department now indicates that the application should never have been granted, since the rules (on the present interpretation) clearly imply the exclusion of municipal health departments from the category of scientific and educational agencies. If this interpretation is found correct, the rules should certainly be amended. On the face of the matter it seems preposterous that the highly organized Health Department of New York City, with its constant and commendable efforts to reach a population of 5,000,000 with sound instruction in matter of personal and public hygiene, should be denied postal facilities which are specifically made available to the health department of a State like Nevada, with its population of 80,000.

Short of War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I inclose herewith extracts from a letter of Clifton R. Breckinridge, our Minister to Russia under Cleveland, which present a rather novel view of President Wilson's policy in his handling of the German situation.

WILLIAM J. COOMBS.

[Inclosure.]

Our relations with Germany have reached a very unusual condition. An "overt act" is not to be followed by a declaration of war. The German Government is running amuck, for which the German people should not be held strictly responsible. Hence overt acts are to be resisted as they arise and Germany to be left to declare war on us if that way of meeting the situation is not agreeable to her. This is a very narrow and precarious strip of ground to stand on; but I can see it. Nobody but President Wilson could ever have thought of it. It would be "tit for tat," but no "war." If war is never declared the fighting can stop whenever the aggression stops; and the resultant questions would be fit subjects for arbitration.

Of course President Wilson has made some mistakes. Who would not? But take it all in all and I think the man has been guided by a wonderful sagacity. He has stuck to the fundamentals of American ideals and principles, and amid difficulties and embarrassments almost immeasurable.

No Misunderstanding.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Germans assert that Americans "misunderstand" the submarine warfare. Neither true Americans nor so-called German-Americans "misunderstand." They understand only too well that the German Government will recognize neither law nor humanity in its ruthless effort to lay low that nation which it hates and fears. It is high time that this talk of "misunderstanding" the German should cease. C. H. N.

THE ELECTRIC DRIVE.

Frank J. Sprague Defends the Battleship Experiment.

New York, Feb. 20, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I must gently protest the implication in your editorial article of Monday's issue on "The Experimental Battleships."

You are not only in error when you state that "Mr. Sprague says the department cannot rely upon him, and his authority is the highest cited," but you unduly exaggerate the importance of my judgment and do others of superior experience in this matter, as, for example, Mr. Emmet, a grave injustice.

I have not by word or suggestion indicated the remotest doubt as to the practicability of building and successfully operating an electric equipment of the power indicated. I have, on the contrary, not only stated that these engines and motors can be built, and, if necessary, controlled by push buttons, but I will go further and state that although I am not now a manufacturer I would not hestitate to take the contract for their supply.

There seems to be a quite unnecessary misunderstanding as to certain essentials. It is assumed that there is something insuperable or untried in the project to build a 180,000 horse power electric generating plant, and some difficulty in distinguishing between a unit mechanism of that power and an assemblage of units of the same total capacity. The generating equipment proposed is not a single unit, but is composed of four duplicate units carried in different parts of the ship, each of a size of which a number are already in practically continuous use, while others of larger size are under construction.

Whether one, two or all of these units, each absolutely complete and self-contained, are operated is simply a question of steam supply and distribution, the former the same in amount as that required for any other form of drive of like power, and the latter possibly less difficult for the electric system. There is not an engineer in the United States who is familiar with modern practice who can state with any degree of authority that this electric equipment cannot be built, operated and tested, nor would the American Institute of Electrical Engineers dare to go on record to that effect.

As to the motors, if one of 22,500 horse power can be built, as is certain, eight may be as readily assembled. If one can be controlled two or more may be, and such is the flexibility of the electric system that any number of these motors, from one to all, may be operated in any desired combination from any one or all of the generators.

My assertion in this matter will not be seriously questioned by my engineering brethren. They are, without exception, aware that the system now used on every elevated, subway, and other electric train in existence where the equipment of two or more cars or electric locomotives is under a common control, whether on the urban railway of this city or the giant locomotives of any of our trunk line electrical equipments, is of my creation, and that exactly similar principles of control are applicable to a battleship, if remote instead of localized control should be required. * * *

Now a word as to geared turbines. You speak of the "substitution of the experimental electric drive for turbines for the well-tried geared drive." The phrase is neither correct nor felicitous, and the reference to the geared equipment is, in so far as experience in this country is concerned, hardly warranted, for although there are a hundred or more ships for which electric drive of comparative moderate capacity is under actual construction, there are in the waters of the United States so few that there would be difficulty in finding them.

I have, indeed, said that I believe it is possible to use geared turbines in these ships, but I am strongly of the opinion that the problems incident to the delivery by gears of 45,000 horse power a shaft, so far as the actual experience of engineers and shipbuilders in this country is concerned, present more serious difficulties than would be met by its competitor; and it is safe to say that for every man who is in any degree equipped to express a favorable opinion upon this matter there are a dozen who are equipped to speak with equal or greater authority affirmatively upon the electric equipment.

The question is not whether the electric equipment can be built and operated, for it can be; nor, so far as I am concerned, the possibility of geared turbine construction, difficult as I believe it to be for powers of this size, but broadly whether, granting both drives are available—and I fail to see how any outside expert advice or knowledge can go much further than to affirm this—the department can, should or will permit reference to a lay board of engineers of a vital naval decision embracing the resultant of a number of features on a large number of which few engineers are capable of giving advice, or that, for the purpose of such reference, it shall assume that electric equipment is impracticable.

FRANK J. SPRAGUE.

EXPOSED BOILERS

Tenafly, N. J., Feb. 19, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The questions which you raise in this morning's TIMES with reference to the drive to be used by our new battle cruisers should receive the most thorough discussion by engineers. Not only is it necessary to consider the points raised by you, but the even more important matter with reference to the protection of the boilers must be most carefully examined.

A battle cruiser is a ship having light armor, great speed, and heavy guns. Anything which makes it necessary to increase the weight of the armor either diminishes the speed or compels the use of lighter guns, and any construction which requires the exposure of the engines or boilers to direct gunfire so increases the hazard that a single "hit" will render the ship practically useless, since the element of speed is lost. This element of speed is most vital, and adds tremendously to the cost of construction. Why, then, design the battle cruisers with half their boilers above the water line and exposed to direct gunfire?

Even when the heaviest armor is employed it has been hitherto the recognized practice to place the engines and boilers not only below a protective deck but below the water line. The protection afforded by the water is very much more important than any protection which may be obtained by the use of armor, for a projectile will ricochet on contact with the water, and will not submerge except at the longest ranges, when the last portion of the trajectory is almost directly downward. But the chance of hitting the side of the ship at the longest range is remote, while the possibility of making a "hit" at a shorter range is always present.

The principal objection raised by the suggested use of the electric drive is that the space required compels the installation of half the boilers above the water line, where they are exposed to direct gunfire. This looks like placing "all the eggs in one basket," for with one good hit the battle cruiser has lost the necessary element of speed for which millions of dollars are to be spent. In any kind of a sea fight a battle cruiser expects to be hit, for she has the guns which will destroy, and her speed is not for the sole purpose of running on sighting an enemy.

The building of battle cruisers is not an innovation in naval construction, for other countries have some very good examples of this type of ship, but they have not found it necessary to expose their boilers above the water line. This has been avoided by the use of a gear or by a hydraulic drive, either of which takes up much less room than the electric drive and enables the designer to place all the speed-producing factors below and protected by the water.

MARDI GRAS REIGNS AT DAWN OF LENT

COURT ABOUT THE THRONE

Carnival Spirit Also at Skating Contests on the Waldorf Roof for Benefit of Suffrage.

The Mardi Gras spirit prevailed at most of the entertainments held last night, bringing the Winter season to a close. Society will faithfully observe Ash Wednesday, although the social activities will continue throughout Lent, but in a modified form.

The largest and most picturesque affair, which had all of the gayeties of Mardi Gras, was the ball given at the Ritz-Carlton under the auspices of the New York Auxiliary of the Southern Industrial Educational Association, the proceeds of which will be devoted to establishing schools for the children of the Southern mountaineers.

The program of the tableau, in which the king and queen were crowned, began at 10 o'clock, and was followed by various divertissements, ending with a polonaise, in which the entire court took part.

The coronation took place on a stage at the south end of the ballroom, and the arrival of the royal party was announced by heralds. Miss Zillah Townsend Thompson, a débutante of the season, was the queen. She wore a magnificent robe of white satin heavily embroidered in gold and pearls, a costume which had been worn at one of the famous balls given by the late Mrs. William Astor, and a train of purple velvet and ermine. The king, S. Duncan Marshall, Jr., was decked in purple and ermine.

The Royal Couple's Court.

The royal couple occupied their throne, while around them were grouped their court. Miss Muriel Conkling was the grand duchess, and Marcel Steinbrügge the grand duke. Miss Elizabeth Senn acted as the king's page, and B. Hewitt Parsons, Jr., and Horace Barnard, Jr., were pages for the queen.

The maids of honor included the Misses Constance De Lancy, Adelaide Wilmerding, Elsie Saltus, Loraine Allen, Maude O'Brien, Beatrice Beck, Genevieve Clendenin, and Beatrice Pynchon. Appearing as dukes were Caspar L. Kielland, Raymond Cox, Elbert Jackson, Edward Sykes, Leon Abbott, Rodney Williams, Robert Carrère, and J. Berry Underhill.

There were also ladies and gentlemen of the court, Mrs. William A. Graham and Mrs. Charles J. McLain, appearing as the former, and Monroe Van Mayhoff and Isaac Handy, as the officers. Harmon Bassett and Walter Zahn were the heralds, and E. Vincent Siedle the court jester.

The tableau was arranged by Mrs. James Harman Dinwiddie, the General Chairman, and the divertissements were given under the direction of James Murray Anderson.

A Dance of Sixteenth Century.

First came a court dance of the sixteenth century, La Pavane, which reached its height of popularity during the reign of Henry III. In this were the Misses Eleanor V. Chapin and Clara S. Guthrie, with George Harris, Jr., as the singer.

In a gavotte, copied after the dance in which Marie Antoinette appeared in public, to music composed for her by Glück, were the Misses Helen and Gertrude Carrère and Jack Vincent. Miss Grace Cowie gave a classic dance arranged by Mrs. Florence Fleming Noyes, and Miss Josephine Gibson, Señorita Guerra, and Speed Gaynor took part in other special dances.

General dancing followed the Mardi Gras features, and supper was served at midnight.

The Reception Committee was made up of Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan, President of the association; Mrs. Livingston R. Schuyler, Mrs. J. M. Ceballos, Mrs. Eugene Frayer, Mrs. Edward McClure Peters, Mrs. James E. Pope, Mrs. G. Tracy Rogers, Mrs. Urbain Laroussini, Mrs. William N. Guthrie, and Mrs. James A. Trowbridge. Edward Simmons Hall was Chairman of the Floor Committee.

Ice Carnival on Waldorf Roof.

A smart social event which was for the benefit of suffrage was the Mardi Gras ice carnival at the Waldorf Roof Garden last evening. It was under the auspices of the Junior Campaign Association of the New York Woman Suffrage Party, Miss Camilla Morgan, President. It is a youthful organization, 25 being practically the age limit of its members. Its officers are much younger. The carnival was a gay affair, the girls wearing smart skating costumes, Miss Morgan, the President, being all in white. At 10 o'clock Bror Mayer of St. Moritz, with his partner, gave an exhibition of skating in fancy costume, and at 11 Mrs. Seton Beresford gave a single exhibition, and there was an open waltzing competition for prizes, with a waltzing quadrille and other features. Miss Morgan is also the suffrage leader for the Twenty-ninth Assembly District, the youngest leader in the party.

Other officers of the Junior Association who were present were Miss Charlotte Delafield, Vice President; Mrs. Albert B. Kerr, Treasurer, and Miss Eleanor U. Greene, Secretary, and members of the Board of Managers, Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, Miss Helen Byrne, Mrs. Alfred Ely, Miss Yvonne Matthrews, Miss Edith P. Morgan, Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris, Mrs. Pleasants Pennington, and Mrs. Katharine M. Tweed.

The patronesses were Mrs. A. C. Bartlett, Mrs. Charles S. Brown, Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Mrs. William A. Delano, Mrs. J. Lloyd Derby, Mrs. Sumner Gerard, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. Meredith Hare, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, Mrs. Victor Morawetz, Mrs. Lewis G. Morris, Mrs. Gertrude Parsons, Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Mrs. William Jay Schieffelin, Mrs. Arthur Scribner, Mrs. F. Louis Slade, Mrs. Victor Sorchan, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, Mrs. Harrison Tweed, and Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse.

Preceding the carnival were a number of dinner parties, Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Howland Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. Lanier Winslow, Walter Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Flagg and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Thomas dined with Mrs. Alfred Ely, and Mrs. Walter Damrosch and Mrs. E. P. Morgan entertained.

PALM BEACH CASINO OPENS.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 20.—The gayest ball the season has produced so far was given tonight by Mrs. Edward R. Bradley of New York, opening the Floral Park Casino recently built by Ross Campbell of Philadelphia. An orchestra furnished music all night and at midnight a supper was served from the Beach Club.

The Casino revealed a ballroom that is one of the handsomest in the South, of 100 feet square and with a balustrade running around three sides. Connected with it are parlors, reception rooms, and piazzas looking out on a tropical garden, being the first place of its sort in Palm Beach. Decorations for the ball were green and red, with hanging baskets of palms and potted plants. There was lighting in soft tints around the balustrade and showers of ruby lights from the centre.

The dance, attended by 150 persons, was opened with a grand march, which Mrs. Bradley and Ross Campbell led. Later there was a dancing contest and after supper a butterfly cotillon figure with handsome favors.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs gave a dinner and dance at the Palm Beach Country Club last night, entertaining Mrs. Harry Darlington, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. Russel G. Colt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lorimer Worden, Miss Dorothy Stone-Smith, J. Stevens Ullman, Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley Macomber, Miss Margaret Bennett, John Bradley Kitchen, Dr. Owen Kenan, Miss Ethel Carhart, and Channing P. Wiley.

Gordon Douglas, John Prentiss, C. Nevara, and James McCrea have arrived and are living on Payne Whitney's houseboat anchored in Lake Worth, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney expecting to be down shortly. The men have been shooting for the last two weeks at Thomasville, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Dilworth, who have just returned from a short yachting trip, gave a dinner tonight. Other dinner hosts were Mrs. Julia Batcheldor, Mrs. William Lowe Rice, Robert Swayze, C. H. West, John C. Calhoun, John E. Liggett, Edward B. Close, Lee Thompson, and Mr. and Mrs. Frak D. Frazier.

Mrs. Richard Crocker, who was widely spoken of at the time of her marriage as an Indian Princess, this evening delivered a lecture on Indian music to the Music Study Club, and also sang.

FUNSTON'S MEMORY HONORED BY TEXANS

Body Sent to San Francisco for Burial After Services at San Antonio.

LIES IN STATE IN THE ALAMO

President Sends Letter of Condolence to Widow—Tributes Paid in House.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 20.—A military funeral service, in which regulars at Fort Sam Houston, National Guardsmen at Camp Wilson, and thousands of civilians from San Antonio joined, was held this afternoon for the late Major Gen. Frederick Funston, commander of the Southern Department, whose sudden death occurred last night from a heart affection.

The honor paid the General's memory here was the placing of his body within the Alamo, the first time that historic structure has been used for such a purpose. There, while men from the Nineteenth Infantry formed a V-shaped guard to the old stucco doorway, a file of people passed in and out of the building from 5 o'clock until nightfall.

The only religious services held today were at General Funston's official residence at Fort Sam Houston. There Chaplain Barton W. Perry of the Third Field Artillery read the regular army burial service. "Lead, Kindly Light," played by the Nineteenth Infantry Band, was the sole musical offering.

A procession formed at the house after the service, in order as follows: Police, mounted orderlies, Nineteenth Infantry band, Thirty-seventh Infantry, Battery E, Seventh Field Artillery; Squadron A, Alabama Cavalry; the coffin, carried on a caisson; General Funston's horse, pall bearers, officers of General Funston's staff and of the Southern Department. The procession reached the Alamo at 4:45 o'clock, and the coffin was carried inside by six noncommissioned officers.

General Funston's personal popularity with San Antonio citizens extended to all classes, as was evidenced in the floral offerings, which almost filled the Alamo. Costly floral pieces were side by side with the simple tributes of humble workmen who, hats in hand and with bowed heads, filed into the building.

Mrs. Funston, now in San Francisco, asked that the body be sent there for burial. A special funeral car was taken west on the Southern Pacific train that left here at 8:30 tonight. It was accompanied by Captain Fitzhugh Lee, aid to General Funston, and a guard of six enlisted men.

According to the schedule, the train will reach San Francisco Friday and a military funeral will be held Saturday.

The Texas Legislature at Austin today adopted a joint resolution of respect to the memory of General Funston.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 20.—Major Gen. Pershing issued an order today directing that all flags at all army posts and camps in the Southern Department be lowered to half-staff and left there until the body of General Funston has passed out of the department.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 20.—Following receipts of telegrams from Secretary of War Baker and Mrs. Frederick Funston, which approved a request of the Kansas Legislature that the body of General Funston be sent to Topeka to lie in state in the Capitol, Governor Capper and Colonel Wilder S. Metcalf of the Kansas National Guard this afternoon telegraphed General Pershing asking that if possible he make the necessary arrangements.

The mother of General Funston may be unable to attend the funeral of her son. She is ill and confined to a bed at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. A. Eckdall, in Emporia, Kan.

WILSON SENDS CONDOLENCES.

Writes Mrs. Funston in Praise of Her Husband's Career.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Throughout official Washington expressions of regret were heard today over the sudden death of Major General Frederick Funston. The White House made public the text of the following letter from President Wilson to Mrs. Funston, who is at the Presidio, San Francisco.

The White House, Feb. 20, 1917.

My dear Mrs. Funston:

May I not tell you with what genuine grief I have learned of the death of your distinguished husband? I feel confident that I am expressing the feeling of the whole country when I say that we have lost in him an officer of unusual gallantry, capacity, and loyal devotion to the interests of the country. He had repeatedly in very recent months proved his ability to handle situations of unusual delicacy and difficulty with discretion and success.

May I not express my warm personal sympathy for you in your irreparable loss?

WOODROW WILSON.

Mrs. Frederick Funston, The Presidio, San Francisco, Cal.

Debate on the Army bill in the House today was interrupted by tributes to the memory of General Funston, and the House applauded a half dozen speakers who referred to the services of "Fighting Fred."

Congressman Julius Kahn, ranking Republican of the Military Affairs Committee, disclosed that recently General Funston had modestly discouraged efforts of brother officers to see that Congress rewarded in some way his services on the border.

Mr. Kahn said that General Funston's services during the San Francisco fire and earthquake in 1906 "prevented the destruction of perhaps millions of dollars worth of property and the looting of the business houses of the city."

Congressman Fess of Ohio reviewed Funston's early career and said the General was "one of the representatives of the possibilities of American life."

Congressman Borland of Missouri said Funston's manhood, record, and fame were secure in history. Congressman Slayden of Texas told the House that "the frontier had confidence in Funston. It felt secure while he was on guard."

"In these times when the State troops are so disparaged, when they are spoken of with so much contempt by critics, some of them unqualified to pass judgment, it is well to remember that General Funston did his first great work and won his first great recognition as a soldier with troops from the State of Kansas," he said.

Major Gen. John J. Pershing has taken over the duties of the late General Funston, and will remain indefinitely in command of the Southern Department. Although he stands at the foot of the list of Majors General, it was indicated today that he would be appointed to permanent command of the department on account of his familiarity with the Mexican border problem.

The death of General Funston creates a vacancy in the list of Majors General. This will be filled by Presidential appointment. The promotion will be selective. Secretary of War Baker said tonight that no consideration had been given to the appointment.

General Funston is not to be buried at Arlington. A telegram from Colonel Malvern-Hill Barnum received at the War Department today reads:

"In accordance with Mrs. Funston's request, communicated by General Bell, General Funston will be buried in National Cemetery at Presidio, San Francisco, by the side of his son, Arthur MacArthur Funston. Captain Lee, aid to General Funston, and a guard of two noncommissioned officers and six privates will accompany the remains on special car to San Francisco, leaving San Antonio tonight and arriving at San Francisco at 1 P. M. Friday. Funeral in San Francisco Saturday."

2,500 BUSINESS MEN IN RALLY TO FLAG

"GOLD ONLY AN INCIDENT"

So Says Gen. Wood, Adding That We Must Be Fit to Defend What We Have.

The call to the colors was sounded yesterday at the greatest meeting of the Merchants' Association ever held in the history of that organization. Nearly 2,500 business men of the city overflowed the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor, filled the adjacent rooms, and with their women friends and relatives lined every foot of space in the flag-hung galleries and boxes. The occasion was the luncheon meeting of the Members' Council of the association, and so great was the demand for seats about the small tables that some 1,100 could not get tickets.

Under a canopy of flags the diners, cheering, drank to the health of the President, sat silent when the speakers referred to pacifism, or broke into wild cheers when the necessity of having a trained force behind the flag was emphasized.

The climax came when the speechmaking was finished. Then, with almost one accord, came the thundering demand for a speech from Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Commander of the Department of the East. The other speakers were Mayor Mitchel, Senator-elect William M. Calder, and Martin W. Littleton. William C. Breed, Chairman of the Members' Council, presided.

The meeting, by resolution, pledged its support to the President, affirmed its loyalty, and declared its belief in "the patriotism of the individual citizen, of whatever birth or former nationality."

"As American citizens, resident in New York," the resolution continued, "we declare our readiness to make any sacrifice in defense of those principles of individual liberty and freedom on land and sea, for which this nation has fought three wars, and which constitute the sacred badge of American citizenship. New York wishes to place itself before the nation as unequivocally devoted to the principles of peace, but only upon condition that peace can be maintained without the sacrifice of national honor or principles."

In introducing Senator Calder, Chairman Breed said:

"The merchants and business men of New York, and even some of their great dailies, have been subjected to the charge of commercialism. What worse commercialism could there be than the commercialism which fears to take a part in the struggle, which believes in peace at any price, which does not believe in an act of self-sacrifice, which believes in the principle of letting their own business stand as it is, whether it be on the farm or in the factory?"

The Defense of New York.

Mr. Calder spoke for the nation, but mostly his remarks had to do with New York.

"Today," he said, "laws are being enacted at Washington which will require our city, during the present year, to contribute by direct tax upward of $250,000,000 to the cost of conducting the Government. We are told that these laws are being enacted for the defense of the country; and while we think perhaps we are asked to pay more than our share, in this crisis we do so with little more than protest.

"These are trying times, gentlemen, and I am sure that this audience stands with me in the prayer that we may not become involved in armed conflict. I am not for war, but if things should so develop that war must come, I know that the President will have behind him a united citizenship here in this great metropolis.

"New York, which has served the Republic so well in the hour and in the way of peace, is ready, no less, to give service of the same quality in the hour and in the way of war, if it shall come."

Every man in the room was on his feet cheering when Mayor Mitchel got up to speak for the city. He spoke of the efforts that were being made to mobilize the resources of the city through the police and other city departments, and there was another outburst of cheering when he added that the City Government was better able to meet a war situation than any of the citizens believed it to be.

There was laughter when Martin W. Littleton said that he had been trying to persuade himself that he did not wish to go to war and at the same time convince himself that he did not wish to run away in case of war.

"I have heard," he said, "a great many of the utterances of the gentlemen who are proclaiming the doctrine of peace. They seem to stand upon the basis that war is not a good substitute for peace, and, when they have established that as the proposition which they wish to debate, they then proceed to arraign every other individual who holds a different view, as occupying the position that war is a fine substitute for peace. War is not a substitute for peace. We will join them in their prayers for peace, if they will join us in our preparations for war. And if their prayers are answered we will thank God for the inestimable blessings of peace, but if they are not answered, they will thank us for our preparedness."

"These Are Days of Iron."

General Wood said this was a time for actions and not for words. He spoke with feeling of the death of General Funston, who, he said, was a man of action and one sorely needed at this time. The Mayor, he said, was the voice of the Plattsburg idea.

"These are days of iron," he continued, "such as the world has never known before. Gold is only an incident. It is an age of the survival of the most fit, a rude law, but it governs living things and everyday things at this time. It is a case of being fit to defend what you have, and by being fit I mean both morally and physically. You cannot do it by simple resolutions.

"We are all one in standing behind the President, in standing behind the Government, but we must be all one in bringing about a condition which is rather voiced in the words of the Swiss. 'We trust not to treaties or to promises, but to the justice of our cause, and, above all, to the iron of our swords.'"

Some of those at the guests' table were: Lieut. Commander Louis M. Josephthal, J. Beaumont Spencer, Earl D. Babst, Major Halstead Dorey, U. S. A.; Nelson S. Spencer, President of the City Club; General Thomas L. Watson, Colonel John H. Foote, Fourteenth Infantry, N. G. N. Y.; Drake Warner, Franklin Q. Brown of the National Security League; Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, James Speyer, S. Stanwood Menken, Vice President of the National Security League; George W. Wickersham, William M. Baldwin, Henry R. Towne, William Hamlin Childs, William A. Marble, Samuel W. Fairchild, Jacob H. Schiff, Colonel W. G. Bates, Seventy-first Infantry, N. G. N. Y.; George M. Cassatt, Stephen Farrelly, and Major Gen. Charles F. Roe.

ECKERSON ESTATE TANGLE.

Properties in Late Realty Man's Care Alleged to Have Lost Heavily.

An order was signed yesterday by Surrogate Cohalan directing Mrs. Edith C. Eckerson, widow of John C. R. Eckerson, realty broker and member of the firm of Thomas & Eckerson, who died on Oct. 14 last, to furnish a bond of $190,000 if she wished to qualify as executrix under her husband's will. In the papers presented to the court it was asserted that there were shortages amounting to $190,000 from two estates under Mr. Eckerson's care, and that other estates under the control of Mr. Eckerson had lost from $10,000 to $20,000 each.

The proceedings against Mrs. Eckerson were instituted by R. Dulany Whiting, a lawyer, who was co-executor with Mr. Eckerson of the estate of Richard Denham, who died Sept. 21, 1915. Mr. Whiting said that from Sept. 11, 1915, to the date of Mr. Denham's death Mr. Eckerson was his confidential business manager and attorney in fact, and by reason of that fact was able to withdraw $7,000 of Mr. Denham's funds.

Mr. Whiting alleges that from Mr. Denham's death to Mr. Eckerson's death the latter "without the consent and knowledge" of the co-executor, converted $6,000 of the funds of the estate to his own use. He did not learn of this condition until the decedent's death, he said, and then demanded a settlement with Mrs. Eckerson. He received six one-thousand-dollar bonds and one five-hundred-dollar bond, he said.

Mr. Whiting said that the decedent's life had been insured and that payments on some of the policies had already been made to Mrs. Eckerson. He said further that prior to the decedent's death his mother deeded to him property valued at $85,000. His mother was declared incompetent soon afterward, and the committee of her property, in behalf of all her heirs at law, were now suing the estate of John R. Eckerson for return of this real estate.

Mr. Whiting said that because of the complicated condition of Mr. Eckerson's financial affairs his widow was not qualified to administer his estate, and if she were appointed a bond for $190,000 at least should be required, since Mr. Eckerson had not accounted for $135,000 from the estate of John H. Snyder alone, of which he was an executor. He said that, even if Mrs. Eckerson won the action against her for the return of the property deeded to her husband by his mother when she was alleged to be incompetent, the decedent's entire estate would not amount to more than $100,000.

WON WAR NURSE BRIDE.

Nephew of Princeton University's Head Arrives from Athens.

Paxton Hibben, an American war correspondent, a nephew of President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton University, returned yesterday from Athens on the Fabre liner Patria, with his bride, who was Miss Cecilie Craik of Mobile. Mr. Hibben said that it was difficult to get any news out of Greece because every dispatch had to pass through the hands of five censors. With Mrs. Hibben, in company with three other Americans, he left Athens on Jan. 21. They were the first persons to leave after the Allies had blockaded the ports.

After he went on board the Patria at Naples Italian officers informed him that he would have to be searched. His clothing was examined and he was sponged with some chemical solution to make sure that nothing had been written on his skin.

Mr. Hibben was taken ill in October last in Athens. His fiancée was an auxiliary nurse in the American Ambulance Hospital at Neuilly and had just volunteered for service in Serbia. Instead of going there she went to Athens to nurse him. They were married in the Greek capital after he recovered.

FOR PRESIDENT AND SENATE

Federation of Churches Pledges Its Unswerving Support in Crisis.

A resolution indorsing President Wilson was passed by the Directors of the New York Federation of Churches of 200 Fifth Avenue at their annual meeting last night. The resolution in part says:

"The federation declares its loyalty to the President of the United States in his purpose to maintain the sovereignty of our nation, and deprecates any attempt to interpose embarrassing limitations upon the full exercise of the powers conferred on him by his great office, or upon the Senate in the use of its Constitutional functions. We offer to the President our confidence, our sympathy, and our unswerving support at this critical time in the nation's history."

The Rev. Nehemiah Boynton of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, was re-elected President; the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, Vice President; the Rev. David Baines Griffith, pastor of Edgehill Church, Spuyten Duyvil, Recording Secretary; John Nicolson, Counsel, and Dr. Walter Laidlaw, Executive Secretary.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 20.—Forty Harvard professors have formed a military organization of their own, in connection with the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and are to drill twice a week under Captain Constant Cordier, U. S. A. The initial drill took place this evening in the Hemenway Gymnasium.

Several of the professors are conducting courses in conjunction with the military department. In their ranks are William B. Munroe, head of the department of government; Ralph B. Perry of philosophy, William J. Cunningham of transportation, Henry L. Smyth of mining, Robert H. Lord of history, Alfred M. Tozzer of anthropology, William M. Cole of accounting, and Chester N. Greenough of the English department.

Some of the athletic stars are taking the training, including Coolidge, Snow, Robinson, and Harte of the football forces, Captain Abbott of the baseball nine, and Captain Cabot of the crew.

TO GRAFT SKIN ON CROZIER.

Ordnance Chief Will Undergo Operation for Old Burns Today.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 20.—Brig. Gen. William Crozier, Chief of Ordnance of the army, entered Johns Hopkins Hospital tonight and will undergo tomorrow a skin grafting operation for burns received fifteen years ago, when he underwent an operation in which the X-ray was used. The burns are on the abdomen.

General Crozier has constant occasion to use X-ray apparatus in his work at Washington, it is said; but Mrs. Crozier said tonight that he had not been injured in that way. It was said that portions of skin will be removed from his legs and thighs to be placed on the parts affected.

RECORDS BIG EARTHQUAKE.

Georgetown University Seismograph Indicates a Violent Eruption.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Very violent earth shocks were recorded by the seismograph at Georgetown University observatory this afternoon from 2:34 to 8:15 o'clock. The distance was estimated at 1,900 to 2,000 miles from Washington. The needles of four of the five instruments in the observatory were thrown off by the unusual vibrations.

College Men to Talk Peace.

Under the auspices of the Emergency Peace Federation, college men and women will gather at Cooper Union tonight for a mass meeting prior to leaving for Washington on special trains to take part in a collegiate peace demonstration in Washington tomorrow. Max Eastman will preside, and among the speakers will be Jacob Panken and Professor Henry R. Muzzey. The federation announced last night that there would be in the demonstration delegations from Harvard, Massachusetts Tech, Johns Hopkins, Goucher College, University of Virginia, City College, Columbia, New York University, Cornell, Princeton, and the University of Pennsylvania.

WORLD COURT BODY SHIES AT PACIFISTS

Protests Announcement That Meetings at Same Time and Place Are to be Joint.

PROCLAIMS ITS 'PATRIOTISM'

Prominent Men Cancel Promises to Speak at Peace Rally After League Repudiates It.

The plan of the American Peace Society, which is backed by Andrew Carnegie, to link a two-day pacifist rally, to be held at the Hotel Biltmore tomorrow and Friday, with a conference to be held at the same place tomorrow by the World's Court League, met with failure yesterday when the World's Court League issued a statement disowning any connection with the pacifist gathering. As a result, a number of prominent men canceled their engagements to address the pacifists.

The repudiation by the league, issued by its Secretary, Dr. Samuel T. Dutton, said that months ago the World's Court League had planned a luncheon and discussion, and had fixed on Washington's Birthday as the time and the Biltmore as the place. Subsequently the American Peace Society picked the same meeting place and fixed the same date. Dr. Dutton admitted that the pacifists had been invited to the league luncheon and to the conference, but denied that the league and the Peace Society were co-operating in a joint conference, as announcements of the peace organization had indicated.

It was said yesterday that the Emergency Peace Federation had asked for representation at the World's Court League luncheon and that it was denied. Dr. Dutton said the league would go ahead with its plans regardless of what the pacifists did. Incidentally, he is slated to speak at the pacifist meeting, but he says he will do so as an individual and not as representing the World's Court League.

When notified last night of the action of the World's Court League Dr. George W. Kirchwey, President of the American Peace Society, expressed great surprise. He said Dr. Dutton himself had arranged with him to invite the pacifists to the luncheon and to the joint conference.

"We agreed that we should have a joint discussion," said Dr. Kirchwey. "Of course I have my own ideas about it. I want to say also that Hamilton Holt, Professor Clark, and Dr. Talcott Williams and others, who have announced they will not now appear, accepted invitations to speak at the meeting of the Peace Society. The trouble with some of the pacifists is that they are afraid of being called pacifists."

Dr. Kirchwey added that mention of the World's Court League meetings in the pacifists' program was not intended to mean that the Peace Society was trying to absorb the World's Court League meeting, but was intended merely to notify the delegates to the pacifist meeting of the other meeting.

John Hays Hammond is President of the World's Court League; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler is President of its International Council.

Dr. Dutton's statement, after reciting how the two meetings were to be held at the same hotel, explained that "out of courtesy" to delegates coming from long distances the officers of the World's Court League had invited representatives of the American Peace Society to attend the luncheon.

"It was also proposed," the statement continued, "to hold a short joint conference late in the afternoon, but this part of the program has not been organized, and for various reasons the proposed joint conference may not be held at all, so far as the World's Court League is concerned.

"The World's Court League is not, in the ordinary sense, a pacifist organization. Several of its officers are very ardently devoted to military and naval preparedness, and are members of the National Security League, while many more are members of the League to Enforce Peace.

"The present strained relations with Germany have, of course, created a tense atmosphere, and some persons who dread war, and dread the thought of having the United States get into war, have joined with Mr. Bryan in propaganda for a referendum and other ill-considered projects.

"I wish to make it distinctly understood that the World's Court League has nothing to do with this agitation, and its officers have taken no part therein. The World's Court League has one great purpose: namely, to assist in establishing an international court after the war is over, and such supplementary institutions as may be necessary.

"Plans are on foot whereby the League to Enforce Peace and the World's Court League will come into pretty close co-operation. About two weeks ago, at a meeting of joint committees presided over by Mr. Oscar S. Straus, a plan for such co-operation was prepared. It has been fully accepted and approved by the Executive Committee of the League to Enforce Peace, and will undoubtedly be so approved by the World's Court League at a meeting to be held in the near future.

"The speakers selected for the luncheon and dinner of the World's Court League may be relied upon to voice true patriotism and the absolute necessity of standing solidly by the Federal Government, believing that whatever is done will be done on the basis of right and justice."

Dr. Dutton said the speakers at the luncheon—the World's Court League luncheon—would be Dr. Charles H. Levermore, Professor Paul Monroe of Columbia University, Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews of Boston, Henry Clews, and Dr. Leighton Williams. He said that for the dinner tomorrow night—the World's Court League dinner—the speakers would include James Brown Scott, Special Adviser to the State Department; ex-Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, Dr. T. Iyenaga, who will speak for Japan; Mrs. Anna Garlin Spencer of Pennsylvania, and Bernard H. Ridder, editor of the Staats-Zeitung, whose topic will be, "America United in a Patriotism and Faith in the Future."

At 70 Fifth Avenue, headquarters of the pacifists, it was said that they were going ahead with their meeting at the Biltmore, regardless of what the World's Court League did. They laid emphasis on the fact that Dr. Dutton was one of their speakers and voiced the sentiment that "militarists who happened to be officers of the league" had caused all the trouble. It appeared last night that the solution of the mix-up would be that there would be two luncheons and two dinners at the Biltmore tomorrow.

SOUTHERN GIVES UP BIG MORTGAGE PLAN

SHORTTERM LOAN ARRANGED

To be Used to Renew Maturing Notes and Provide Additional Capital for Improvements.

Directors of the Southern Railway yesterday decided to withdraw the plan provisionally adopted last Fall for the creation of a new blanket mortgage and the exchange of bonds under that mortgage for outstanding development and general mortgage 4s.

The action will come as a surprise to Wall Street, since approval of the plan to create a refunding and improvement mortgage for $500,000,000 was voted at a meeting of the stockholders held on Jan. 5. The company has arranged a short-term loan to renew its maturing notes and to provide additional capital to carry on the plans for the continued enlargement of the physical plant to handle expanding traffic.

After yesterday's meeting President Harrison made the following announcement of the abandonment of the plan:

"The board has concluded that, in the present condition of the investment market, long-term bonds cannot be sold on terms sufficiently advantageous to the company to justify the assumption at the present time of the additional fixed charge contemplated by the plan for the creation of a refunding and improvement mortgage and for the exchange of the development and general mortgage 4 per cent. bonds which has been under consideration. Consequently, although the deposits of development and general mortgage 4 per cent. bonds in response to the circular of Oct. 25, 1916, have been very satisfactory, the board has determined not to proceed at once with the creation of the proposed refunding and improvement mortgage, and therefore the deposited bonds will upon request be released and no further deposits will be accepted."

British Restrictions and American Exports

The restrictions that the British Government has placed on imports, owing to the scarcity of the necessary tonnage to carry them, will not prove an unmixed evil to the United States. Domestic orders for manufactures for home consumption, which have been relegated to second place, can now be filled, and any slack resulting from the falling off of foreign orders made up in this way.

The Wise Buyer.

A piece goods buyer who was asked if he needed some worsteds told the mill agent that he had bought a large proportion of his requirements some three or four months ago. He took occasion to ask the mill man if his early purchase was not a wise step. The mill man told him that as conditions have shown it was the wisest course to buy early and at lower prices. He said: "You were wise, all right, and a lot wiser than the man who sold the goods to you. He could have obtained a much better price by holding off until now."

Price Limits All Upset.

Clothiers who in the past have stuck firmly to their recognized price limits have had these standards all upset by developments in the woolen trade. One clothier, for instance, asserted last season that he never paid and never would pay more than $1.75, but before the season was over he was well over the $2 mark. Other manufacturers accustomed to a limit of $2.25 found their prices boosted over $3. As a general thing, the clothiers have little complaint to make concerning advances because they have learned the reasons why these are necessary. But they have contented themselves with taking smaller quantities at the higher prices to "see if they will go." They have gone, and when prices step a bit higher they make their purchases in the same way.

Milder Weather Helps Out.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that the milder weather in the last few days has made it a little easier for retail dealers to get along with the reduced supply of anthracite resulting from transportation difficulties, but it will take a continuance of relatively high temperatures to bring about any noticeable easing in the wholesale market. Steam sizes in particular are so scarce that there is no possibility of an adequate supply being available at tidewater for some time to come, regardless of weather conditions. As regards car supply, embargoes and transportation troubles generally, the last week is perhaps without parallel in the history of the soft coal trade.

They Are Not the Same.

While more buyers are realizing, as time goes on, that to give the stout women who come to their stores really stylish apparel they have got to make definite provision for them, there are said still to be many who think that they can do this simply by ordering extra sizes in regular models. It is further said that certain manufacturers who do not go in for stout merchandise are encouraging the latter class of buyers in this belief, to their own profit, but the buyers' loss. According to men who know, it is out of the question to make in size 46 a model that looks well on a 36 figure, and have it look the same on the larger one. This, it is said, is due to anatomical obstacles that cannot be overcome merely by adding an extra yard of cloth. On the other hand, several definite changes are required to give the proper "lines" when fitting a stout figure.

Big Season for Men's Fur Coats.

Barring unforeseen events, the fur manufacturers are looking forward to an even larger business on men's fur and fur-lined coats this year than they had last. They expect this increase in spite of the fact that prices are going to be higher on both kinds of coats, due to the higher cost of furs, and, in the latter case, to the increased cost of the outer fabrics as well. Especially good buying of men's motor coats is looked for, this expectation being based on the paucity of retail stocks following the heavy consuming demand of the closing months of last year. Raccoon coats, it is predicted, will repeat their 1916 success, which practically emptied the trade of these goods. Men's coats with fur collars are also in the list of merchandise that is expected to go big.

Says Long Skirts Won't "Take."

American women have stood for a lot at the hands of the principal French dressmakers in days gone by, and probably will in the future. According to a well-known local dress manufacturer, however, Paris faces the possibility of a revolution when it tries to force them into long skirts again. Several of the newest models shown on the other side embody skirts that come very close to sweeping the ground, if they do not actually do so. "One of the things that caused American women to accept short skirts so quickly," said the manufacturer in question, "was the fact that they made them look younger. The same reason has kept short skirts in style for several seasons, and some women would probably take them knee length if anybody would make them that way. It is my opinion that the average woman has got too much pleasure out of looking like her 16-year-old daughter, because of the short skirts vogue, to give them up at once in favor of styles that will make the difference in ages obvious, even at a distance."

Like the Convenience of Dresses.

One of the reasons that have been advanced by leading factors in the dress manufacturing trade as to the continued success of this merchandise for Spring is that women have become so accustomed to the convenience of separate coats and dresses that they are loath to give them up. In other words, the average woman is said to have more to do these days than to change from one costume to another for different parts of the day. According to one of the leading dress men, a woman who wears a dress and a separate coat in the morning is every bit as well dressed for that time of day as the woman who wears a suit. In the afternoon, the first woman has merely to discard her coat to be dressed for the rest of the day, while the woman who wears a suit has to change to a dress to be attired properly for the afternoon.

Gray Goods Trading Keeps Up.

Gray goods buying continued active in this market yesterday, printcloths again contributing a large share of the business. One of the features was the movement of 38½-inch 64-60s at 7¼ cents for delivery in March and April. For 38½-inch 60-52s and 60-48s, 6¾ and 6¼ cents, respectively, was paid. Nearby sales of Eastern 39-inch 56-44s were reported at 6 cents, sales of other wide goods, including 39-inch 68-72s for February delivery, at 8¼ cents. Among the sheetings sold were 56-60 four-yards, which sold at 9 cents. Further buying of 48-square, four-yards was told of at the full price. Closing printcloth prices were:

39-inch, 72-76s...9¼c	38½-inch, 64-64s..6¾c

Shopping for Woolens Pays.

At the present time in the piece goods trade it will pay the buyer, as a seller expressed it, to shop around before placing his orders. Owing to the different methods pursued in selling by the mills, there are a number of examples of price variations on similar goods. The organization that sold up a large percentage of its production at the start of the season now is asking high prices compared with the mills that sold only a very small portion of their product before the opening. In selling large quantities to large operators the mills are accustomed to offer a certain price inducement. Whatever business is taken afterward is small, but the mills have to yield a better than average profit. On the other hand, the mill that aims at distribution gets a fair price from the start, and as a rule finds no reason for making advances, though its price at the end of the season is lower than some competing lines.

Fall Silk Season Opens.

Spurred on by the inquiries of buyers regarding Fall prices, the silk manufacturers have named their figures and are taking business for the new season. On the basis of Spring opening prices, present quotations are all the way from 8 to 15 per cent. higher. This means that the manufacturers have found it necessary on account of rising costs to advance their prices some 2½ to 5 per cent. over those that ruled lately on Spring silks. Values are higher today than they have ever been in the trade, but the increase has come gradually. Taffetas and satins are expected to be the leaders for the Fall season, and the development of crêpes will, according to the best market opinion, continue in a satisfactory way. Fall orders are being received in large volume. It will be two or three weeks before novelty lines for the season will be ready.

TRADE WITH VENEZUELA.

Chances Said to be Good for Keeping It After the War.

Great Britain has lost its grip on the cotton piece goods market in Venezuela, according to Homer Brett, United States Consul at La Guaira, who is in this country on leave of absence. Mr. Brett, who spent yesterday at the New York office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Custom House, said:

"Before the outbreak of the European war American cotton piece goods had little sale in Venezuela. The British goods were firmly established, and the outlook for competing American cloths was poor. This British trade has now been transferred to American manufacturers, and will not easily be gotten back by the British exporters. It is no secret that Venezuela has long been partial to things American, and business men in my district tell me they feel sure the newly made trade, or at least a good part of it, will remain after the war.

"England was not able to maintain deliveries due to curtailment in shipping facilities, while, on the other hand, steamer communication between Venezuela and the United States has not only not been interfered with, but actually augmented. American exporters of cotton piece goods have nothing to fear from European competition for a generation. Attention should be called to the fact, however, that it is useless for Americans to attempt under present conditions to build up an export trade with Venezuela in ready-made wool clothing or shoes, as the tariff duties intended to protect the native tailors and shoemakers are prohibitive."

The Consul said that one of the gratifying features of the shipping situation was that vessels engaged in trade between the two countries had "every inch" of available space taken up both ways, by cargo. Formerly, he said, this was not the case. In addition to the weekly service between New York and the ports of Venezuela, Mr. Brett reported that a steamship line may be put into operation from New Orleans.

"With the improvement of the roads in Venezuela," continued the Consul, "an increasing demand for American automobiles is noted. About 40 cars per month are now being received. At the present time the Government is constructing a road 1,200 miles long across the country, and when this is completed it is expected the improvement will give a great impetus to the use of the motor vehicle.

"Venezuelan coffee, which is of high quality and mild flavor, formerly used largely in France, is now being sent to the United States, the other chief exports to this country being cocoa and hides. Representatives of American leather interests are seeing to it that not a hide that can be spared out of the country is sent elsewhere than to the United States. Seven companies are now in the sugar-grinding business, and a big expansion in this industry is looked for. Most of the sugar is sent here.

"The work of tapping Venezuela's oil fields is progressing, and the companies concerned expect before long to start production. Venezuela is rapidly reducing its national debt, and otherwise getting into an excellent position."

SUIT AGAINST ROCK ISLAND.

Colorado & Southern Railway Asks Payment of $5,980,485.

The Colorado & Southern Railway Company filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday to restrain the Reorganization Committee of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company from carrying its new plan into effect until it had made provision for the payment of a claim for $5,980,485 alleged to be due in connection with the construction of the Brazos line in Texas, in which the two railroads were partners.

An application for a temporary injunction in the case will be made shortly.

Charge Broker with Larceny.

Jeroms P. Goodhart, a broker operating under the firm name of Goodhart & Brager at 45 Pine Street, was arrested yesterday by Detective Flood and arraigned in General Sessions before Judge McIntyre on an indictment charging him with grand larceny. He entered a plea of not guilty and was helld in $3,000 bail for trial. According to Assistant District Attorney Ryttenberg of the Bureau of Commercial Frauds, Goodhart agreed to purchase 100 shares of Magma Copper Company stock at $50 a share from Benjamin Manowich of 115 Broadway. Manowich delivered the certificates the next day, Mr. Ryttenberg said, but has never received his $5,025 though he has made several demands upon the broker.

Spaniard's Estate Escapes Tax.

The estate of Rafael Zamorary de Quesade, the Marquis de Valero de Urria, a Spanish nobleman who died on Aug. 3 last in England, was declared exempt from inheritance tax in New York by Surrogate Cohalan yesterday. While the Marquis owned valuable securities in this country, he had not been in New York for more than twenty-five years. His home for many years was at Bayswater, Middlesex, England. He had stocks here valued at $60,190. He left the bulk of his estate to charitable institutions in England and Spain.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong and More Active—Looking to the Free Resumption of Our Trade.

The public is beginning to show interest in the market again. That and continued covering by traders who were short accounted for the increased activity which was shown on the Stock Exchange yesterday at advancing prices.

Despite the caution from Washington that not too much importance should be attached to the gradual clearing up of the minor items in our case against Germany, more and more people in the financial district have been coming to look upon the danger of war with Germany as a thing which was rapidly passing. In the absence of an overt act of the sort which the American Government will regard as completing Germany's disregard of American rights the Street becomes more disposed each day to retreat from its first assumption that war with Germany was inevitable after our breaking off diplomatic relations. The fact is that the inactivity of our ships has greatly lessened the chance of the commission by Germany of the "overt act" and it has yet to be shown that Germany really means to refrain from carrying out her threat.

To the extent therefore that present optimism is based on the assumption that the danger of war has passed, it seems to be based on slight foundation. It is not certain, however, that that theory, undoubtedly a factor in the rise in prices, has been the main cause of the upward movement. In considering the course which the market is just now taking it is necessary to take into consideration the belief which many people hold that war would not seriously interfere with American trade, but that it might in some directions stimulate it just as the participation of the European countries in war did. Nor can the purely internal factors in the market be ignored; it was the existence of a very considerable short interest built up after the rise which followed the break in diplomatic relations which was the immediate cause of the recent change in the course of prices. The force of that influence steadily diminishes, of course, as the process of short covering proceeds. On the other hand, the speculative public which has been almost entirely out of the market since the liquidation which followed Germany's announcement of unrestricted submarine warfare, is again showing signs of interesting itself in the market. That is a factor which might quickly assume more importance than buying for the purpose of covering sales, but public buying may well be kept within relatively small limits unless a settlement of the international crisis becomes more clearly indicated than it is at present, or until the crisis is brought to the conclusion which until within a few days was almost universally regarded as inevitable.

Some further reports from industrial companies and the extraordinary figures of our foreign trade for January published yesterday were reminders of the huge business which the country has been doing and of the profits which have already been realized without regard to what may follow. They likewise suggest, of course, the huge dimensions of the structure with which freight congestion has been interfering, including that due to the tieing up of many American ships. That, however, is a phase of the matter which seems less and less threatening as more and more American ships venture upon the seas again, and their number, as the market has not failed to notice, is increasing. In the estimation of some observers in Wall Street about the best news which the market could get would be news that American passenger ships were again setting sail. That would not be accepted as proof that the danger from Germany's threat had passed, but it would be regarded as proof that the country was no longer submitting to that threat and that American trade was again proceeding according to its right.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

War Loan Results Create Good Impression on Stock Exchange.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Money continued plentiful today, as the banks have not yet paid over the war loan funds. Discount rates were quiet. Russian Treasury bills amounting to £10,000,000, which matured today, were easily paid.

The official announcement of the result of the war loan exceeded expectations and created a good impression on the Stock Exchange. Further gains were recorded on light purchases. Home funds, Argentine rails, and shipping and oil shares received the most attention. American securities were fractionally higher. There were a few markings of the low-priced shares.

The impression prevails that as a result of Arthur Neville Chamberlain's suggestion that the Stock Exchange consider closing the Exchange for a day or part of a day the committee may close the house Saturdays.

CAN TAX GOVERNMENT BONDS

Must Be Included in Value of Estates, Treasury Holds.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The Solicitor of the Treasury has decided that the value of United States bonds cannot be excluded from the gross or net estate in determining estate tax due.

The question was presented in connection with the liability of estates to taxation under the recent Federal Estate Tax act. It is held that decisions by the United State Supreme Court show that United States Government bonds must be added to the value of estates for the purpose of taxation under the act.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Investment Buying of Stocks.

The substantial betterment of stocks on the Stock Exchange, according to observant brokers, was made under the leadership of investment purchases. Odd lots of the steel and copper shares were said to be in greater demand than any day recently. The brokers were not all of the opinion that purchases for the permanent long account supplied the greatest bulk of the day's transactions, but it was said that the price advances were scored first by this buying, and then timid shorts hurried to get under shelter. The general atmosphere of the Street was more cheerful than in many a day, although a definite reason for the change was difficult to find.

Seeking a Permanent Sale.

The improved investment market was a matter of gratification to the syndicate putting out the new Bethlehem $50,000,000 notes. A member of the group said that orders coming in throughout the day came from dealers who had the notes placed in advance or from consumers direct. In order to make certain the permanent lodgment of the issue with investors, it was stated, the syndicate would not hurry to close the offering. The bankers intend to avoid the sort of sale which the $50,000,000 Midvale Steel and Ordnance bonds experienced a year ago. An enthusiastic greeting from dealers quickly took the bonds out of the syndicate's hands, but too many of them stayed there for weeks, causing a decline of the price.

Paying Cash.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. let it be known in their report for 1916 that the current year would see substantial payments for explosives made in foreign Government securities. The presence of $37,600,000 British Treasury notes in the Bethlehem Steel treasury indicated that various corporations doing business in munitions might have extensive holdings of English and Russian paper. It is believed in some quarters that the sellers of shells, ordnance, and gunpowder have practically been forced to take promises to pay instead of cash frequently in recent months. Inquiries at offices of several companies handling war contracts yesterday brought the reply, however, that cash had always been forthcoming in payment for goods, and where securities had been taken they were investments. An officer of a concern which has handled large Russian orders said that no effort had ever been made to pay for their shells in paper and that no Russian bonds were owned.

Berlin Exchange in Demand.

There was a marked improvement yesterday in the demand for German exchange. Dealers said that the recovery expressed the diminishing likelihood of war between this country and Germany. The selling pressure in evidence for the last two weeks seemed to have played out, and a better demand has sprung up. Marks closed at 70.12 for demand, up 2.00, and 70.25 for cables, up 2.06.

Defraying the Cost of Preparedness.

While no official intimation has yet come from Washington that a Government bond issue will be put out unless war creates the necessity for extraordinary outlays for the army and navy, inquiries have been made by Congressmen which show that the matter is being discussed in other quarters in Washington if not within the Cabinet. In response to such an inquiry a bond specialist yesterday wrote his correspondent that the best opinion he had been able to obtain was to the effect that if a huge issue were announced simultaneously with a declaration of war, upward of $40,000,000 could be sold on a 3 per cent. basis. On the other hand, this man thought that if the financing were held back for a fortnight after the declaration it would be necessary to make the rate 3 1-3 per cent. to offset the loss of patriotic fervor in that time. He advised that if a moderate-sized issue, say $300,000,000, were offered, the rate be made 3 per cent., but that in addition it should carry the privilege of conversion at par into any subsequent loans which might have to be made at higher rates of interest.

Against Excess Profit Taxes.

While subscribing whole-heartedly to the doctrine of "paying as you go" for Government expenses, a banker said yesterday that the proposal to raise $400,000,000 in a single year by taxes to provide for the army and navy program seemed unwise, inasmuch as the program contemplated provision against needs of many years to come. In fact, most of the money cannot be expended for a year or more, or until the work is underway. He favored a bond issue, with an annual sinking fund to retire the issue in twenty years.

Improved Demand for Bonds.

There has been a marked improvement during the last few days in the demand for bonds, the market for which became very weak after the break following the rupture of diplomatic relations with Germany. Not only have prices advanced, but the volume of trading has greatly increased. This situation is particularly true in the case of New York City bonds. One of the largest bond houses in the country reported yesterday that the sales of the single day were in excess of the aggregate sales of the last two weeks. Some of the orders that have been received were for good-sized lots, but for the most part the demand has been for comparatively small lots. The Anglo-French and other foreign Government issues are much stronger than they have been recently.

GLASS COMPANY'S BIG YEAR.

Pittsburgh Gross Earnings in 1916 Nearly $9,000,000 Over 1915.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company earned a gross income last year of $31,580,255, compared with $22,825,075 in 1915. The operating income of $6,886,188 was more than three times as large as in the preceding year and the depreciation charge of $912,502 was $370,000 greater. The company's final surplus was represented by an increase of approximately $2,500,000 in quick assets and the liquidation of all bills payable, which amounted to $1,950,000 at the end of 1915.

W. L. Clause, Chairman of the company, informed stockholders in the annual statement received yesterday that while the outlook was promising the grave international situation rendered a prediction unwise. The company at the end of the year, he added, was in the strongest position it had ever occupied.

How Will Your Mortgage Be Paid?

THE first question the buyer of real estate loans should ask himself is: "How will my mortgage be paid? Will the borrower be compelled to call on other resources to meet the interest? Will my principal be returned to me promptly in cash, or am I likely to be asked for a renewal?"

UNDER the Straus Plan, the investor is sure of prompt payment of both principal and interest in cash. We loan only on properties earning enough each year to meet the interest charge, amortize or pay off about one-twentieth of the principal each year, and leave a surplus.

YOU should investigate the merits of the first mortgage serial 5½% bonds we offer. Call, write, or 'phone today for

LACKAWANNA ROAD EARNS 38 PER CENT.

Gross Business for Year Ended Dec. 31, 1916, $51,580,000, a Gain of $6,794,000.

STOCKHOLDERS GET 20%

Company Produces 9,428,462 Tons of Coal, the Largest Amount in Its History.

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad earned more than 38 per cent. on its capital stock last year, or almost twice the 20 per cent. paid in regular and extra dividends. Its gross earnings for the period ended with Dec. 31 were $51,580,000, an increase over 1915 of $6,794,000, and the balance after fixed charges had been deducted, was $16,200,000, an increase of $5,237,000. After paying 10 per cent. regular and the usual 10 per cent. extra the company had a surplus left of $7,756,000, as compared with the $2,519,000 remaining at the end of the previous year.

W. H. Truesdale, President of the Lackawanna, asserted that 1916 would be conspicuous in the business annals of this country for many years to come by reason of the widespread activity and prosperity in all lines of business. He said:

"The railroads have all been severely taxed to perform the transportation service required of them in handling the business of the country, and their earnings have been larger than in any previous year. This company has enjoyed its share of the prevailing prosperity; its gross earnings show an increase of 15.17 per cent. over 1915. The earnings from the transportation of coal increased $1,111,237, notwithstanding that the rates of freight on anthracite coal from the mines to many points were reduced by the Interstate Commerce Commission, effective April 1, 1916.

"The tonnage of coal produced from Lackawanna collieries and washeries was larger than in any year in its history, aggregating 9,428,462 tons, an increase of 663,205 tons.

"The business and earnings of the company from the transportation of miscellaneous freight would have been larger during the last year had it been possible to make prompt deliveries at points of destination. The shortage of ocean vessels at all seaport ports, congestion at connecting lines and embargoes against deliveries to them existed more or less throughout the year.

"The war conditions in Europe and the demand from this country for foodstuffs and munitions of war of all kinds have constituted the chief cause for this increase in freight traffic and present indications are that this condition is likely to continue throughout the coming year."

The Lackawanna enjoyed an increase of 22 per cent. in express earnings as a result of the shipping of large amounts of commodities by express that would have gone by freight, except for the urgency of the demand.

Guaranteed by endorsement as to payment of principal and interest by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Collateral to be pledged with the Trustee:

$25,000,000 Bonds of the Company (composed partly of First Extension Mortgage 5's, due 1926 and partly of First Lien and Refunding Mortgage 5's, due 1942).

$37,600,000 Short term notes of the British Government, maturing prior to February 15, 1919.

The purpose of the new issue is to finance the completion of certain important and profitable contracts and to add to working capital. The collection of the above mentioned British Government notes will alone suffice to liquidate three-fourths of the note issue.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

As prices advanced on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, the market broadened. Practically from the opening the market improved. Early in the day the copper stocks were prominent on the advancing side. In the early afternoon, United States Steel common, which, in the forenoon, had been somewhat of a laggard, developed special strength. On dealings of nearly 40,000 shares, it rose to 109½, at which it closed.

COTTON DROPS AGAIN

The Market Closes Steady at a Net Decline of from 1 to 7 Points.

The cotton market yesterday did not continue the upward movement of Monday. A slight further advance at the opening encountered scattered realizing on March liquidation, under which prices eased off about 20 points from the best. Although part of this reaction was recovered later, the closing was steady at a net loss of 1 to 7 points. May contracts, which sold as high as 16.44c, broke to 16.22c, and closed at 16.32c.

Liverpool was one of the chief buyers during the first hour, but after the closing of the market abroad, the demand was withdrawn and the market turned easier. Misleading reports as to the action of the American Line, with reference to the cargo of the St. Louis, led to rather a flurry of liquidation which sent active months 10 to 14 points net lower, but a corrected version of the affair soon steadied the market, and closing prices showed rallies of 10 to 12 points from the lowest on covering by early sellers.

Traders were interested in the report that the subject of restricted imports would be considered by Parliament tomorrow. The recent ruling of the Liverpool Exchange has suggested more or less nervousness about securing supplies, owing to an apprehension that the British Government might use ships for other purposes.

Next Friday will be the first March notice day, and brokers are manifesting uncertainty as to the extent of tenders.

WHEAT.

Active covering on the part of May shorts sent that position up 4 cents a bushel in the wheat market yesterday, while the new crop months were 1 to 2 cents higher. Cash premiums were strong at the seaboard, and in the local market No. 2 hard Winter wheat was quoted at $2.07½; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $2.18½; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $2.14, all free on board New York.

CHICAGO PRICES.

CORN.

The corn market was only moderately active. Prices were slightly higher, in sympathy with wheat, but the undertone was barely steady, as the trade seemed to fear increased offers from the country on consignment as the car situation improves. Offers at the seaboard, however, were comparatively small, and the recent advance in cash premiums was maintained. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $1.19, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

OATS.

The domestic cash market for oats was distinctly strong in the East, where stocks have run down to alarmingly low figures. The demand was quite active, but offers were light. In the Western futures market a steady undertone prevailed, but price changes were comparatively narrow, closing ¼c to ½c net higher. In the local cash market standard was quoted at 75c; No. 2 white, nominal; No. 3 white, 75c; No. 4 white, 74½c; fancy clipped white, 76@78c; ordinary clipped white, 74@76c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was strong, with prices again at new high records. Offers were light owing to strength in the hog market, and there was a fairly active demand prompted by strength abroad. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 28,000, estimated for Wednesday, 42,000; Kansas City received 14,000, and Omaha 21,700.

COFFEE.

The coffee market was less active yesterday with fluctuations irregular and the tone rather steadier after the heavy liquidation of Monday. The close was steady, net 1 point lower to 3 points higher. Sales were reported of 46,000 bags, including some further exchanges of March for later deliveries. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 10c for Rio 7s and 10¼c for Santos 4s. SUGAR.

The sugar futures market opened 4@10 points lower, with sales on the call 3,800 tons. The market was irregular, with sentiment nervous and unsettled due to the uncertain spot market and to the disturbances in Cuba, where reports were conflicting as to the result of the revolt there. The close showed net declines of 9@13 points, with sales for the day 23,800 tons. Range of prices:

The market for refined sugar was firm and unchanged at 7.25@7.50c for fine granulated. The labor situation was still bad and refiners were said to be behind in delivery. The continued declines in values on the Sugar Exchange caused an easier situation in raw sugar, and coupled with the fact that refiners appeared to have withdrawn their support, the market at the close acted depressed. Operators bought 10,000 bags March shipment Cubas at 4.5-16c, cost and freight basis, and showed a further interest at that price. Prompt Cubas were available at 4⅝c, cost and freight, but were not taken. Spot quotations were nominal and as follows: Centrifugal, 5.52c; molasses, 4.65c, cost and freight, 4⅝c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 10,063 packages. Monday's decline did not awaken enough demand to steady the market, and with heavier arrivals there was a further decline on top grades of creamery. At the lower figures now quoted the market closed steady, although most buyers are still holding off. The medium grades of fresh creamery have shared somewhat in the weakness, but the cheapest grades are relatively scarce and firm. Held butter quiet. Unsalted creamery still in heavy surplus and weak, especially medium and lower grades. Renovated steady. Ladles and packing stock firm. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, per lb., 44½@45c; extras, 92 score, 44c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 38½@43½c.; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 36½@37½c; thirds, 35½@36c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 44@46c; extras, 42@43c; firsts, 39@41c; seconds, 36½@38½c; creamery, held, higher than extras, 39¼@40c; extras, 38½@39c; firsts, 37@38c; seconds, 35½@36½c; thirds, 34@35c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 43@44c; good to prime, 38@42c; common to fair, 30@37c; renovated, extras, 34@34½c; firsts, 32@33c; lower grades, 30@31½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 31½@32½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 30@30½c; seconds, 29½c; lower grades, 27½@29c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 29c; No. 2, 28½c; lower grades, 27@28c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 5,821 cases; Imports, 2,500 cases Chinese eggs. Domestic receipts are still comparatively light, and although several cars of Chinese eggs came in overland from Vancouver, these goods are clearing readily, and the total supply seems to be no more than needed. The market is fully sustained, but the tone is sensitive and any surplus of stock beyond the immediate needs of the trade would quickly lead to concessions. Very few storage eggs remain, and these are generally working out in the range quoted. Chinese eggs are selling from second hands in 25 to 100 case lots, chiefly at 42¼@42½c. Nearby eggs are in light supply and steady. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 47½@48c; extra firsts, 47c; firsts, 46@46½c; seconds and lower grades, 45@45½c; refrigerator eggs, 40@42½c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 49c; ordinary to good, 47@48c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 46@48c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 46@47c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 47½@48c; gathered brown and mixed colors, firsts to extra firsts, 46@47c; duck eggs, Baltimore, choice, 55c; far Southern, 46@47c.

NEW HAVEN PROFITS PAYING OLD DEBTS

Railroad's Directors Declare Its Finances Are in Satisfactory Shape.

CAN PAY 6 PER CENT. NOW

But $15,700,000 Is Needed for Equipment and Facilities Which Will Save $5,000,000 a Year.

Taking official cognizance yesterday of disquieting rumors set in motion by the recent successive declines in the price of the company's shares, the Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad issued a statement outlining the road's financial situation. The management stated that it had every reason to believe that the $25,000,000 of direct obligations and $18,000,000 New England Navigation Company notes would be paid or refunded when due on May 1.

"The refunding of these for a further period," said the board, "as a preliminary step in connection with the permanent financing of the short-term debt, and taken in conjuction with the company's expectation of selling further securities which it owns with a view to reducing its short-term debt and increasing its railroad facilities, leads the board to feel that the present position of the New Haven, from a standpoint of holders of its short-term indebtedness, is the most satisfactory existing at any time since this indebtednes was created."

Net earnings for the six months ended Dec. 31 last were $4,546,000, or at the rate of approximately 6 per cent. on the stock. This compares with earnings for the full year ended June 30, 1916, of $4,315,000; for the year 1915 of $2,307,000, and for the year 1914 of $268,000. The present position of the company was described as follows:

"The financial position has been steadily improving since June 30, 1914, and is stronger today than at any time since that date.

Since that date it has reduced its floating debt and that of the New England Navigation Company in the hands of the public	$10,520,000
It has paid in cash for new equipment	4,187,000
It has paid in cash for additions to its yards, tracks, terminals, and other facilities, including its leased properties	5,850,000
Total	$20,557,000

"The above has been paid off as follows:

Out of earnings and current cash	$13,257,000
Sale of investments and real estate	7,300,000
Total	$20,557,000

"During the last year a careful study has been made of what the company should expend to produce the most efficient and economical operation, and an expenditure of about $15,700,000 during the next eighteen months has been authorized as follows:

For additional equipment	$1,025,000
For additional freight yards	5,500,000
For additional tracks, turntables, signals, interlocking plants, renewal and strengthening of bridges, and for numerous other improvements, the exact details of which cannot be put down at this time	9,175,000

With these expenditures made, the company estimates that it can save annually about $5,000,000 in operation, of which $1,600,000 would be obtained through the use of more powerful locomotives, $1,200,000 from operation of new freight terminals, $1,200,000 through reduction in car hire, $700,000 from superheating, and $300,000 in various other items. As for dividend possibilities, the management reports:

"A careful estimate of the probable results from operation for the six months ending June 30, 1917, always the lighter half of the year, leads the Directors to hope for a final result of the year's operation of well over 6 per cent. upon the capital stock, including the undistributed surplus of companies which the New Haven controls. This represents what the capital stock is earning and what the Directors, in ordinary circumstances, would use as a basis for dividends, but it is clear to the board that, pending the final settlement of the various questions which have arisen as a result of the decree requiring the company to dispose of part of its assets, all the net earnings should be devoted to provide the additional facilities which the above figures indicate will amply repay the expenditure.

"The company and the New England Navigation Company together own securities the sale of which is required by court decree having an aggregate par value of nearly $125,000,000 and a present value of at least $75,000,000. The sale of some of the securities, if made within the next two years, will undoubtedly represent a substantial book loss to the company.

"It is the intention of the Directors to sell such of these securities as the court decree requires to be sold and apply the proceeds to paying off the indebtedness and to increasing the company's facilities, with the expectation of offsetting by the increased value of the company's railroad facilities any losses which may result from such sales. The present floating debt in the hands of the public, including the notes of the New England Navigation Company, is about $43,000,000. At one time within the last three years it was a little over $56,000,000. The company has on hand a cash working balance of about $5,000,000, and is carrying fuel and materials of a value of more than $3,000,000 greater than that on June 30, 1914, all of these materials and fuel being paid for."

Apply Now for Next Year

THERE will be so few vacancies in this school at the start of the Season 1917-18 that we are opening our lists to applicants some months in advance of our usual custom.

This is due to the fact that last year many applications were made too late to receive the consideration they deserved.

This naturally we desire to avoid by offering full opportunity at an early date to all interested parents.

The School Booklet will be sent on request.

Post Office News Item.

Postmaster Morgan states that it has come to the attention of the department that a large number of damaged parcel post packages originating in the United States continue to be received in foreign countries, including China. It is reported that this condition is due in a large measure to the flimsy quality and insufficient quantity of material used for packing the parcels, due, no doubt, to a desire to save weight and thereby postage. In many cases the cardboard or thin wooden boxes arrive broken, with the contents damaged or scattered in the sacks, so that frequently it is impossible to ascertain to which of the parcels said contents belong.

The packing of parcels undergoing a long sea transit must, of necessity, be stronger than that of parcels for domestic delivery. The Postmaster, therefore, requests that these articles be packed in such a manner as to assure safe transmission to destination.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

August Heckscher figured in another important Madison Avenue deal yesterday in purchasing the old South Church property on the southeast corner of the avenue and Thirty-eighth Street. The property, containing the old church edifice and parish house, covers a plot 98.9 on Madison Avenue by 125 on the street, directly opposite the tall building just completed on the southwest corner, purchased two years ago by Mr. Heckscher from the Havemeyer estate.

The sale of the church property takes out of the market one of the most interesting parcels in the Murray Hill restricted zone. It was purchased subject to the residential restrictions, and at Mr. Heckscher's office it was said he has no immediate plans for improvement. In a certain sense it was a protective purchase for his big office building opposite.

The property was bought from the trustees of the South Church, who have been holding it at $500,000. A few years ago the property was sold to operators, who had plans made for an apartment house. The Murray Hill residents fought the case in the courts, but the decision upheld the apartment house plan as being within the definition of a residence. Then the operators declined to take up the contract and the property reverted to the trustees, who have been anxious to dispose of it.

Hughes & Hammond were the brokers in the transaction. They also placed a mortgage of $700,000 for Mr. Heckscher on his property at the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street.

John V. Cockcroft Buys Dennison Building, Assessed at $240,000.

John V. Cockcroft has purchased from the Dennison Manufacturing Company the old Dennison business headquarters at 15 John Street, just east of Broadway, and adjoining the Chatham and Phenix National Bank.

The property, which is assessed by the city for taxation purposes at $240,000, consists of a nine-story office building, on a plot 25.8 by 124.3 by irregular. It will be taken over at once by the buyer and remodeled into offices and showrooms. Leopold Weil negotiated the sale.

Another Deal on Front Street.

GIRLS CARRY TELEGRAMS.

Western Union Displaces Boys and Patrons Are Pleased.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Feb. 20.—The local office of the Western Union has set a precedent by hiring two messenger girls. One is Miss Amie Ford, 14, and the other is a graduate of New Brunswick High School in 1916.

The girls have made a hit. The President of one of the largest banking institutions in the country asked Manager Fowler today to send no more boys with messages because, he said, the girls were quicker and brighter and did not smoke cigarettes.

Miss Ford does not expect to make this her life work, however. She took the place, she says, to make enough money to go to boarding school. The other girl, who would not allow her name to be used, expects to try for permanent employment with the company.

The girls do not wear uniforms as yet, but the matter is being considered.

The school, a one-story structure, was almost destroyed. A quantity of waste paper and report cards taken from the teacher's desk had been piled in a corner of a room and ignited. A week before the school was set afire, the boys confessed, they entered the building and stole a clock.

MOVIES TO PRESENT RUTH CRUGER'S FACE

SEARCH COCCHI SHOP AGAIN

Detectives Find Door Leading to Vacant Saloon Room, but Get No Clue.

Ten thousand circulars, bearing the photograph of Ruth Cruger, now missing for eight days and giving minute particulars regarding her person and dress, will go out today. Batches of them will be mailed to police heads in large cities with requests that they be posted in hotels and other places, where they will attract attention. Tomorrow supplies will be sent to the secondary cities, and so on until the country is covered. The picture theatres also will be asked to co-operate by flashing the missing girl's picture upon the screen.

The publicity plan was started in this city yesterday. Thousands of the circulars were given to conductors and guards on street cars, subways, and elevated roads, and brakemen and conductors on the New York Central, New Haven, and the other railways leading out of the city.

"We have tried many methods and nothing has resulted," said Mr. Cruger last night, "so we have decided to use publicity. I hope to make the face of my daughter familiar to people, so that each, if she or he cares to help us—and if they be fathers or mothers they will—may be a detective. As it is now, Ruth might be taken past a crowd by her captors and no one would know her unless she cried out."

Confident that something might be discovered if another search were made of the cellar of Cocchi's shop at 542 West 127th Street, Mr. Cruger yesterday induced the police to investigate further. Windowless and damp, the cellar yielded nothing. It was established, however, that exit might be had through another door besides the Cocchi shop. A door in the south wall was discovered. It was forced open and was found to open upon a vacant store, formerly a saloon. An unbroken surface of dust proved that no one had trod the floor in months.

Since the disappearance of her husband, Mrs. Cocchi has maintained an almost belligerent attitude toward the police and visitors. Yesterday she relented long enought to visit the Fourth Branch and say that men, representing themselves as private detectives, had broken into her home at 75 Manhattan Street, at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

According to the police, Mrs. Cocchi said the men threatened her life, demanded she admit that her husband was a white slave agent, and that she tell where Ruth Cruger was detained.

Commenting on this story, Mr. Cruger said that he had no doubt Mrs. Cocchi could aid the police a great deal if she cared to do so. He pointed out that if Cocchi had merely been frightened away, as Mrs. Cocchi thinks, he would take the first opportunity to write and reassure her.

SUES FOR THEATRE PROFITS.

Widow of Byron Ongley Says Husband Wrote "Cheating Cheaters."

Mrs. Amy Ongley, widow of Byron Ongley, playwright and stage director, who was killed on Dec. 23, 1913, by falling from a hotel window, brought an action in the Supreme Court yesterday against Max Marcin, playwright, and Al H. Woods, producer, for $50,000 damages and an accounting of the profits of the play, "Cheating Cheaters," which she estimates at $350,000 to date.

Mrs. Ongley got from Justice Finch a temporary injunction restraining Woods from paying royalties to Marcin until the case is decided.

The plaintiff alleges that her husband wrote a play, "Birds of a Feather," for Woods, and before he had completed it he called in Marcin to assist him on the dialogue needed to develop the plot. She says that Woods changed the name and produced the play after her husband's death and advertised it as the sole work of Marcin. Mrs. Ongley wants Woods to pay her the same royalty her husband was to have received from "Birds of a Feather."

MISS DE WOLFE ILL.

Effects of Typhoid Inoculation More Severe Than Usual.

Miss Elsie de Wolfe is seriously, though not dangerously, ill at her home, 123 East Fifty-fifth Street, from inoculation with typhoid germs, while preparing for duty as a Red Cross nurse in the event of war. Miss de Wolfe belongs to the Presbyterian Hospital unit of the Red Cross, and when the national organization sent directions recently to be prepared for eventualities the volunteer nurses were inoculated, to protect them against diseases that might be encountered in military service.

Typhoid inoculation usually results in severe illness for a short time—practically typhoid fever for forty-eight hours. The recovery is rapid or slow according to the constitution and condition of the patient. Miss de Wolfe was inoculated on Saturday, and on Sunday became much more severely ill than is usual.

It was said at her home last night that she was still weak and might be confined to her bed for several days, but that her condition was not dangerous.

WOMEN PLAN TO AID SUNDAY

Hear Praise of Evangelist and What They May Do in the Cause.

Nearly two hundred women interested in the Billy Sunday campaign, which is to begin here on April 8, met yesterday at the home of Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to plan their share in the revival and to listen to talks by persons on the evangelist's staff. Al Saunders, who was converted in the Scranton campaign in 1914 and later left all to follow Sunday and interpret his work to other cities, was the principal speaker. He told the women of the lasting effects of the work, praised Sunday, and talked of the spiritual effect of the campaign on the workers.

The Rev. James E. Walker, Sunday's advance representative, and George Sunday, the evangelist's son and business manager, also gave short talks. The women's Executive Committee, of which Mrs. J. E. L. Davis is Chairman, has three divisions; the central, under the Chairmanship of Mrs. Simeon B. Chapin; the extension, under Mrs. Warner M. Leeds, and the luncheon, under Mrs. Stephen Baker. The central division will work among girls in stores and office buildings, and to whom the Luncheon Committee will serve a 10-cent luncheon three times a week. The extension work, of which Mrs. William B. Asher is in charge, will handle the campaign among women in factories, laundries, hospitals, hotels, restaurants, and homes.

ARRESTED AT MORGAN OFFICE

Newark Woman Who Demanded $150,000 Said to be Unbalanced.

A well dressed young woman who said she was Eloise Yelton of 17 West Park Street, Newark, was arrested yesterday and taken to Police Headquarters after she had made a scene at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., where she demanded $150,000 which, she declared, the firm had withheld from her father. She was examined by Dr. Hamilton of Bellevue Hospital, who said that her mind was affected and that she needed treatment. Efforts are being made to communicate with her relatives in the South.

According to William Delaney, a special officer stationed at the entrance of the banking house, the young woman has periodically visited the firm during the past five weeks, each time renewing her demands for money. The young woman wore valuable jewels and gave evidences of being well educated.

It was learned in Newark that Miss Yelton occupied a room at the Park Street address, where she did a small millinery business. The house is in the business district of Newark and, although known as a furnished room house, its proprietor permitted his tenants to conduct bsiness in their rooms. Nothing was known about the woman there except that she had had a room for about two months.

SAYS SHIP CAPTAIN SHOT HIM

Master of Steamer Pearl Shell Arrested on Cook's Complaint.

Captain Oscar Lane, 30 years old, of the American steamship Pearl Shell, was arrested yesterday at Bayonne, charged with atrocious assault, and turned over to United States authorities along with five sailors of the crew who are held as witnesses. The arrest of the Captain delayed the sailing of the ship, but with a new Captain she got away in the afternoon with 55,000 barrels of gasoline for England.

Louis Goerke, 30, of 203 South Street, New York, made the complaint against Lane. He was taken to the Bayonne Hospital suffering from a bullet wound in the cheek. According to his story he was engaged as cook on the ship, and when he found another man in his place he demanded his wages. He declared the Captain attacked him and his brother William and shot him.

News Print Paper Inquiry Adjourns

The Grand Jury inquiry to discover whether the high price of news print paper was due to a conspiracy among the big papers producers was adjourned yesterday until Monday morning because Bainbridge Colby, one of the Federal prosecutors, was obliged to leave town. During the day the examination of L. B. Lochhead, Treasurer of the News Print Manufacturers' Association, was concluded and that of George F. Steele, Secretary of the association, was begun, but not concluded. Mr. Steele will resume the witness chair on Monday.

THREE LIVES LOST IN HARLEM FIRE

MAN JUMPS TO DEATH

Negro Servant Saves Lives of Boarding House Guests—Faulty Furnace Started Blaze.

Her arms flung across a trunk in a small, flame-encircled storeroom on the second floor of the boarding house at 23 East 128th Street, Miss Nellie Slater, 60 years old, a music teacher, yesterday knelt and prayed that some one would find her. Downstairs, firemen who had already carried out two dead women, and who had seen a man jump to suffer injuries that later resulted in his death, heard the woman repeating the Lord's prayer and rescued her.

The Dead.

CRAVER, Mrs. ADDIE, 33, a widow; shirtwaist worker.

GROVES, Mrs. ELIZABETH, 45, her sister and also a widow.

KELLY, HUBERT, 33; died in Harlem Hospital from fractured skull.

Injured.

FARLEY, Miss BELLE, 60 years old; in Philanthropic Hospital, suffering from smoke inhalation and burns; not serious.

About dawn esterday a sudden draught spurted flames from the hot air furnace in the basement of the building and, as the asbestos packing was apparently insufficient, the fire jumped to the wooden ceiling. In the kitchen above Cornelia Planes, a negro servant, was asleep, and shortly before 7 o'clock she opened her eyes, to see a patch of flame in a corner of the room. She ran through the house, arousing the people. Mrs. Catherine Barlow and her husband, Max, proprietors of the house, with their two children, William, 14, and Lillian, 12, escaped through the back parlor. Mr. and Mrs. William Kelly, parents of Mrs. Barlow, made their way down the stairs from their second-floor back room, but Miss Farley, who occupied the front hall room on the same floor, was overcome by smoke. Here the firemen found her.

In his room on the top floor Hubert Kelly, brother of Mrs. Barlow, heard the cries, and ran to the stairs. The opening was a square of fire, and he returned to his room. He climbed to the window sill, and stood there as an extension ladder slowly came toward him. He jumped to the sidewalk, three stories below, suffering injuries which later resulted in his death.

After the flames had been extinguished firemen found the bodies of the sisters in a twisted iron bed.

Mrs. Barlow told the police that the owner of the premises a few days ago ordered her to have the furnace repaired. She did so, she said, and directed the workmen to put in plenty of asbestos. Firemen said the space between the top of the heat and the ceiling was too slight.

RECORD FOR ENAMELING CO.

The preliminary report of the National Enameling and Stamping Company shows that 1916 was a record year. Net profits from operations amounted to $2,857,328, compared with $1,199,861 the year before. The balance available for common stock dividends was $2,132,921, equivalent to 13.6 per cent., against 3 per cent. in 1915. The surplus account was increased by $1,319,540, a sum equal to 8.46 per cent. on the common shares outstanding.

President F. A. W. Kieckhefer said in the statement yesterday that prospects for the current year were good. Neither the volume of sales nor the earnings last year, he stated, were benefited to any considerable extent by export orders, although the slackening of imports indirectly aided the company's profits.

GIRL SLAPS BROKER'S FACE.

Miss Lincoln, Arrested, Says Goodwin Promised to Wed.

While clerks in the brokerage office of Arthur H. Goodwin in the Ansonia Hotel were getting ready for the opening of the Stock Market yesterday morning and a number of customers were gathered in the office, a well-dressed young woman entered and, seeing Mr. Goodwin, screamed and rushed toward him. Several attempted to intercept, but she brushed by them and struck Goodwin in the face. Goodwin held her while he sent one of his clerks for a policeman, and when Patrolman Benson of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station arrived, Goodwin asked that the woman be arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

In the West Side Court before Magistrate Corrigan, the woman said she was Pearl Lincoln, 23, of 244 West Seventy-sixth Street, and after pleading guilty, told the Court she had formerly been employed by Goodwin as his Secretary, and that she had resigned after he had promised to marry her. She exhibited a ring which she said the broker had given her.

Goodwin told the Court that the woman's statements were untrue, and that she knew he was married, but had been constantly annoying him by calling at his office and telephoning him.

In holding the woman in $100 bail to keep the peace for six months, Magistrate Corrigan said if she had any real grievance she could find redress in a civil court, but that she would have to desist from annoying Goodwin. Friends furnished the bond.

UNITE IN TEMPERANCE FIGHT

Churches Give Sanction to Campaign of Education.

The Commission on Temperance of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, after two years' investigation of the economic aspects of the liquor problem, has united with the National Temperance Society for a campaign of education.

The Federal Council represents thirty leading Protestant denominations and speaks authoritatively for them. Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council, said yesterday that unquestionably the next big fight against the saloon would be in the economic field and particularly among workingmen.

"One half the population in the 'wet' territory of this country," he said, "lives in the four great industrial States—New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and New Jersey, and one-fourth of them live in six great industrial cities—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston and Cleveland.

"The liquor men are thoroughly organized in this field. They are spending many thousands of dollars and in some cases employing professional labor leaders to conduct their campaigns. These labor men are trying to dominate every Central Labor Union in America."

AT HOME FOR SUFFRAGISTS.

Mrs. Victor Morawetz Entertains at Cosmopolitan Club.

Mrs. Victor Morawetz gave an at home and suffrage experience meeting at the Cosmopolitan Club, 133 East Fortieth Street, yesterday afternoon, which was attended by many women of social prominence. Many women who had never before spoken in public gave their experiences. A number of anti-suffragists attended the meeting.

Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, who presided, introduced Mrs. J. B. Montgomery of Portland, Ore., as the repentant sinner over whom there should be great joy. Mrs. Montgomery became a strong anti-suffragist, she said, sixteen years ago, when Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge of this city organized an anti-suffrage club in Portland. Mrs. Montgomery was Vice President for ten years, then became President, and began to weaken in her anti-suffrage allegiance at the same time.

"But I was not realy converted until we were given the vote and I saw what it did for the women," she said.

Other speakers were Mrs. Ernest Poole, Mrs. John Henry Hammond, and Mrs. Ethel Watts Mumford Grant, who told of her first attack of feminism and the only time it took a violent form, when she was at the youthful age of 6.

OUST A STORE FROM MUNICIPAL BUILDING

COMPLAINTS BY MERCHANTS

Plan for Co-operative Buying to Reduce the Cost of Living Is to be Abandoned.

Because of protests made by organizations representing retail dealers, Commissioner of Accounts Leonard M. Wallstein announced yesterday that the plan adopted about two weeks ago by the so-called Employes' Conference Committee to sell merchandise to city employes at reduced cost would be abandoned.

This decision was reached when information was obtained that the Amalgamated Intertrading Company, Inc., a private corporation of 54 Maiden Lane, to which had been given the use of a room in the Municipal Building, free of rent, at the request of the employes, to deal exclusively with them, was selling provisions, groceries, fruits, and men's and women's wearing apparel to the public generally. Other merchants alleged that this gave the firm with which the employes had elected to deal in their effort to cut down the high cost of living an unfair advantage.

According to a letter sent yesterday to Mayor Mitchel by Mr. Wallstein, complaints were made by the Retail Clothiers' Association of New York, the Hatters and Furnishers' Association of New York, the National Association of Retail Clothiers, and the Harlem Board of Commerce. He investigated the matter and found the situation as represented. In his letter to the Mayor the Commissioner said:

"The employes' committee realized immediately the impropriety of conducting a general business from the Municipal Building, and was astonished to learn that the Amalgamated Intertrading Company, Inc., was carrying on such a business with the public generally from quarters in the Municipal Building which had been assigned to it solely for the purpose of conducting business with city employes. The committee realized further that it would be practically impossible so to control the activities of the corporation in question as to give any reasonable assurance that the sale of merchandise to the public generally from the Municipal Building would be permanently discontinued. Accordingly the Chairman of the employes' committee has since informed me that the corporation will vacate its quarters within a week or ten days from Saturday last."

Commissioner Wallstein added that until the concern had moved there would be no sales to other than city employes. The efforts of the Employes' Conference Committee, however, will not be abandoned, and plans to bring relief from the high prices by co-operative buying not involving the use of city-owned property will be considered.

CONVICTED ON 20TH TRIAL.

Johnston Escaped on 19 Charges, but Was Caught at Last.

John G. Johnston, known to the police under a dozen or more names, and who had been tried nineteen times for various offenses, but never convicted, was found guilty yesterday by a jury before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions on a charge of cashing travelers' checks which were stolen from Emil Robitzek, a coal merchant, of 839 West 163d Street, in the Summer of 1913. He was remanded until Feb. 28 for sentence.

According to evidence the defendant made small purchases at ten of the leading stores in the uptown shopping district, tendering in payment each time a check for $100 drawn on the order of the American Express Company. Mr. Robitzek testified that he had purchased the checks to use while in Europe and, when he embarked, discovered his pocket had been picked. As a defense Johnston declared he had won the checks at a gambling party in Atlantic City and did not know at the time that they had been stolen.

SALMAGUNDI CLUB BUYS.

Lower Fifth Avenue Residence Acquired for New Home.

After a three years' search for a permanent home the Salmagundi Club has purchased the house of the late William G. Park at 47 Fifth Avenue, a four-story and basement brownstone dwelling, covering a plot 39 by 125 feet, between Eleventh and Twelfth Streets. It was held at $115,000, according to J. Irving Walsh, who negotiated the sale for the Park estate, and brought close to that figure. For about twenty years the club has maintained quarters at 14 West Twelfth Street, but they have long been inadequate.

At a meeting of the club on Monday night the choice of 47 Fifth Avenue was unanimously ratified. A fund of about $15,000 in cash was subscribed. Montague Glass donated the proceeds of a story he will write, and eighty-nine artists agreed to paint as many pictures and give the proceeds.
